VOLUME XXXVI

Kept to Date by Cumulative Annual Pocket Parts

Brooklyn, N. Y.
The American Law Book Co.

EXPLANATION

THE object in view in preparing Corpus Juris Secundum has been two-fold: First, to provide a complete encyclopedic treatment of the whole body of the law, which means that it must be based upon all the reported cases; Second, to present each title of the law in form and content most suitable as a means of practical reference for the Bench and Bar.

Corpus Juris Secundum is therefore a complete restatement of the entire body of American Law. The clear-cut and exhaustive propositions comprising the text are supported by all the authorities from the earliest times to date. The supporting case citations, conspicuously set out in the notes, point to all decisions handed down since the publication of Corpus Juris. When the searcher may wish to consult earlier authorities, a specific reference to Corpus Juris makes available all cases back to 1658.

Each title is preceded by a complete section analysis, greatly simplified to facilitate research. Where the scope of any section is such as to require it, a more minute analysis is found thereunder in its appropriate place within the title (see Abatement and Revival, Section 112). The convenience of this method—an innovation in encyclopedic writing—must immediately commend itself.

A concise black-letter summary, indicative of its scope, precedes the full treatment or statement of the law under each section. These introductory summaries, concise and free from interlineation of authorities, have proven of great convenience and value in legal research.

An index is found in the back of each volume covering the titles contained therein, thus providing another convenient means of ready access to the text and notes.

Corpus Juris Secundum is kept to date by means of annual cumulative pocket parts for each volume. This feature of supplementation which has proved so successful in modern digests and statutes conveniently, and with certainty, keeps each title constantly to date through current cases and new precedents.

Corpus Juris Secundum represents the combined product of the highest editorial talent and manufacturing skill. Its many excellent editorial features are fittingly accompanied by corresponding innovations and improvements in mechanical arrangement, typography, and design, which the publisher believes will commend themselves to the profession as representing a new standard in legal publications.

IX. SUPREME COURT

A. IN GENERAL

§ 191. Creation and Constitution

The supreme court was created by, and receives its authority from, the Constitution of the United States.

The supreme court exists by a direct grant from the people of their judicial power.[1] The second clause of article 3, section 2 of the Constitution distributes the jurisdiction conferred by the previous clause into original and appellate jurisdiction.[2]

§ 192. Terms and Sessions

Provision is made by act of congress, Judicial Code §§ 230–232, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 338–340, derived from Revised Statutes §§ 684–686, for the terms of the supreme court, for the adjournment of the court in case of the want of a quorum, and for orders by less than a quorum of the court.

Examine Pocket Parts for later cases.

B. ORIGINAL JURISDICTION AND EXERCISE THEREOF

§ 193. In General

The constitution confers original jurisdiction on the supreme court in all cases affecting ambassadors, or other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state is a party, thus making its original jurisdiction dependent on the character of the parties and limiting it to the cases enumerated.

The supreme court is one of limited and special original jurisdiction;[3] its action must be confined to the particular cases, controversies, and parties over which the constitution and laws have authorized it to act.[4]

The constitution gives the supreme court of the United States original jurisdiction in all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a state is a party,[5] thus making the original jurisdiction of the court in any controversy dependent on the parties,[6] and the supreme court may assume the original jurisdiction conferred on it without any act of congress regulating the mode and form in which it shall be exercised.[7] The jurisdiction so conferred is exclusively fixed, the affirmative grant in enumerated cases being construed as excluding original jurisdiction in all other cases.[8] Congress cannot enlarge the original jurisdiction beyond the cases specified in the constitution,[9] and it is held that such jurisdiction should be sparingly exercised and not extended by construction.[10] The original jurisdiction of the court does not include suits of the United States against persons or corporations alone,[11] nor, as appears infra § 194, is it enough to sustain the jurisdiction in such a case that a state has been made a party defendant. The word "original" in the constitutional grant of jurisdiction to the supreme court is used solely in contradistinction to "appellate," and such original jurisdiction is not necessarily exclusive, so that, as appears supra § 2, it is competent for congress to authorize suits in the inferior courts of the United States in respect of matters of which the supreme court has original jurisdiction, thus making the jurisdiction of the supreme court and lower federal courts concurrent in certain cases.[12]

Jurisdiction distributed

The jurisdiction conferred by portion of section of Constitution relating to extent of the federal judicial power was merely distributed by second clause of section stating in which cases supreme court should have original, and in which cases appellate, jurisdiction.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S.Ct. 39, 308 U.S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

to order a district court to reinstate a previously dissolved temporary restraining order in a proceeding which has been dismissed for failure of the complaint to state a cause of action.[13]

Advisory opinions. The supreme court may not be called on to give advisory opinions.[14]

§ 194. Actions to Which State Is a Party

The supreme court has original jurisdiction of cases in which a state is a party, provided the matter in controversy is properly justiciable and the state possesses an actual interest therein. This jurisdiction is exclusive, except in so far as congress has conferred concurrent jurisdiction on inferior courts.

Under article 3, section 2, of the Constitution of the United States the supreme court has original jurisdiction of cases in which a state is a party.[15] This original jurisdiction is not necessarily exclusive, as appears supra § 193, and congress, in the exercise of its power, considered supra § 2, to confer on inferior courts concurrent original jurisdiction of suits over which the supreme court has original jurisdiction, has enacted statutes under which the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction of all controversies of a civil nature where a state is a party, except where the controversy is between a state and its citizens, or between a state and citizens of other states, or aliens,[16] or, as appears infra this section, text and note 50, in a suit by the United States to recover a penalty for violation of the Federal Safety Appliance Acts, in which latter cases the court has original, but not exclusive, jurisdiction. However, the mere fact that a state is a party is not sufficient to bring a case within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court.[17] To do so the matter in controversy must be properly justiciable;[18] the taking of jurisdiction must be neces-

25 C.J. p 741 note 75, p 859 note 75.

Arising under federal constitution and laws

A suit by a state against a federal corporation is not within the exclusive original jurisdiction of the United States supreme court as a controversy of a civil nature in which state is a party, the action being one arising under the laws of the United States, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the district court.—State of Alabama v. Acacia Mut. Life Ass'n, D.C.Ala., 3 F.2d 697.

Concurrent jurisdiction

The supreme court of the United States and the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction over suits by a state against a citizen of another state.—Delafield v. State of Illinois, N.Y., 2 Hill 159, 26 Wend. 192.

Federal corporation as citizen

The interstate commerce commission and the railroad labor board, when sued by a state as corporate entities created by the United States for governmental purposes, are not "citizens" of any state, within the provision fixing the original jurisdiction of the supreme court.—State of Texas v. Interstate Commerce Commission, Tex., 42 S.Ct. 261, 258 U.S. 158, 66 L.Ed. 531.

Restriction on exercise of right

Conceding that congress cannot take away the right of a state to proceed in the supreme court for such remedy as law or equity may afford, a bill in equity by a state to enjoin railroad companies from complying with an order of the interstate commerce commission will not be entertained, in view of statute requiring the United States to be a party to such suits, and requiring them to be brought in the district court, as in a suit in equity the requirements of complete justice and public policy must be taken into account, and the statute indicates the policy of the United States.—State of North Dakota ex rel. Lemke v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., N.D., 42 S.Ct. 170, 257 U. S. 485, 66 L.Ed. 329.

Mellon, 288 F. 252, 53 App.D.C. 47.

Within jurisdiction of federal courts

The original jurisdiction of supreme court in cases where a state is a party, granted by second clause of section of Constitution, covering extent of federal jurisdiction, refers to cases in which, according to grant of power made in preceding clause, jurisdiction might be exercised because of party's character, and an original suit instituted in federal court; not to those cases in which an original suit might not be instituted in a federal court.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S. Ct. 39, 308 U.S. 1, 83 L.Ed. 3.

25 C.J. p 711 note 73.

Requisites of justiciable controversy

To constitute a "justiciable controversy" between states giving supreme court original jurisdiction, it must appear that complaining state has suffered a wrong through action of other state furnishing ground for judicial redress, or is asserting a right against other state enforceable at common law or in equity.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S.Ct. 39, 308 U.S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

Existence of controversy

(1) Failure of state to proceed with construction of bridge under contract with adjoining state because of suit by citizens presented "controversy between states."—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. State of Indiana, 50 S.Ct. 275, 281 U.S. 163, 74 L.Ed. 784.

(2) On petition by state seeking judicial apportionment among several states of unappropriated water of interstate river, justiciable controversy is presented only if state as sovereign state or her citizens have present rights in unappropriated water of river or if privilege to appropriate water is capable of division, and when partitioned may be judicially protected from appropriation by others pending its exercise.—State of Arizona v. State of California, 56 S.Ct. 848, 298 U.S. 558, 80 L.Ed. 1331, sary for the state's protection;[19] and the state must possess an actual interest therein, as distinguished from the rights and interests of others who are the real beneficiaries.[20] The mere use of the name of a state as a party does not give jurisdiction where the real object of the suit is to enforce a purely private claim.[21] Suits to protect the property rights of a state are within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court;[22] but a pecuniary interest in the controversy is not essential.[23] In determining whether a state is entitled to avail itself of the original jurisdiction of the supreme court in a matter that is justiciable, the interests of the state are not deemed to be confined to those of a strictly proprietary character, but embrace its quasi-sovereign interests which are independent of and behind the titles of its citizens, in all the earth and air within its domain.[24] This principle does not, however, per-

(3) Where it appeared that sole legal basis asserted by four states for imposition of death taxes on decedent's intangibles was his domicile at death in the taxing state, that determination of place of decedent's domicile would determine which of four states was entitled to impose tax on intangibles so far as they had no status different from place of domicile, that relation of decedent to each of demanding states was such as to afford substantial basis for claim that decedent was domiciled within such state and that net estate was not sufficient to pay aggregate amount of taxes claimed by the four states and by the federal government, a justiciable "case" between the states was presented within original jurisdiction of supreme court, notwithstanding no relief by way of injunction was sought.—State of Texas v. State of Florida, 59 S.Ct. 563, 306 U.S. 398, 83 L.Ed. 817, 121 A.L.R. 1179.

(4) The reciprocal exemption provision in favor of nonresidents contained in inheritance tax statutes of Massachusetts and Missouri, under which state of Massachusetts claimed that it and its residents were entitled to immunity from Missouri tax, did not confer any contractual right on Massachusetts or give rise to any "controversy" of which supreme court would have original jurisdiction.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S. Ct. 39, 308 U.S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

Rival but mutually exclusive claims

(1) When by appropriate procedure a court possessing equity powers is asked to prevent the loss which might otherwise result from the independent prosecution of rival but mutually exclusive claims against a fund, a justiciable issue is presented for adjudication which is a "case" or "controversy" within constitutional provision defining judicial power of supreme court.—State of Texas v. State of Florida, 59 S.Ct. 563, 306 U.S. 398, 83 L.Ed. 817, 121 A.L.R. 1179.

(2) Where prosecution of their claims in independent suits by states possessing rival but mutually exclusive claims will cause real and substantial risk of loss to the state whose claim is valid, a case or controversy within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court is presented.—State of Texas v. State of Florida, supra.

(3) Controversy between states as to which is entitled to impose inheritance taxes on estate of deceased person does not present a justiciable controversy of which the supreme court has original jurisdiction where the estate of deceased is sufficient to pay the claims of both states.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S.Ct. 39, 308 U. S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

Effect of failure to exercise power of injunction

The fact that supreme court for reasons of policy or convenience does not exercise power which it possesses to grant injunction and which has been traditionally exercised in like cases between private suitors does not deprive suit between states to determine true domicile of decedent as basis of rival claims of four states for death taxes on his estate of its character as a "case" or "controversy" cognizable by the supreme court in an original suit.—State of Texas v. State of Florida, 59 S.Ct. 563, 306 U.S. 398, 83 L.Ed. 817, 121 A.L.R. 1179.

19. U.S.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S.Ct. 39, 308 U.S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

Recovery of taxes

(1) The supreme court would not take original jurisdiction of proceeding by commonwealth of Massachusetts against state of Missouri and Missouri citizens on theory that proceeding was an action against citizens to recover inheritance tax claimed by Massachusetts, irrespective of claim of Missouri, where it did not appear that Massachusetts was without adequate remedy, but that tax might be collected in other courts.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S. Ct. 39, 308 U.S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

(2) The states of Missouri and Massachusetts were entitled to press their inheritance tax claims against transfer of property held in Missouri under trusts created by deceased resident of Massachusetts without conflict in point of fact or law with the decision of the other, as regards existence of a justiciable controversy between states within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, supra.

Underlying rule

In determining the scope of original jurisdiction of the supreme court in a case to which a state is a party, the supreme court must look beyond the mere legal title of the complaining state to the cause of action asserted and the nature of the state's interest.—State of Oklahoma ex rel. Johnson v. Cook, Okl., 58 S.Ct. 954, 304 U.S. 387, 82 L.Ed. 1416.

24. U.S.—State of Oklahoma ex rel. Johnson v. Cook, Okl., 58 S.Ct. 954, 304 U.S. 387, 82 L.Ed. 1416.

Pollution of air

State has interest sufficient to enable it to sue to enjoin the generation and spread of noxious fumes by a factory in another state, because it is a public nuisance in destroying crops and forests within the borders of plaintiff state.—State of Georgia v. Tennessee Copper Co., 27 S.Ct. 618, 206 U.S. 230, 51 L.Ed. 1038, 11 Ann. Cas. 488.

Withdrawal of fuel supply from interstate commerce

Where withdrawal from interstate commerce of natural gas will jeopardize health, comfort, and welfare of private consumers within a state, constituting a substantial portion of its population, the state, as the representative of the public, has an interest apart from that of the individuals affected, which is not merely remote or ethical, but immediate and recognized by law.—Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. State of West mit resort to the original jurisdiction of the supreme court in the name of a state but in reality for the benefit of particular individuals,[25] even though the state asserts an economic interest in the claims and declares their enforcement to be a matter of state policy;[26] nor is it enough that a state has acquired the legal title to a cause of action against defendant, where the recovery is sought for the benefit of another who is the real party in interest.[27]

A suit must be of a civil nature in order to be within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court;[28] and the court cannot take original jurisdiction of a suit by a state against persons or corporations of other states, where such suit, although in the form of a civil action, is, in its essential character, one to enforce the penal or criminal legislation of the state,[29] or of controversies concerning political questions which are not the subject of judicial cognizance, but which, were the state an independent nation, could be adjusted only through the ministerial department of its government.[30]

Suits between states. The supreme court has exclusive[31] original jurisdiction of suits between states,[32] provided, as appears supra this section, text and note number 18, the issues involved present a justiciable case or controversy within the meaning of the constitutional provision conferring jurisdiction. This jurisdiction differs from that which is exercised in suits between private parties.[33] It is limited generally to disputes which, between states entirely independent, might be properly the subject of diplomatic adjustment,[34] that is, to suits by a state for an injury to it in its capacity of quasi sovereign.[35] It is limited to cases and controversies in the result of which the states are directly interested,[36] and does not extend to suits by one state

Stockholders' liability

State which has taken legal title to the assets of an insolvent state bank being liquidated and to claims against stockholders of the bank by reason of their statutory liability is not entitled to maintain an original suit in supreme court to enforce a stockholder's statutory liability, since recovery is sought solely for the benefit of the depositors and creditors of the bank. Interpleader

Reason for difference

The reason for the difference in jurisdiction grows out of the history of the creation of the power, in that it was conferred by the constitution as a substitute for the diplomatic settlement of controversies between sovereigns and a possible resort to force. State of North Dakota v. State of Minnesota, 44 S.Ct. 138, 263 U.S. 365, 68 L.Ed. 342.

Corporate agency of state

The Passaic Valley sewerage commissioners, created by an act of the New Jersey legislature to construct a trunk sewer to take care of the sewage of municipalities on the Passaic River contracting for the right to use such sewer, is such a statutory corporate agency of the state that its actual or intended discharge of sewage into Upper New York Bay must be treated as that of the state. People of State of New York v. State of New Jersey, 41 S.Ct. 492, 256 U.S. 296, 65 L.Ed. 937.

Interests sufficient to give original jurisdiction

(1) To restrain diversion of water from an interstate stream. State of Kansas v. State of Colorado, 27 S.Ct. 655, 206 U.S. 46, 51 L.Ed. 956.

25 C.J. p 859 note 81 [a].

(2) To restrain diversion of water from lake on which both states border. State of Wisconsin v. State of Illinois, 49 S.Ct. 163, 278 U.S. 367, 73 L.Ed. 426.

(3) To prevent another state from increasing the flow of an interstate stream, thereby causing an overflow on the property of citizens of plaintiff state. State of North Dakota v. State of Minnesota, 44 S.Ct. 138, 263 U.S. 365, 68 L.Ed. 342.

(4) To prevent the pollution, or threatened pollution, of an interstate stream, lake, or bay, by a state or agency thereof. People of State of New York v. State of New Jersey, 41 S.Ct. 492, 256 U.S. 296, 65 L.Ed. 937—State of Missouri v. State of Illinois, 26 S.Ct. 268, 200 U.S. 496, 50 L.Ed. 572. 25 C.J. p 859 note 81 [d].

Suit to enjoin preference of gas consumers in one state

A suit by a state, in behalf of it-

against another for the enforcement of the rights of individuals.[37] This jurisdiction has been frequently invoked for the settlement of disputes as to state boundaries,[38] but it would be impossible to anticipate, and unadvisable to attempt to anticipate by definition, what controversies could or could not be brought within the original jurisdiction of the court.[39] In general this jurisdiction of controversies will not be exercised in the absence of absolute necessity.[40] The threatened injury must be clearly shown to be of serious magnitude. The court will not exert its extraordinary power to control the conduct of one state at the suit of another unless the threatened invasion of rights is of serious magnitude and established by clear and convincing evidence,[41] and imminent.[42]

Actions between state and its own citizens. The supreme court does not have jurisdiction of an action by a state against its own citizens,[43] even though citizens of other states are joined as codefendants;[44] for, as appears supra § 49, the federal judicial power does not extend to a suit brought by a citizen against his own state without its consent.

Suits between state and United States. The supreme court has original jurisdiction of a suit brought by the United States against a state,[45] provided the United States has a real and direct interest in the matter presented for examination and adjudication and is not just a nominal party.[46] The self as a large consumer of gas and as representative of consumers within the state, to enjoin another state from enforcing a law in effect requiring companies handling natural gas to prefer consumers within the latter state to those receiving the supply through interstate commerce, on the ground that it constitutes a forbidden interference with interstate commerce, involves a justiciable "controversy between states," within the judiciary article of the Constitution.—Commonwealth of Pennsylvania v. State of West Virginia, 43 S.Ct. 658, 262 U.S. 553, 67 L.Ed. 1117, 32 A.L.R. 300, rehearing granted 44 S.Ct. 4, 263 U.S. 671, 68 L.Ed. 499, and affirmed on rehearing 44 S.Ct. 123, 263 U.S. 350, 67 L.Ed. 1144.

Rights differentiated
The right of a state as parens patriae to bring suit to protect the general comfort, health, or property rights of its inhabitants threatened by the proposed or continued action of another state by prayer for injunction is to be differentiated from its lost power as a sovereign to present and enforce individual claims of its citizens as their trustee against a sister state.—State of North Dakota v. State of Minnesota, supra.

Rights of individuals insufficient
Where proposed bill of complaint states that the issues are between alleged states, but no justiciable controversy between such states is shown, original jurisdiction of the supreme court cannot be sustained on the theory that a controversy is presented between plaintiff state and the citizens of defendant state.—Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. State of Missouri, 60 S.Ct. 39, 308 U. S. 1, 84 L.Ed. 3.

Distinguishing characteristic
"In this respect the judicial department of our government is distinguished from the judicial department of any other country, drawing to itself by the ordinary modes of peaceful procedure the settlement of questions as to boundaries and consequent rights of soil and jurisdiction between states, possessed, for purposes of internal government, of the powers of independent communities, which otherwise might be the fruitful cause of prolonged and harassing conflicts."—State of Virginia v. State of Tennessee, 13 S.Ct. 728, 148 U.S. 503, 37 L.Ed. 537.

Supreme court rule controlling
United States supreme court has authority to define law and rules governing disputes as to boundaries between states.—Hill City Compress Co. v. West Kentucky Coal Co., 122 So. 747, 155 Miss. 55.

Authority of state courts
The supreme court of the United States has exclusive original jurisdiction to establish boundaries between states, and state courts can determine only where the boundary is, and not what it should be.—McCarty v. Carolina Lumber Co., 182 S.W. 909, 134 Tenn. 35.

Consent to suit
Consent to be sued was given by state when admitted into the Union. —U. S. v. State of Texas, Tex., 12 S. Ct. 488, 143 U.S. 621, 36 L.Ed. 285.

As guardian of Indian rights
United States, as guardian of Indians, is interested party in suit against state to recover swamp land claimed to have been set apart for Indians and erroneously patented to state, so that United States supreme court has original jurisdiction.—U. S. v. State of Minnesota, supra.

Boundary dispute
The United States supreme court had jurisdiction over the subject matter of an original suit by the United States against a state to determine the boundary between the state and a territory.—State of Oklahoma v. State of Texas, 41 S.Ct. 420, 256 U.S. 70, 65 L.Ed. 831.

fact that a state has been made a party defendant is not enough to sustain the original jurisdiction of the court in a suit by the United States against a person or corporation;[47] to do so the bill or complaint must also present a "case" or "controversy" to which the state is a party, and which is within the judicial power granted by the judiciary article of the Constitution.[48] The original jurisdiction of the supreme court does not extend to a suit by a state against the United States without its consent.[49] It does not have exclusive original jurisdiction of a suit by the United States against a state to recover penalties for violation of the Federal Safety Appliance Acts.[50]

§ 195. Actions Affecting Ambassadors, Public Ministers, or Consuls

The supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction over civil suits against ambassadors or other public ministers, and original, but not exclusive, jurisdiction over suits brought by such persons.

The supreme court has exclusively all such jurisdiction of suits or proceedings against ambassadors, or other public ministers, or their domestics or domestic servants, as a court of law can have consistently with the law of nations, and original, but not exclusive, jurisdiction of all suits brought by ambassadors or other public ministers, or in which a consul or vice consul is a party.[51]

48. U.S.—U. S. v. State of West Virginia, supra.

What constitutes "case" or "controversy"

(1) In suit by United States against state and power companies to enjoin construction of dam on navigable rivers without federal license, allegations that state which had granted license challenged claim of United States that rivers were navigable, and asserted superior right to license their use for power production, failed to establish "case" or "controversy" within original jurisdiction of federal supreme court, where there was no allegation that state threatened to interfere or was aiding in construction of dam or directing illegal construction.—U. S. v. State of West Virginia, supra.

(2) That state had granted license to power companies to construct dam on navigable streams was held not to establish "case" or "controversy" between state and United States within original jurisdiction of federal supreme court, in suit by United States against state and power companies to restrain corporate defendants from constructing dam without federal license and to enjoin state from asserting interest adverse to United States.—U. S. v. State of West Virginia, supra.

(3) Fact that state in prior suit by United States to restrain power companies from constructing dam on navigable streams had asserted its interest in development of power under state license did not establish that present suit for same relief, in which state was made defendant, involved "case" or "controversy" with state, so as to give United States supreme court original jurisdiction.—U. S. v. State of West Virginia, supra.

25 C.J. p 860 note 90.

Jurisdiction of federal courts generally of cases affecting ambassadors, public ministers, or consuls see supra § 14.

Purpose of constitutional provision

The constitutional provision, extending the judicial power to cases "affecting" public ministers, etc., was intended merely to prevent any interference with the person or property of such ministers, and the word "affecting" therein must be given a reasonable and sensible meaning in the light of the purposes of the constitution.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, D.C.Ga., 33 F.Supp. 400, affirmed, C.C.A., 115 F.2d 375, certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

Exclusiveness of jurisdiction

The original jurisdiction given supreme court by Constitution in all cases affecting ambassadors and other public ministers and consuls and cases in which a state shall be a party is not exclusive and congress is free to give concurrent jurisdiction to the lower courts.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 375, affirming, D.C., 33 F.Supp. 400, and certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

Allegations as to status of persons unnecessary

If defendants indicted for conspiracy were in fact public ministers within constitutional provision giving supreme court original jurisdiction in all cases affecting public ministers, absence of allegation in indictment to that effect was immaterial.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 375, affirming, D.C., 33 F.Supp. 400, and certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

Persons within rule

(1) An attache to an embassy is a "public minister," or, at least, that which affects him affects the ambassador, within constitutional provision giving supreme court original jurisdiction in all cases affecting ambassadors and other public ministers and consuls, but only as long as the attache is attached to the embassy.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 375, affirming, D.C., 33 F.Supp. 400, and certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

(2) When an attache to an embassy ceases to be attached and returns to his own country, he is no longer a "public minister" and a case thereafter instituted against him does not affect an ambassador or public minister within meaning of constitutional provision giving supreme court original jurisdiction in all cases affecting ambassadors and other public ministers and consuls.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 375, affirming, D.C., 33 F.Supp. 400, and certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

(3) Diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States representing this country abroad are not included within the rule.—Ex parte Gruber, 46 S.Ct. 112, 269 U.S. 302, 70 L.Ed. 280.

§ 196. Issuance of Writs

a. In general
b. Mandamus
c. Prohibition

a. In General

The supreme court has power to issue all writs necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction and agreeable to the usages and principles of law.

The supreme court has power to issue writs of ne exeat, scire facias, and all writs not specifically provided for by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction and agreeable to the usages and principles of law.[52] Its power as a part of its original jurisdiction to issue writs of habeas corpus is considered in the C.J.S. title Habeas Corpus § 69, also 29 C.J. p 131 note 12.

b. Mandamus

The supreme court has original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus in cases where the parties are such that original jurisdiction is conferred on the supreme court by the constitution, and in no other.

In cases where the parties are such that original jurisdiction is conferred on the supreme court, see supra §§ 193–195, it has power to issue writs of mandamus, in cases warranted by the principles and usages of law, to any courts appointed under the authority of the United States, or to persons holding office under the authority of the United States.[53] In cases other than those enumerated in the Constitution of the United States as cases in which original jurisdiction is conferred on the supreme court it cannot, in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, issue a writ of mandamus;[54] but, as appears infra § 199, to warrant the issue of mandamus in such case, it must be shown that it is an exercise of appellate jurisdiction, or is necessary to enable the court to exercise its appellate jurisdiction. A fortiori the writ will not be granted in a case where the court has neither original nor appellate jurisdiction.[55]

c. Prohibition

In the absence of special authority the supreme court cannot issue writs of prohibition in cases over which it possesses neither original nor appellate jurisdiction, but by virtue of express statutory authorization it may issue such a writ to a district court when proceeding as a court of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.

Citizen conspiring with foreign officials

(1) Where indictment charged American citizen and two ex-attachés to Japanese Embassy with conspiracy under Espionage Act, but the ex-attachés were never arrested and the citizen was arraigned alone, there was a complete severance of the case against citizen as though he alone had been indicted and the prosecution was not a case "affecting" an ambassador or public ministers within constitutional provision giving supreme court original jurisdiction in cases affecting ambassadors and other public ministers and consuls.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 375, affirming, D.C., 33 F.Supp. 400, and certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

(2) The supreme court did not have exclusive jurisdiction over prosecution of American citizen alone on indictment charging him and two ex-attachés to Japanese Embassy with conspiracy under Espionage Act, and district court had valid concurrent jurisdiction.—Farnsworth v. Sanford, C.C.A.Ga., 115 F.2d 375, affirming, D.C., 33 F.Supp. 400, and certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 1109, 313 U.S. 586, 85 L.Ed. 1541, rehearing denied 62 S.Ct. 54, 314 U.S. 708, 86 L.Ed. 565.

Injunction

(1) Supreme court had jurisdiction to enjoin dumping of garbage in ocean in view of consequent injury to property and health of citizens of state, although place where garbage was dumped was without territorial waters of United States.—State of New Jersey v. City of New York, 51 S.Ct. 519, 283 U.S. 473, 75 L.Ed. 1176.

(2) City's compliance with permits of harbor supervisor in respect of places designated for dumping of garbage in ocean did not deprive court of jurisdiction to grant injunction, where nuisance resulted from such dumping.—State of New Jersey v. City of New York, supra.

Bill by state to enjoin private suit

Where two states granted lands which each claimed to be within its borders, and the grantees of the one brought ejectment in its courts against the grantees of the other, the latter state could not cause the prosecution of the action in the courts of the former to be enjoined, not being a party to the ejectment proceedings whose injunctions were sought.—State of New York v. (1) Mandamus may be issued by supreme court to any courts appointed or persons holding office under United States.—George W. Armbruster Jr., Inc. v. City of Wildwood, D.C.N.J., 41 F.2d 823.

(2) The authority to issue the writ does not extend to any courts or persons except those enumerated, and therefore does not embrace state courts and state officers.—In re Green, 12 S.Ct. 11, 141 U.S. 325, 35 L.Ed. 765—Graham v. Norton, La., 15 Wall., U.S., 427, 21 L.Ed. 177.

United States consul

Supreme court is without jurisdiction of mandamus proceeding to compel consul general of the United States at Montreal, Canada, to visa a transport or certificate of origin and identity.—Ex parte Gruber, 46 S.Ct. 112, 269 U.S. 302, 70 L.Ed. 280.

In general the supreme court cannot issue writs of prohibition in cases over which it possesses neither original nor appellate jurisdiction;[56] but the statute expressly gives the supreme court power to issue writs of prohibition to the district courts when proceeding as courts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.[57]

§ 197. Amount in Controversy

The original jurisdiction of the supreme court is not affected by the amount in controversy.

The original jurisdiction of the supreme court of the United States is conferred by the constitution without limit as to the amount in controversy, and congress has never imposed, if indeed it could impose, any such limit.[58]

§ 198. Procedure in Exercise of Original Jurisdiction

The supreme court is authorized, in the absence of legislation, to prescribe its procedure, no particular mode having been prescribed by the Constitution.

The Constitution prescribes no particular mode of proceeding in suits originally brought in the supreme court, nor is there any act of congress on the subject; and, in the absence of any legislation by congress, the court itself is authorized to prescribe its mode and form of proceeding, so as to accomplish the ends for which original jurisdiction was given.[59] The rule established is that the supreme court will frame its proceedings in cases of original jurisdiction according to those which have been adopted in the English courts in similar cases, and the rules of the court in chancery should govern in conducting the case to a final issue,[60] although the court is not bound to follow this practice when it would tend to embarrass the case by unnecessary technicalities, or defeat the purposes of justice.[61] A proceeding against a state may be at law or in equity according to the nature of the relief sought,[62] but a suit in equity is the appropriate remedy for determining the boundary line between two states,[63] or between a territory and a state.[64]

Leave to sue. Bills in equity are filed only on leave first obtained.[65] It has been stated that the usual practice is to hear applications for such leave ex parte, although under special circumstances a different course may be pursued,[66] and that ordinarily leave to sue is granted as a matter of course;[67] but there is other authority which holds that leave will not be granted a state to sue another unless the threatened injury is clearly shown to be of serious magnitude, and imminent.[68] Leave to sue may be granted without intimating any opinion

It will be presumed that no state will attempt to enforce unconstitutional enactment to detriment of another state in absence of specific showing to contrary.—State of Alabama v. State of Arizona, supra.

on a question raised as to want of jurisdiction.[69] A petition by a state for leave to file her bill of complaint against another state will be denied where, if filed, it must be dismissed because of the absence of the United States as a party.[70]

Jurisdictional objections. A motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction is a proper mode of objecting when jurisdiction does not appear on the face of the proceedings.[71]

Bill to perpetuate testimony. The supreme court may entertain a bill to perpetuate testimony in litigation pending therein, or to be begun therein.[72]

Parties. In a suit between states parties whose presence is necessary or proper for a determination of the case or controversy in issue and are of such character as to be within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court are properly made parties defendant;[73] but, if persons whose presence as parties is necessary to the determination of the controversy cannot be joined as parties because of their citizenship, that fact does not justify the court in proceeding in their absence,[74] and a case will be dismissed where there are absent parties who cannot be made parties to the suit without ousting the jurisdiction of the court.[75] A misjoinder of parties defendant will render a complaint objectionable.[76] A state suing or sued in the supreme court by virtue of its original jurisdiction is deemed to represent all its citizens.[77] Citizens, voters, and taxpayers of a state, merely as such, without a showing of a further and proper interest, have no separate individual right to contest in such a suit the position taken by the state itself.[78] However, an individual citizen may be made a party where relief is properly sought as against him, and in such case

Ineffectiveness of decree immaterial

Fact that no decree rendered in absence of United States can bind or affect her will not induce supreme court to decide rights of states by decree which, because of absence of United States, can have no finality.—State of Arizona v. State of California, supra.

Apportionment of unappropriated water of navigable river

As respects right of Arizona to maintain bill seeking judicial apportionment among states in Colorado River Basin of unappropriated water of river, contentions that constitutional power of United States to exert control over water stored at Boulder Dam was subject to right of Arizona to equitable share in unappropriated water until such time as commerce actually moved on river, and that congress subordinated that power to Arizona's right by Boulder Canyon Project Act authorizing Arizona, California, and Nevada to enter into agreement as to their relative rights in water of river, could not be judicially determined in proceeding to which United States was not a party.—State of Arizona v. United States

The United States is an indispensable party to any decree granting relief prayed by a bill of complaint by state of Arizona seeking judicial apportionment among states in Colorado River Basin of unappropriated water of river, the United States having paramount power to control Colorado River for purpose of improving navigation.—State of Arizona v. State of California, 56 S.Ct. 848, 298 U.S. 558, 80 L.Ed. 1331, rehearing denied 57 S.Ct. 4, 299 U.S. 618, 81 L.Ed. 456.

Individuals

Individual owners of bonds issued by defendant state, each of which is secured by a separate mortgage of specified shares of railroad stock owned by that state, are not necessary parties defendant to a suit by plaintiff state, as the owner of certain of these bonds, to compel payment and a subjection of the mortgaged property to the satisfaction of the debt.—State of South Dakota v. Considerations of convenience immaterial Considerations of convenience that in suits between private parties reasonably may justify exercise of discretion in support of joinders of parties defendant and of causes of action have no bearing in suit by state against several states.—State of Alabama v. State of Arizona, supra.

77. U.S.—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. State of Indiana, 50 S.Ct. 275, 281 U.S. 163, 74 L.Ed. 784.

Conclusiveness of representation

The appropriate appearance in the supreme court of a state by its proper officers, either as complainant or defendant, is conclusive that it represents all its citizens.—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. State of Indiana, supra.

78. U.S.—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. State of Indiana, supra.

Contract between states

(1) If the controversy within the original jurisdiction of the supreme court is over a contract alleged to have been made between two states to which an individual defendant is not a party, such an individual defendant, merely as a citizen, voter, and taxpayer of defendant state, is not entitled to enter on a separate contest in relation to the merits of the controversy as far as it relates to the making of the contract by the two states and the obligations that the contract imposes on his state, and does not relate to any separate and proper interest of his own.—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. State of Indiana, supra.

(2) Citizens were improperly made defendants to original suit to require state to proceed with construction of bridge under contract with adjoining state.—Commonwealth of Kentucky v. State of Indiana, supra.

he should have suitable opportunity to show the nature of his interest and why the relief asked against him individually should not be granted.[79]

Process and appearance. The supreme court has prescribed rules which govern respecting the process in original actions in such courts, the persons on whom it is to be served, and the time of service.[80] Where the action is against a state, service should be made on the governor and attorney general of defendant state the period of time fixed by statute before the return day of the process.[81] If a defendant state fails or refuses to appear, the court will allow plaintiff or complainant to proceed ex parte.[82] In an action against a state the filing of a demurrer to the complainant's bill by the attorney general of the state may be an appearance and compliance with an order giving such state leave to appear and answer the bill.[83] Where a defendant state appears and pleads voluntarily, it does not thereby conclude itself, but may on motion be allowed to withdraw its appearance.[84]

Pleading. The declaration or complaint must allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.[85] A state asking leave to sue another to prevent the enforcement of laws must allege, in the complaint offered for filing, facts that are clearly sufficient to call for a decree in its favor.[86] Cross bills may be filed, when appropriate, in a suit between states, as in other cases.[87] The rules which govern courts of equity as to the allowance of time for filing an answer will not be applied by the supreme court to controversies between states.[88] After overruling a plea on account of multifariousness defendant has been given leave to demur as well as to answer.[89] Where no testimony has been taken, the parties may be allowed to withdraw or to amend the pleadings under such order as the court shall make.[90]

Burden of proof. The burden of proof imposed on a state invoking the original jurisdiction of the supreme court is much greater than that imposed on a complainant in an ordinary suit between private parties.[91]

Trial. The court in equity causes may ascertain facts without a jury, at its discretion, in the ordinary course of equity.[92] After the taking of testimony has closed, additional proofs may be ordered taken, at the discretion of the court.[93] On the argument of a plea in an action between states defendant has the right to open and close.[94] In determining whether relief is to be granted, and if so what relief, the court, in its consideration of the facts alleged and found, is guided by the accepted doctrines of the common law or equity systems of jurisprudence.[95] In the determination of suits between states, federal, state, and international law are considered and applied as the exigencies of the particular case may require;[96] but the determina-

Adequate remedy at law
In original suit by state to enjoin enforcement of statutes, where in the supreme court was of opinion that there was adequate remedy at law and no danger of irreparable injury shown, the court would consider only the objection that the bill was without equity.—State of California v. tion of the relative rights of contending states does not depend on the same considerations and is not governed by the same rules of law that are applied in such states for the solution of similar questions of private right.[97] Controversies between states are considered in the untechnical spirit proper for dealing with a quasi-international controversy.[98] Objections as to multifariousness, laches, and the like, except as far as they affect the merits, are not considered.[99] In a controversy between states the supreme court must pass on every question essential to a determination of the controversy,[1] even though the solution may involve the determination of the effect of local legislation of either state and of acts of congress.[2] A determination of a controversy between states will not be withheld merely because of objections raised by individuals in one state which the state itself declines to sponsor.[3]

Action for adjustment of public debt. In a suit between the commonwealth of Virginia and the state of West Virginia, to determine the amount due to the former by the latter as the equitable proportion of the public debt of the original state of Virginia, which was assumed by West Virginia at the time of its creation as a state, it was held that the matter was to be considered by the federal supreme court in an untechnical spirit,[4] and that the extraordinary nature of the suit required that the state of West Virginia be permitted, after the supreme court had adjudged the amount due, to file a supplemental answer setting up credits which would materially reduce the sum so fixed and alleging objections to the allowance of interest, although most of the items set up were contained in the master's report and were, at the time of such report, available for every defense if their consideration had been pressed with the assertions of right subsequently made.[5]

Establishment of boundaries between states. In cases to establish boundaries between states, the supreme court, on pleadings and proofs, or on stipulation, enters a decree establishing the line, and, if necessary, appoints commissioners to trace and mark the lines, who are directed to report to the court, and on confirmation of their report final decree is pronounced.[6] The order confirming the report is merely interlocutory and may be vacated on cause at any time before final decree.[7] Where an application for an order for the identification and restoration of the boundary line between two states was made in pursuance of a decree in respect of such line which gave permission to file the application during the term, but the consideration was postponed to the next term when the motion was denied, it was determined that another application at a subsequent term could not be entertained, as the power of the court ceased with the expiration of the term at which the motion was denied, the denial of the application, however, being without prejudice to the filing of a new bill or petition for the purpose stated.[8]

Ownership of river beds. A decree determining the respective titles of the United States and a state in river beds will not prevent the United States from protecting the navigability of any navigable waters.

Municipal law

Municipal law relating to like questions between individuals, although taken into account in determining suits between states, is not of controlling weight.—State of Connecticut v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, 51 S.Ct. 356, 283 U.S. 789, 75 L.Ed. 1416—State of Connecticut v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, 51 S.Ct. 286, 282 U.S. 660, 75 L.Ed. 602.

Water rights

Disputes as to the relative rights of contending states in respect of the use of streams flowing through them are to be settled on the basis of equality of right: this does not mean that there must be an equal division of the waters of an interstate stream among the states through which it flows; it means that the principles of right and equity shall be applied having regard to the equal level or plane on which all the states stand, in point of power and right, under our constitutional system, and that, on a consideration of the pertinent laws of the contending states and all other relevant facts, the court will determine what is an equitable apportionment of the use of such waters. —State of Connecticut v. of the United States, but such a provision may be properly included in the decree so as to avoid any misapprehension as to its effect.[9]

Costs. The court has power to award or refuse costs, and in an equity case may, in its discretion, award them against either party,[10] or each party may be ordered to pay its own costs.[11] In suits between states the costs are usually divided equally between the parties.[12]

Enforcement of decision. The rule that judicial power essentially involves the right to enforce the results of its exercise applies to the exercise by the supreme court of original jurisdiction in controversies between the states.[13]

C. APPELLATE JURISDICTION AND EXERCISE THEREOF

1. Source and Extent of Appellate Jurisdiction

§ 199. In General

The appellate jurisdiction of the United States supreme court is derived from the federal Constitution and may be limited and regulated by acts of congress.

Except in cases affecting ambassadors and other public ministers and consuls and those in which a state is a party, in which cases the supreme court may exercise original jurisdiction, it has, under article 3 § 2 clause 2 of the Constitution, appellate jurisdiction both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the congress shall make, in all the other cases to which, under the constitution, the judicial power of the United States extends.[14] Such appellate powers as are given to the supreme court by the federal Constitution are limited and regulated by acts of congress[15] and must be exercised in accordance with such regulations, and no appellate jurisdiction in a given case can be exercised by the supreme court if congress has made no provision therefor.[16] By statute, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 344–350, congress has specified the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, and the effect is to deny by implication all appellate jurisdiction which is not affirmatively conferred.[17] Congress may give the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in respect of matters as to which, under the constitution, it has original jurisdiction,[18] but jurisdiction granted as original cannot be exercised as appellate.[19]

Existence of actual controversy. The existence of an actual controversy is an essential requisite to the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.[20] It is not within the province of the court to decide abstract, hypothetical, or moot questions, disconnected from the granting of actual relief.[21] If, pending an appeal, an event occurs which renders it impossible for the court to grant any relief, or renders a decision unnecessary, the question becomes moot.[22]

Amendment of statute

Whether an order for report was based on Philippine Act 2307 § 16

The question may be rendered moot by the act of the appellant[23] or of the appellee,[24] or of both parties.[25] A question may become moot by operation of law,[26] or by lapse of time,[27] or by the execution of an order of the inferior court.[28]

Where all substantial interest in the controversy has been parted with or extinguished, the court will not hear the appeal merely to determine the right to costs.[29]

Jurisdiction of inferior court. If an inferior court has no jurisdiction of a cause, an appeal from its decision confers no jurisdiction on the supreme court of the merits of the controversy but the court may in such cases entertain an appeal for the purpose of reversing a judgment or order for want of jurisdiction and dismissing the case or directing its dismissal by the lower court,[30] and the court may render a judgment for costs.[31]

Consent of parties. Mere agreement or consent of the parties cannot confer on the supreme court jurisdiction to affirm or reverse a judgment of an inferior or state court.[32]

Determination of jurisdiction. The supreme court must itself determine its appellate jurisdiction and it will not ignore a want of jurisdiction because the question is not raised or discussed by either party.[33]

Mandamus. Under its appellate jurisdiction and (e), invalid in wrongfully delegating power, contrary to Organic Act c 1369 [32 U.S.St. at L. p 691], becomes a moot question, where, pending appeal from judgment annulling the order, the statute was amended to provide for the report and the details thereof, thus rendering the order inoperative.—Board of Public Utility Com'rs v. Compania General de Tabacos de Filipinas, Philippine, 39 S.Ct. 332, 249 U.S. 425, 63 L.Ed. 687.

War rendering question moot

An appeal from a decree presenting the question whether the Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890 was violated by a combination of American, British, and German steamship companies to monopolize ocean carriage presented a moot question by reason of the European War.—U. Sale of land in controversy

Where, pending a writ of error from the United States supreme court to review a judgment in a landlord's suit to recover possession of premises, the landlord sold the premises, the case became moot, as a judgment in his favor would not give him possession, and the merits of the case would not be decided.—Heitmuller v. Stokes, supra.

Regard for substance rather than form

In determining whether litigation presents case within its appellate jurisdiction, supreme court will look to substance, not form.—Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Wallace, Tenn.,

in aid thereof the United States supreme court has power to issue writs of mandamus.[34] Thus the court may issue the writ to compel an inferior federal court to grant an appeal[35] or to sign a bill of exceptions in a case tried before it.[36] The supreme court may, in a proper case, issue a writ of mandamus requiring a single judge to comply with a statute requiring him to call two other judges for the hearing and determination of an application for an interlocutory injunction.[37] The existence of ultimate discretionary jurisdiction in the supreme court to review the cause gives it power to issue the writ;[38] such ultimate discretionary jurisdiction enables the court to issue the writ to an inferior court although the case is one in respect of which direct appellate jurisdiction is vested in an intermediate appellate court.[39]

Federal courts generally see supra § 14.
Supreme court in exercise of original jurisdiction see supra § 196.

Absence of original jurisdiction
To warrant the issue of a mandamus by the supreme court in cases where original jurisdiction has not been conferred by the constitution, it must be shown to be an exercise of appellate jurisdiction, or to be necessary to enable the court to exercise its appellate jurisdiction.—Ex parte United States, Pa., 53 S.Ct. 129, 287 U.S. 241, 77 L.Ed. 283—Marbury v. Madison, D.C., 1 Cranch 137, 2 L.Ed. 60.

Existence of other remedy
The supreme court will not issue a writ of mandamus where remedy by injunctive relief is available.—Ex parte Baldwin, 54 S.Ct. 551, 291 U.S. 610, 78 L.Ed. 1020.

Return to order to show cause as answer
In granting motion for leave to file petition for mandamus in original proceeding to compel vacation of order referring cases to a master for trial, the supreme court treated the return to the order to show cause as an answer to the petition, and granted the relief sought.—McCullough v. Cosgrave, Cal., 60 S.Ct. 703, 309 U.S. 634, 84 L.Ed. 992.

Effect of refusal to issue
United States supreme court's denial of mandamus to compel assembly of three-judge court in suit to enjoin drainage district commissioners from transmitting lists of lands for assessment under state statute was conclusive authority on circuit court of appeals that statute providing for three-judge court was inapplicable.—Everglades Drainage Dist. v. Florida Ranch & Dairy Corporation, C.C.A.Fla., 74 F.2d 914, rehearing denied 75 F.2d 1013.

(2) Under rule of civil procedure authorizing reference to master only under exceptional conditions, the United States supreme court entertained original proceeding for mandamus against district judge, and directed district court to vacate order referring cases to a master, and to try the cases in due course without postponement of trial to that of other cases not entitled to preference, but with such arrangement as respects particular judge conducting trial as might be convenient.—McCullough v. a. Nature and Form of Remedy

Proceedings in cases taken to the United States supreme court are governed by acts of congress, the common law, and ancient English statutes.

Proceedings in cases taken to the United States supreme court are governed entirely by acts of congress, the common law, and the ancient English statutes.[40] Decisions are reviewed by the supreme court according to the methods prescribed by statutes[41] and the modes of reviewing decisions of particular courts are discussed infra § 203 et seq. Review is usually by appeal or certiorari; formerly, in certain cases review was had by writ of error but the writ has been abolished by Act Jan. 31, 1928, c. 14 § 1, 45 U.S.St. at L. p 54, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861b, and all relief which was obtained by writ of error is obtainable by appeal.[42] Where a statute confers the right of appeal in certain cases, it impliedly negatives the existence of the right in other cases.[43]

Congress may by appropriate legislation take away the right of appeal to the supreme court.[44] A statute which provides for an appeal or other proceeding for review to or from another federal court is to be regarded, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intention, as a repeal of any previous statute providing for an appeal or other proceeding to or from the supreme court.[45] Unless rights as to pending appeals are preserved by a saving clause,[46] the right of appeal may be taken away by the repeal of the statute giving it even as to causes which have been previously appealed.[47]

Pendency of another proceeding. The supreme court may decline to review a cause when proceedings for review are already pending in a circuit court of appeals.[48] However, where the right to appeal to the two courts is given, and proceedings for review are commenced in the supreme court and

42. Appeal as matter of right
An appeal, in a proper case, is a matter of right, and its allowance is in reality nothing more than the doing of those things which are necessary to give appellant the means of invoking the jurisdiction of the court.—Brown v. McConnell, Wash., 8 S.Ct. 559, 124 U.S. 489, 31 L.Ed. 495.

(1) A writ of error was an original writ.—Nations v. Johnson, Tex., 24 How., U.S., 195, 16 L.Ed. 628.
(2) The writ lay only in actions at law and proceedings which were according to the course of the common law and did not lie in suits in equity; in equity cases the mode of review was by appeal.—Tiglao v. Insular Government of Philippine Islands, Philippine, 30 S.Ct. 129, 215 U.S. 410, 54 L.Ed. 257—Metropolitan R. Co. v. MacFarland, D.C., 25 S. (3) Under the Judiciary Act the effect of a writ of error was simply to bring the record into court and submit the judgment of the inferior tribunal to reëxamination; it did not in any manner act on the parties; it acted only on the record; it removed the record into the supervising tribunal.—Nations v. Johnson, supra—Cohens v. Commonwealth of Virginia, Va., 6 Wheat., U.S., 264, 5 L.Ed. 257.
(4) The writ was a continuation of the original litigation rather than the commencement of a new suit or proceeding.—Nations v. Johnson, supra.
(5) The writ did not bring up questions of fact for appellate review, but only questions of law.—Stanley v. Board of Sup'rs of Albany County, N.Y., 7 S.Ct. 1234, 121 U.S. 535, 30 L.Ed. 1000—3 C.J. p 306 note 78 [b], p 307 notes 79, 84, p 315 note 36 [b].

Prosecution of both appeal and writ of error
(1) Where there was considerable doubt as to the proper remedy to be pursued on review, a party could prosecute an appeal and writ of error in the same case and at the same time.—Hurst v. Hollingsworth, Tex., 94 U.S. 111, 24 L.Ed. 31—3 C.J. p 343 note 73.
(2) Under Act Sept. 6, 1916, § 4, Comp.St. § 1649a, requiring an appellate court, when a mistake as to the method of review occurs, to disregard it and take the action which would be appropriate, if the proper appellate procedure had been followed, it was unnecessary in cases of doubt both to appeal and bring error.—Essgee Co. of China v. U. S., N.Y., 43 S.Ct. 514, 262 U.S. 151, 67 L.Ed. 917.

Cross writ of error
A party, who escaped reversal of the judgment and remand by permission to file a remission of excessive amount, could not maintain cross-writ of error from federal supreme court.—Woodworth v. Chesbrough, Mich., 37 S.Ct. 583, 244 U.S. 79, 61 L.Ed. 1005, dismissing error Chesbrough v. Woodworth, 37 S.Ct. 579, 244 U.S. 72, 61 L.Ed. 1000, which affirmed 221 F. 912, 137 C.C.A. 482.

then in the circuit court of appeals, the supreme court, in view of the uncertainty which sometimes attends the determination as to which is the proper appellate tribunal, may proceed to determine the case on its merits.[49]

Existence of other remedies. The existence of another remedy may preclude a review by the supreme court or the review of a particular question,[50] as where there is a remedy in the trial court.[51]

Successive proceedings. Where a party has brought proceedings for review and such proceedings have been determined, he may not again take the same case up for review for the purpose of having determined points which were decided, or might have been decided, in the prior proceeding,[52] although where there have been new proceedings in the case a second appellate proceeding may be prosecuted with reference to alleged errors committed in the new proceedings.[53] Where a case has been brought up by one of the parties and determined, the other party may not subsequently have a review of a question which should have been brought up by cross appeal.[54] If a proceeding for review has been dismissed without a decision on the merits of the case it does not bar seasonable prosecution of another proceeding for review,[55] and where an appeal has been dismissed voluntarily or by the court for failure to comply with some requirement of the law governing the proceeding a second appeal is not barred if taken in due time.[56] A prior appeal which, although not abandoned or dismissed, is for any reason void or ineffectual so that it in no way brings the merits of the case up for review is no bar to the maintenance of a subsequent appeal.[57]

Joinder of proceedings. Two separate and distinct causes resulting in separate judgments should not be brought up for review by a single appeal.[58] A single appeal may, however, be used to obtain review of several causes where they have been completely consolidated into one case.[59]

(1) Whether plaintiff should be permitted to make the closing argument to the jury as having the affirmative is purely a question of practice, to be reviewed only by motion for a new trial in the trial court, and cannot be made the subject of a bill of exceptions or writ of error.—Lancaster v. (2) However, where plaintiffs had judgment in a United States circuit court, and sued out a writ of error from the supreme court on the ground of the insufficiency of the damages, an objection that the proper remedy of plaintiffs was by motion for a new trial, and that the question made on the writ of error was substantially a motion for a new trial, was not well founded, where the amount of damages found by the jury was referred to only as showing that their verdict was controlled by the direction of the court.—Tracy v. (2) Dependent on Amount in Controversy
(a) In general
(b) Showing and determination of amount or value

(a) In General

Unless statutes impose a pecuniary limit, the appellate jurisdiction of the United States supreme court is not dependent on the amount in controversy.

In the absence of a statutory requirement the appellate jurisdiction of the United States supreme court is not dependent on the amount in controversy.[61] However, in various instances statutes have imposed a pecuniary limit on the appellate jurisdiction of the court, the usual provision being that the amount or matter in dispute shall exceed a certain sum.[62] A statute imposing or changing a pecuniary limitation on appellate jurisdiction applies to causes pending at the time of its adoption[63] unless by the phraseology of the statute pending appeals are exempted.[64] Where the statute requires that the matter in dispute shall exceed a certain sum in dollars, the matter in dispute must have been money or something the value of which can be estimated in money.[65]

The statutes making the right of review depend on the amount in controversy sometimes except from their operation certain classes of cases in which a review may be had without regard to the amount in dispute.[66] The case must fall clearly within an exception or the right to review will be determined by the amount involved.[67] For example, the statutes may except causes involving the validity of patents and copyrights,[68] the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States,[69] the enforcement of revenue laws[70] or the title to land or a freehold.[71] If the amount involved in the controversy is less than that which gives the court a general jurisdiction and the jurisdiction depends on the jurisdiction of the lower court, the review must be confined to this

Applicability of statutes where United States a party
In the absence of an express exception, statutes imposing pecuniary limitations apply to cases in which the United States is a party.—U. S. v. Broadhead, Cal., 8 S.Ct. 1191, 127 U.S. 212, 32 L.Ed. 147—U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., Wyo., 105 U.S. 263, 26 L.Ed. 1021.

Amount equal to sum prescribed

Statute prescribing jurisdictional amount for inferior court
A statute giving to an inferior federal court original cognizance of cases where the matter in dispute exceeds a certain sum does not affect the pecuniary limit of appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court.—Whitsitt v. Union Depot & R. Co., Colo., 103 U.S. 770, 26 L.Ed. 337.

Certified questions
If the amount in controversy is not sufficient to confer appellate jurisdiction and the jurisdiction is rested on a certificate of division of opinion of the judges in the lower court, the supreme court is without jurisdiction if the case is not properly certified.—Williamsport Nat. particular question, and other questions cannot be considered or decided.[72]

The various statutes providing that the supreme court shall be without appellate jurisdiction unless the matter in dispute exceeds a certain sum of money deprive the court of jurisdiction to review a controversy as to the continuance or dissolution of the marriage relation,[73] a decision as to the custody and care of children,[74] or a judgment in habeas corpus,[75] and unless the jurisdictional amount is shown the court may not review orders or decrees in injunction suits[76] or the action of a lower court on a mandate of the supreme court after a cause is remanded.[77] The emoluments of an office are considered sufficient as the value of that which is in controversy to bring a controversy as to the right to office under the operation of the pecuniary limitations of the statute; if it appears that the emoluments are of a sufficient amount the court will assume jurisdiction.[78] Unless franchises are excepted from the operation of provisions imposing pecuniary limitations on appellate jurisdiction, appeals do not lie from suits involving the acquisition, protection, or forfeiture of a franchise, unless it appears that the value of the franchise reaches the jurisdictional amount.[79] Mandamus proceedings are held to come within the operation of the statutes imposing pecuniary limitations on appellate jurisdiction,[80] and prohibition is likewise brought within the operation of such statutes.[81] When the jurisdictional amount is shown, the court may review judgments, orders, or decrees of the probate courts relating to wills and administration;[82] if the probate of a will has any legal operation and is not merely void, the controversy as to the validity of the probate is a matter in dispute equal to the value of the estate devised away from those seeking to revoke the probate.[83]

(b) Showing and Determination of Amount or Value

The amount in controversy necessary for the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by the United States supreme court must affirmatively appear of record.

The amount in controversy necessary to give the United States supreme court appellate jurisdiction under the various statutes must affirmatively appear of record,[84] the burden being on appellant to establish the jurisdiction.[85] Mere uncertain inference or speculation is not sufficient.[86]

Ordinarily the amount claimed by plaintiff determines the appellate jurisdiction where defendant prevails in the court below;[87] in such case if the amount claimed by plaintiff is not sufficient the court is without jurisdiction.[88] If the judgment below is for plaintiff for less than the jurisdictional amount and defendant appeals, the court ordinarily is without jurisdiction since the amount in controversy, as to defendant, is fixed by the judgment;[89]

88. Allegations held insufficient
Where the jurisdictional amount was two thousand dollars, exclusive of costs, an allegation that libelant was entitled to recover damages which amounted to the "sum of eighteen hundred dollars and upwards" was insufficient to sustain jurisdiction.—The Falcon, N.Y., 17 How., U. S., 19, 15 L.Ed. 43.

89. U.S.—Walker v. U. S., La., 4 Wall. 163, 18 L.Ed. 319—Bennett v. Butterworth, Tex., 8 How. 124, 12

if in such circumstances plaintiff appeals in order to recover a larger sum, the amount claimed by him in his declaration usually determines the jurisdiction.[90] If plaintiff recovers a part of his demand, then the judgment is against him for that part only which he has failed to recover, and this difference is the criterion of appellate jurisdiction.[91] However, it is not always the sum demanded or claimed which controls, but the jurisdiction depends on the amount or value which is actually in controversy between the parties as the case stands in the supreme court,[92] to ascertain which the supreme court may look into the entire record.[93] The averments of the pleadings will not prevail over the facts pleaded.[94] If the claim is merely colorable or if fictitious demands are inserted or a fictitious amount of damages claimed in order to give jurisdiction, and this latter fact is made to appear, the court will refuse to entertain jurisdiction, because jurisdiction can no more be conferred by improper devices than it can be taken away in such manner.[95]

Particular considerations in determination of amount or value. If plaintiff's claim or the amount involved in the suit is not sufficient to confer appellate jurisdiction at the time of the appeal, the supreme court can acquire no jurisdiction by subsequent enlargement of such claim or amount in controversy by accrual of interest after the entry of the judgment.[96] Where, however, the matter in dispute has reference to the amount at the date of the judgment or decree in the lower court, which includes interest, such interest is properly considered in determining the appellate jurisdiction, as the amount of the whole judgment or decree controls.[97] Where interest on a principal amount is a part of the claim or subject matter involved in the controversy, or where interest is not given eo nomine, as on a contract ascertaining the sum payable, but is part of the damages, it is included in the amount in controversy, and is to be considered in determining appellate jurisdiction.[98] Where the jurisdiction is expressly made to depend on the amount of the judgment recovered or the amount in controversy, exclusive of costs, costs cannot be included, nor will an appeal lie from a judgment for costs only.[99]

Where defendant admits or tenders a part of plaintiff's claim, the balance remaining after deducting the amount admitted or tendered is the amount in controversy.[1] In an action on a bond the amount in controversy is that due as a result of the breach rather than that contained in the penalty of the bond.[2]

It has been held that on appeal by one party, involving an amount sufficient to give jurisdiction, the court will have jurisdiction of an appeal by his opponent from a part of the same judgment against him and in favor of plaintiff, although for less than the jurisdictional amount.[3]

Aggregate of claims, interests, or judgments. Several and separate interests of different appellees cannot be united so as to make up the jurisdictional amount, where such parties could not have united their interests if a recovery had been had against

Amount in controversy in lower court
The amount is determined by the case as it stands in the supreme court rather than by the amount in controversy in the lower court.—Gordon v. Ogden, La., 3 Pet., U.S., 33, 7 L.Ed. 592.

Bill of particulars
If a greater amount than the sum prescribed is claimed in the declaration and the bill of particulars shows the actual claim to be less than the jurisdictional amount, the bill of particulars determines the jurisdiction.—Gorman v. Havird, supra.

Defense of usury
Where, in an action to recover a debt, defendant pleads usury and plaintiff's recovery is reduced to that extent, on proceedings brought by plaintiff in the supreme court the amount in controversy between the parties for the purpose of jurisdiction is the difference between the amount of plaintiff's actual recovery and the amount which he sought to recover.—New England Mortg. them; nor can the separate and distinct claims or interests of two or more coplaintiffs, codefendants, cointerveners, or other parties to a suit be united for the purpose of giving appellate jurisdiction.[4] Where separate suits involve separate and distinct demands, or subject matters entirely disconnected and independent, appellate jurisdiction cannot be aided by consolidation,[5] although where several suits are actually consolidated so that all the actions are merged and thereafter constitute but a single action the aggregate amount of the claims may be taken as sufficient to confer appellate jurisdiction.[6]

Separate and distinct judgments or decrees cannot be added together in order to give jurisdiction, although the legal questions involved may be identical,[7] but if the subject matter consists of two or more claims by the same person, and the judgment affects the whole of such subject matter, the aggregate value is the amount in controversy;[8] and where several claim under the same title, the validity of which title is necessarily involved in the determination of the cause, the appellate court will have jurisdiction notwithstanding the individual claim of no one of the plaintiffs exceeds the jurisdictional amount, if the whole amount involved is sufficient.[9]

Where several plaintiffs seek one judgment on demands founded on the same liability and the amount decreed against defendant consists of several sums in favor of the various plaintiffs, no one of which sums would come within the jurisdictional amount, but the aggregate of which amount is in excess of the jurisdictional limit, defendant may appeal.[10] However, where a number of separate property owners join in a suit to restrain the collection by a city of special taxes assessed on their separate lots, and to recover back certain parts of the assessments already paid by them respectively, the jurisdictional amount, on an appeal to the supreme court, is to be determined, not by the aggregate of all the assessments, but by the amount assessed against the property of each individual owner; and, if some of such amounts are less than the jurisdictional sum, the appeal must be dismissed as to them.[11] In a proceeding for a peremptory mandamus to compel collection of a tax which has been levied for the joint benefit of the relators the value of the matter in dispute is measured by the whole amount of the tax, and not by the separate amounts into which it is to be divided when collected.[12]

Where the proceeding is by or against several parties jointly, concerning a subject matter of sufficient value to confer appellate jurisdiction, and in which separate and distinct claims are not set up, the value of such property will determine the appellate jurisdiction.[13]

Set-off, counterclaim, and cross bill. Where the only controversy is as to defendant's counterclaim, the amount in controversy, for the purpose of an appeal by defendant, is the difference between the amount claimed by him and the amount recovered.[14] Where there is a judgment against defendant on plaintiff's cause of action and also against him on his counterclaim, the aggregate of the judgment and the counterclaim determines the jurisdiction of an appeal by defendant.[15] Although the amount of the judgment obtained by plaintiff, combined with the amount alleged in the counterclaim, is sufficient to establish the jurisdictional amount, nevertheless the court is without jurisdiction if it appears from an inspection of the record that the evidence proved the existence of a counterclaim for a smaller sum, which, together with the amount of plaintiff's judgment, does not exceed the required jurisdictional amount.[16]

On appeal by defendant from a judgment against him for less than the amount required to give appellate jurisdiction, the amount claimed by him in his cross bill may be added to the amount of the judgment when the matter set up in the cross bill is directly responsive to the averments in the bill, and is directly connected with the transactions which are set up in the bill as the gravamen of plaintiff's case.[17]

Continuing and future rights or liabilities. Payments due and to become due under a decree may be aggregated in order to make up the jurisdictional amount requisite to an appeal.[18] Appellate jurisdiction may be sustained where the value of the right in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional amount, although such value is made up in part of the future exercise of the right, when the continuance of the right is fixed and the value thereof is certainly ascertainable.[19]

Necessity that subject matter be directly involved. The subject matter, the value of which is sought to be made the basis of the appellate jurisdiction, must be directly and actually in issue, and remote consequences and mere incidental or collateral claims will not be considered.[20] Where suit is brought by an individual taxpayer to enjoin the issuance of bonds, the jurisdictional amount is not the amount of the whole issue sought to be enjoined, but the amount of the taxes which complainant will be compelled to pay.[21] The jurisdictional amount must be determined by the amount in controversy in the particular proceeding, and not by the collateral effect of the decision on claims by other parties, or on defendants in another proceeding by the same party.[22]

Effect of agreement or stipulation. Where the case is not one within the appellate jurisdiction by reason of the insufficiency of the actual amount or value involved, the parties cannot, by agreement or stipulation, confer jurisdiction;[23] but such a stipulation may be regarded in a particular case, together with other facts which appear in the record, as sufficient proof of the amount in controversy to sustain the jurisdiction.[24]

Increase or reduction of amount. The trial court may permit an amendment increasing plaintiff's demand, and the amended pleading will determine the amount in controversy.[25] The value of property in dispute, or the amount in controversy, as claimed in plaintiff's amended or supplemental pleading, is the test of appellate jurisdiction, although the amount or value originally alleged was greater.[26]

If the successful party remits a part of the amount in controversy before final judgment the remainder of the claim is the test of jurisdiction on appeal.[27] However, appellate jurisdiction cannot be defeated by a remission after judgment,[28] unless statutes expressly allow a party in whose favor a judgment has been rendered to file a remittitur or release of part of the judgment, and, where such a remittitur or release is duly filed and reduces the amount in controversy below the minimum amount necessary for jurisdiction on appeal, the appeal must be dismissed or otherwise disposed of as though the judgment were for the reduced amount.[29]

After appellate jurisdiction has attached, a partial payment or other satisfaction on a judgment cannot have the effect of preventing a review.[30] However, if a judgment debtor himself procures the partial satisfaction of a judgment by payment, leaving the amount unpaid less than that which is necessary to give appellate jurisdiction, this will be fatal to his right to have the judgment reviewed, since the real matter in dispute in such case is the balance still remaining due on the judgment;[31] and if, pending the action in the trial court, such payment is made or the matter in controversy is partially compromised and settled, the balance left unsettled and unpaid will control the appellate jurisdiction.[32]

Value of property or right involved. Where the subject matter of the controversy is land or other property, real or personal, the right to which is directly in issue, the value of such property is, as a rule, the matter in controversy;[33] if the title to the property claimed or recovered is not in fact in issue, but only a part thereof, the value of that part will control.[34] However, it is not in every case involving property that the value of the property is the matter in dispute.[35] Where the right to the possession only is the matter in controversy, the value of the possession, and not the value of the property, will control as to the amount in controversy.[36]

In a suit involving a mortgage the subject matter involved in a judgment or decree affecting the security is the amount secured by the mortgage.[37] Where the controversy relates only to particular claims in the proceeds of a sale under a mortgage, the amount of the claim or claims governs.[38]

When the controversy relates entirely to the allowance or disallowance of a particular claim out of an entire fund or estate, the amount in controversy is determined by the amount of such claim and not by the value of the whole fund or estate against which it is made.[39] Where the debt of one claiming under an assignment and the fund arising from the property assigned each exceeds the jurisdictional amount, such party is entitled to appeal from an adverse decree in a suit by him against an attaching creditor to have the assignment declared valid, without regard to the amount of the claim of the attaching creditor.[40] If a particular claim against an estate exceeds the jurisdictional amount, the jurisdiction cannot be questioned on the ground that the estate, when distributed, will not yield a sufficient amount.[41] Where the entire fund claimed by two parties is awarded in shares to each, the value of the share of one of the parties who appeals will control the amount in controversy.[42]

In a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance or transfer, and to subject the property to the satisfaction of complainant's debt, the debt is the amount involved rather than the value of the property so far as the creditor is concerned.[43]

(3) Dependent on Nature and Scope of Decision

A proceeding for review in the United States supreme court lies only where there has been a decision by a tribunal vested with judicial authority and acting in a judicial capacity. The statutes usually require that the judgment of the inferior court be final.

Replevin or detinue

(1) In replevin, if it be of goods distrained for rent, the amount for which avowry is made is the value of the matter in controversy; but if the writ be issued to try title to property, it is in the nature of detinue, and the value of the article replevied is the value of the matter in controversy.—Peyton v. Robertson, D.C., 9 Wheat., U.S., 527, 6 L.Ed. 151.

(2) When in replevin judgment was rendered in favor of plaintiff for a portion of the property delivered under the writ and in favor of defendant for a return of the residue, or its value, the same not being in excess of the jurisdictional amount, the court is without jurisdiction to review the cause at the instance of plaintiff.—Pierce v. 35. Adjudication of possession subject to payment of money

Where plaintiff is adjudged possession and ownership of the property, subject to payment of a money judgment in favor of defendant, and defendant acquiesces, but plaintiff objects to the money judgment, the amount of the money judgment rather than the value of the whole property in controversy is the test of jurisdiction.—Pittsburgh Locomotive & Car Works v. Amount claimed on execution

Where a bill was filed to enjoin a marshal from levying execution on certain property, which execution was for a sum less than the jurisdictional amount, an appeal dismissing the bill will not lie although the entire value of the property may exceed the jurisdictional limit.—Ross v. Special tribunal

No appeal will lie from the decision of a special tribunal which is not judicial in its nature and which is constituted for a particular purpose.—U. S. v. Ferreira, Fla., 13 How., U.S., 40, 14 L.Ed. 42.

Judgment on appeal from decision of administrative body

Where the procedure in an inferior is void, and not merely erroneous, it is so far to be considered in existence by the court that it may be reviewed and reversed and the parties restored to the position they originally occupied.[45] The action of a lower court in the exercise of its purely discretionary power will not be reviewed by the supreme court.[46]

Finality of determination. As a general rule, a proceeding for review will not lie from or to an interlocutory decision unless it is expressly permitted by statute; in the absence of such provision, in order that there may be a review, a final judgment, order, or decree must have been rendered in the cause.[47] Ordinarily a judgment, order, or decree which determines the merits of the controversy, or the rights of the parties, and leaves nothing for future determination, is final and appealable.[48] A final judgment is one which disposes of the subject matter of the controversy or terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits;[49] one that leaves nothing to be judicially determined;[50] one which terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, and leaves nothing to be done but to enforce by execution what has been determined.[51] The form of the judgment is conclusive on the question of finality.[52] An order, judgment, or decree which terminates the litigation on the merits of the cause, so that, if there should be an affirmance, the lower court would have nothing to do but execute its decree already entered, is final.[53] A reservation in a decree of a right to apply to the court for any order that may be necessary to the due execution of the decree does not destroy its appealability.[54]

As a general rule an appeal does not lie where a judgment, order, or decree is made or rendered on only part of the issues or causes in the case, leaving others undisposed of.[55] A judgment, order, or decree is not final for the purpose of appeal when it does not settle or adjudicate all the principles or equities of the cause, but only a part of them, or where what is left to be done is something more than is necessary in the mere execution there-

Judgment as a bar

To constitute a final judgment or decree for the purpose of appeal, it is not necessary that it should be a bar to another suit or proceeding.—Beasley v. Texas & P. R. Co., La., 24 S.Ct. 164, 191 U.S. 492, 48 L.Ed. 274, affirming 115 F. 952, 53 C.C.A. 434—3 C.J. p 465 note 73.

Judgment by divided court

The fact that a judgment is rendered by an evenly divided court does not impair its character as a final and appealable judgment.—Hartman v. Greenhow, Va., 102 U.S. 672, 26 L. Ed. 271.

Taxation of costs

A judgment is not deemed final for the purpose of an appeal until the costs are taxed or awarded and inserted therein.—Wheeler v. Harris, N.Y., 13 Wall., U.S., 51, 20 L.Ed. 531—3 C.J. p 465 note 77.

of.[56] In the absence of statute, a decree to account is regarded as interlocutory and not appealable;[57] and the fact that the decree grants other relief, such as an injunction,[58] or the payment of money or property into court for preservation,[59] or the setting aside of conveyances,[60] does not affect the rule. However, if the decree disposes of all questions within the pleadings, and nothing remains but to adjust an account between the parties in the execution of the decree, or there is a reference as to a collateral matter only, it is final for the purpose of an appeal;[61] but if a reference is made for a judicial purpose, as to state an account between the parties, on which a further decree is to be entered, the decree is merely interlocutory and an appeal will not lie until after the final decree.[62]

An appeal ordinarily will not lie unless there has been a final disposition of the case, not only as to all the issues, but also as to all of the parties to the suit,[63] although it has been held that a decree may be final for the purpose of appeal as to one or more of several parties in favor of or against whom it finally settles the controversy, although it is interlocutory as to others.[64] An order or decree, final in its nature, which is made in a matter distinct from the general subject of litigation, and which affects only the parties to the particular controversy and those whom they represent, may be appealed from.[65]

There is no final judgment or decree for the purpose of an appeal as long as the cause is still under the control of the trial court by reason of the pendency of a motion for a new trial, for rehearing, to set the judgment aside, or otherwise.[66]

Decisions as to particular matters. The particular matters reviewable by the supreme court usually depend on statutory regulations.[67] Unless otherwise provided by statute, interlocutory orders overruling or sustaining objections as to parties, directing, permitting, or refusing an amendment as to parties, or a substitution or addition of parties, or an order denying a motion to vacate such an order, are not appealable.[68] An order quashing a summons on the ground that defendant was not found within the state, although in form an order to quash and not a dismissal of the suit, is a final judgment reviewable by the supreme court.[69] An order sustaining a demurrer to a pleading, without further action by the court finally determining the particular suit or proceeding, being a mere interlocutory order or decree, is not, in the absence of statute, appealable, but is reviewable only after final judgment or decree.[70] An order striking out an answer and judgment rendered on plaintiff's claim may be reviewed.[71] Whether or not on the transfer of a cause from a state court to a federal court it is necessary to file a new declaration is a question of practice and not subject to review.[72]

A judgment on a plea in abatement is not final in the sense that it may be reviewed before the final determination of the cause.[73] An appeal by a defendant will lie from an order reviving a suit and admitting an executor in the place of the deceased complainant, where the original suit has passed to a final decree.[74]

Orders for the production or inspection of books and papers usually are not regarded as final judgments which may be reviewed,[75] and an appeal will not lie from an order merely compelling a witness to appear and testify or to answer certain questions, or holding that certain questions need not be answered;[76] but an order which commits a witness for contempt for refusal to testify is a final order for the purpose of an appeal by him.[77]

An appeal may be taken from a judgment, order, or decree finally dismissing the action or proceeding without plaintiff's consent or granting a judgment or final order of compulsory nonsuit, as such judgment, order, or decree is a final determination of the cause,[78] but, in the absence of a statute, an appeal will not lie at plaintiff's instance from a judgment, order, or decree of dismissal or discontinuance entered at his request or with his consent, or from a voluntary nonsuit.[79] Where an action is dismissed as to one only of two causes of action set up in the bill, declaration, or complaint, leaving the other to stand, an appeal will not lie, unless authorized by statute, while the latter cause of action remains undecided;[80] nor, as a rule, will an appeal lie from a judgment, order, or decree overruling a motion to set aside a dismissal or nonsuit and to reinstate the case.[81] Where a cross bill or cross complaint is dismissed, the order or decree is not appealable before final determination on the original bill or complaint.[82]

Unless the case comes within some special statutory provision, an order granting or denying a motion for a new trial is not reviewable,[83] but the rule does not apply where the question is whether or not the court had jurisdiction to grant or refuse a new trial.[84] An order granting or denying a petition for a rehearing is not appealable.[85]

A judgment finally directing the payment of money is a final judgment which may be reviewed,[86] but an order merely directing the payment of money into court pending litigation as to its ownership is not a final judgment subject to review.[87] A judgment, order, or decree is final for the purpose of appeal where it determines the right to property in contest, real or personal, and directs it to be delivered up or conveyed by one party to the other, and where the party is entitled to have the judgment or decree carried immediately into execution.[88] An order which merely directs a reference is not a final decree subject to review.[89]

An appeal may be taken on matters arising after a final appealable judgment or decree which require the judicial action of the court with relation to the rights litigated in the main suit making necessary a substantive and important order or decree when such order or decree partakes of the nature of a final decision of those rights,[90] although an

Revival of suit
On a bill in equity to revive, in the name of the executor of plaintiff, a suit in equity which had gone to final decree, a decree of revival, entered after due notice to defendants, and after their appear-appeal will not lie where the action of the court is in the exercise of a mere ministerial duty.[91] An appeal may lie from a decree, notwithstanding it is merely in execution of a prior decree in the same suit, for the purpose of correcting errors which originate in it,[92] but, when the decree appealed from is dependent on the decree to execute which it was rendered, it is vacated by the reversal of such prior decree, and in such case the appeal which brings it into review will be dismissed for want of a subject matter on which to operate.[93] An appeal will not lie, unless the case comes within some special statutory provision, from an order setting aside a judgment previously rendered in the cause,[94] unless the court was without jurisdiction to make the order.[95]

Although in particular cases a review has been denied on the ground of want of finality, discretion of the court below, or other special grounds,[96] a review has been allowed from a decree awarding an execution on a judgment[97] and from a judgment refusing to quash or set aside an execution.[98] An appeal will lie from a final decree confirming a judicial sale.[99] An appeal lies from an order or decree ordering the sale of property on foreclosure of a mortgage,[1] although the order or decree is not appealable if it does not ascertain the amount due,[2] or if, without ordering a sale, it directs the cause to stand continued for further order or decree.[3]

As a general rule an appeal will not lie to review a judgment, order, or decree, in so far merely as it awards or denies costs.[4] However, judgments or orders relating to costs may be reviewed where the matter of costs is not a matter of discretion but of positive law, or where, although there is a discretion, such discretion is reviewable.[5]

Where a case is decided on appeal and a mandate issued directing the lower court to enter a specified final judgment or decree, and the court, in obedience to the mandate, enters such judgment or decree, no appeal will lie therefrom.[6] It is otherwise, however, if the lower court renders a judgment or decree different from, or not in substantial compliance with, that directed.[7]

Decisions in particular actions or proceedings. Judgments or orders in attachment proceedings usually are subject to review in the supreme court if they are final,[8] but not, in the absence of statute, if they are merely interlocutory.[9] In partition suits, in the absence of statute no appeal will lie from an order or decree merely appointing commissioners to make a partition and report the same to the court, or from other mere interlocutory orders or decrees.[10] In probate proceedings an appeal will not lie from mere interlocutory orders or decrees, unless it is authorized by some special statutory provision.[11]

An appeal will lie from a final order or decree in a suit for an injunction as from other final orders or decrees, and, as a rule, an order or decree is final for the purpose of appeal when it disposes of the controversy;[12] but, unless the case comes within some special statutory provision, an appeal will not lie from an order or decree granting, continuing, refusing, dissolving, or refusing to dissolve a preliminary injunction or from any other mere interlocutory order or decree.[13]

Decisions of intermediate appellate courts. The statutes regulating reviews by the United States supreme court of decisions of intermediate appellate courts usually require that the judgment, order, or decree of the intermediate court be a final one.[14] A judgment, order, or decree of an intermediate appellate court is not final unless it finally and fully determines the controversy.[15] On the other hand, it is final if it disposes of the controversy and leaves nothing further to be done in the trial court except to carry into effect the mandate of the intermediate court.[16] The judgment of the intermediate court, to be final and appealable, must dispose of the case as to all the parties.[17]

A judgment of an intermediate appellate court dismissing an appeal or writ of error from or to an inferior court for want of jurisdiction, and thus finally disposing of the case so far as the intermediate court is concerned, is subject to review in the supreme court,[18] but a proceeding will not lie to review an order of dismissal where no final judgment has been rendered or entered.[19]

A judgment of affirmance of the intermediate appellate court, if it is final, is reviewable by the supreme court,[20] but, as a rule, a judgment of affirmance which is not final is not subject to review,[21] as in the case of affirmance of a judgment and a remand of the cause for further proceedings.[22]

A judgment of an intermediate appellate court is final and reviewable where it reverses the judgment or decree of the lower court, and either renders judgment of dismissal or other judgment finally disposing of the case, or remands the cause to the lower court with specific directions to dismiss it or to render any other final judgment or decree, so that no further proceedings are to be had in the lower court except to carry the mandate into effect;[23] but,

Where telephone company procured permanent injunction unqualifiedly restraining, as confiscatory, enforcement of public service commission's rate orders, it could not appeal from portions of decree fixing value of its property for 1924, 1926, and 1928, and rate of return to be allowed, since such portions would not be res judicata in event of further legislative action by commission.—New York Telephone Co. v. Merger in final decree

(1) Order granting interlocutory injunction is not appealable, where permanent injunction was later granted.—Smith v. Illinois Bell Telephone Co., Ill., 46 S.Ct. 408, 270 U.S. 587, 70 L.Ed. 747.

(2) Where, on application for an interlocutory injunction, the injunction was refused, and a decree entered dismissing the suit, the denial of the interlocutory application was merged in the final decree, and was not appealable.—Shaffer v. Carter, Okl., 40 S.Ct. 221, 252 U.S. 37, 64 L.Ed. 445.

23. U.S.—Gulf Refining Co. of Louisiana v. U. S., La., 46 S.Ct. 52, 269 U.S. 125, 47 L.Ed. 195, affirm-in the absence of a statute to the contrary, a judgment of reversal, either in whole or in part, is not final for the purpose of review, where it remands the cause to the lower court for further proceedings in that court;[24] and a judgment reversing an interlocutory order or decree is not final or appealable, unless by special statutory provision.[25] A judgment of the intermediate court reversing the judgment or decree of the lower court in part and affirming it in part is not appealable as a final judgment, unless it is such that no further proceedings can be had in the lower court except to carry the mandate into effect.[26] A judgment of an intermediate court reversing the judgment of the inferior court and ordering a new trial is not a final judgment subject to review.[27]

Where the decision of the intermediate appellate court was discretionary, an appeal will not lie to review it in the absence of an abuse of discretion.[28]

(4) Dependent on Rendition, Form, or Entry of Judgment, Order, or Decree

An order or judgment made or rendered by a judge at chambers is not reviewable by the United States supreme court.

In the absence of statute, an order or judgment made or rendered by a judge at chambers is not reviewable by the United States supreme court,[29] and the fact that an order purports to have been made by the court does not render it appealable when it was, in fact, the order of the individual judge, and not of the court.[30] Where a judgment must be final in order to be reviewable, an appeal will not lie from a judgment which is not signed by the judge where the signature of the judge is necessary to its finality.[31] Mere informalities in the entry of a judgment will not generally prevent a review.[32]

c. Right of Review

Generally, review may be sought in the supreme court by, and only by, parties to the proceeding or determination below, and their representatives and privies, provided they have an interest in the subject matter of the controversy and are injuriously affected by the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed; but the right to obtain review may be lost by waiver or estoppel.

While the right to appeal to the supreme court from a judgment, order, or decree of an inferior court is, broadly speaking, a reciprocal one, which must be accorded to all parties without discrimination,[33] such right may be exercised by, and only by, one who was a party to the action or proceeding below, or to the judgment, order, or decree, or who is a legal representative of, or privy to, a party;[34] and such party, representative, or privy must have or represent an interest in the subject matter of the controversy,[35] and be injuriously affected or aggrieved by the judgment, order, or decree complained of.[36]

Final order at stated term

Although a writ of habeas corpus was granted by a circuit judge at chambers, an appeal was proper where the final order, overruling the return and discharging the prisoner, was made by the court at a stated term.—Harkrader v. Wadley, Va., 19 S.Ct. 119, 172 U.S. 148, 43 L.Ed. 399.

Separate appeals

Different parties to an action who are separately aggrieved by a judgment, order, or decree are entitled separately to appeal therefrom or to sue out separate writs of error.—Cox v. U. S., La., 6 Pet. 172, 8 L. Ed. 359—3 C.J. p 622 note 10.

3 C.J. p 616 note 55, p 617 note 57, p 618 note 66.

Privity with parties

(1) The term "privies," within the meaning of the rule, includes, according to the nature of the subject matter and the judgment, heirs, executors and administrators, terre-tenants, or those having an interest in remainder or reversion, or one who is made a party by the law, as he who comes in as a vouchee.—Green v. Watkins, Ky., 6 Wheat. 260, 5 L.Ed. 256.

(2) A writ of error will lie in the name of the heirs of a deceased tenant by a landlord who had undertaken the defense of the suit in the name of his tenant with the latter's consent.—Kellogg v. Forsyth, Ill., 24 How., U.S., 186, 16 L.Ed. 654.

Correct decision

A party cannot appeal from a decision which is correct as far as his interests are concerned, or which does not affect his interests, however erroneous and prejudicial it may be to the rights and interests

In accordance with the foregoing rules, particular litigants and persons in particular relations may or may not be entitled to obtain review of a judgment or decree, depending on the existence of the requisite interest and prejudice, as, for example, claimants to a particular fund or property,[37] interveners,[38] bankrupts and insolvents,[39] heirs at law of a party,[40] stockholders or bondholders of a corporate party,[41] purchasers at judicial or execution sales,[42] receivers, commissioners, or other like officers,[43] trustees,[44] states and territories,[45] and the United States.[46]

Deprivation or loss of right. While a party cannot, as a rule, be deprived of his right of appeal to the supreme court by the fault of a court or public officer,[47] he may waive such right, or be estopped of some other party or person.—Crawshay v. Soutter, Wis., 6 Wall. 739, 18 L.Ed. 845.

Injury from part of judgment

A party who is aggrieved by only one part of a judgment or decree cannot by appeal question another part which has no bearing or effect on his rights or interests; he can complain of only such parts of the judgment or decree as affect him.—Sage v. Central R. Co. of Iowa, Iowa, 93 U.S. 412, 23 L.Ed. 933.

Judgment in own favor

(1) A plaintiff or defendant cannot ordinarily appeal or prosecute a writ of error from or to a judgment, order, or decree in his own favor, since he is not aggrieved thereby.—Public Service Commission of Missouri v. Brashear Freight Lines, Mo., 59 S.Ct. 480, 306 U.S. 204, 83 L.Ed. 608, dismissing appeal, D.C., Brashear Freight Lines v. Public Service Commission of Missouri, 23 F. Supp. 865, rehearing denied Public Service Commission of State of Missouri v. Brashear Freight Lines, 59 S.Ct. 784, 306 U.S. 669, 83 L.Ed. 1063.

(2) Telephone company, which secured decree in its favor in district court, was not entitled to prosecute appeal for purpose of procuring review of findings of court with respect to value of company's property or other findings.—Lindheimer v. Illinois Bell Telephone Co., Ill., 54 S.Ct. 658, 292 U.S. 151, 78 L.Ed. 1182.

(3) However, a party may prosecute a writ of error to reverse a judgment which is in form or partly in his favor, if it does not give him all he is entitled to or is otherwise erroneous and prejudicial.—Capron v. Van Noorden, N.C., 2 Cranch 126, 2 L.Ed. 229.

37. Diversion of fund

Party claiming fund has a right to appeal from an order diverting the fund for other purposes.—Hovey v. McDonald, D.C., 3 S.Ct. 136, 109 U.S. 150, 27 L.Ed. 888.

38. U.S.—City of Chicago v. Chicago Rapid Transit Co., Ill., 52 S. Ct. 2, 284 U.S. 577, 76 L.Ed. 501—Savannah v. Jesup, Ga., 1 S. Ct. 512, 106 U.S. 563, 27 L.Ed. 276.

City in rate litigation

In a suit by a railway company against commerce commission and attorney general to restrain the enforcement of a rate order, such defendants not appealing from an injunction, the city, intervening defendant, had no separate standing entitling it to appeal.—City of Chicago v. Chicago Rapid Transit Co., Ill., 52 S.Ct. 2, 284 U.S. 577, 76 L.Ed. 501.

Intervention rejected

(1) As a rule one whose application to intervene, or to be admitted as a party defendant, in a suit has been rejected by the court cannot appeal from the final judgment rendered in the suit.—Guion v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co., Ind., 3 S.Ct. 108, 109 U.S. 173, 27 L.Ed. 895.

(2) He may not appeal from the judgment, order, or decree dismissing his petition or motion for intervention where such ruling is not appealable because it is discretionary.—Ex parte Cutting, Mo., 94 U.S. 14, 24 L.Ed. 49.

39. Defendant who receives his discharge in bankruptcy or insolvency pending an action, and who is protected by such discharge, has no further interest therein, and cannot appeal or bring error to review a judgment rendered against him prior to his discharge.—Knox v. Exchange Bank, Va., 12 Wall. 379, 20 L.Ed. 287.

40. Action involving realty

Where a party to a real action involving real property dies pending the action or after judgment, his heirs at law may seek review of a judgment therein.—Green v. Watkins, Ky., 6 Wheat. 260, 5 L.Ed. 256.

41. U.S.—Ex parte Cutting, Mo., 94 U.S. 14, 24 L.Ed. 49.

As parties or quasi parties

If stockholders, bondholders, or noteholders have been made parties or quasi parties to the litigation, or have become parties by intervention, they may appeal or bring error to protect their interests.—Perlman v. U. S., N.Y., 38 S.Ct. 417, 247 U.S. 7, 62 L.Ed. 950—3 C.J. p 652 note 88.

42. U.S.—Williams v. Morgan, La., 4 S.Ct. 638, 111 U.S. 684, 28 L.Ed. 559.

Order refusing to confirm sale is one as to which purchaser has right of review since, by acceptance of his bid, he becomes a party in a sense and has an interest.—Kneeland v. American L. & T. Co., Ind., 10 S.Ct. 950, 136 U.S. 89, 34 L.Ed. 379—3 C.J. p 652 note 91.

Distribution of proceeds

(1) A purchaser cannot appeal from an order making a distribution of the proceeds of the sale.—Central Trust Co. v. Grant Locomotive Works, Ohio, 10 S.Ct. 736, 135 U.S. 207, 34 L.Ed. 97.

(2) Such right exists, however, where, by an agreement recognized by the court, the purchasers are interested in the matter of the distribution to pay expenses and allowances.—Williams v. Morgan, La., 4 S.Ct. 638, 111 U.S. 684, 28 L.Ed. 559.

43. U.S.—Hinckley v. Gilman, C. & S. R. Co., Ill., 94 U.S. 467, 24 L. Ed. 166.

Settlement of account

Receiver may appeal from orders relating to the settlement of his account.—Hinckley v. Gilman, etc., R. Co., Ill., 94 U.S. 467, 24 L.Ed. 166.

Leave to appeal

Allowance of a receiver's appeal by a circuit justice is equivalent to leave by the court to the receiver to take an appeal, so that a motion to dismiss for lack of court permission to appeal will be denied.—Farlow v. Kelly, Ohio, 131 U.S. appendix cci, 26 L.Ed. 427.

44. U.S.—Hassall v. Wilcox, Ind., 6 S.Ct. 189, 115 U.S. 598, 29 L.Ed. 504.

46. Under an act of congress of March 3, 1887, authorizing suits against the United States, the latter may appeal from any judgment, for any amount, rendered against it.—U. S. v. Davis, Md., 9 S.Ct. 657, 131 U.S. 36, 33 L.Ed. 93.

Private land claims

Being a proper and necessary party to the suit, United States may appeal from a decision by the court of private land claims in favor of a petitioner, although it has no interest in the result of the litigation.—U. S. v. De Conway, 20 S. Ct. 13, 175 U.S. 60, 44 L.Ed. 72.

47. U.S.—New York Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Phinney, Wash., 20 S.Ct. 906, 178 U.S. 327, 44 L.Ed. 1088—to assert it,[48] as where he voluntarily acquiesces in, ratifies, or recognizes the validity of, the judgment, order, or decree against him, or otherwise takes a position which is inconsistent with the right to appeal therefrom.[49] So a party's right of review is waived or estopped where the judgment, order, or decree is regularly rendered or made, on agreement or otherwise, with his express or implied assent;[50] but a voluntary compliance with the judgment, order, or decree by payment or performance is not necessarily a bar to obtaining its review, particularly where restitution may be enforced, or the effect of compliance may be otherwise undone, in case of a reversal,[51] except where the payment or performance is by way of compromise or agreement to settle the controversy,[52] or where compliance with the judgment or decree leaves nothing on which a judgment of reversal can operate, so that only a moot question remains.[53] So, also, the voluntary acceptance of benefits accruing under a judgment or decree may operate as a waiver or release of errors, estopping the party from obtaining review,[54] unless the circumstances are such that the action taken is not inconsistent with assertion of the right to obtain review of the determination.[55] As a rule, the right to prosecute an appeal to the supreme court will not be lost by pursuing some other remedy.[56]

Martin v. Hunter, Va., 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L.Ed. 97.

48. U.S.—Elwell v. Fosdick, Ill., 10 S.Ct. 598, 134 U.S. 500, 33 L.Ed. 998.

A formal release of errors, for a valuable consideration, or under seal, will waive the right, or estop the party, to prosecute a writ of error as to such errors as are covered by the release.—Elwell v. Fosdick, supra—3 C.J. p 663 note 7.

Evidence of waiver

Affidavits and other competent evidence dehors the record may be received to establish the fact that appellant or plaintiff in error has, since the judgment, order, or decree complained of, abandoned or waived the right to prosecute the appeal or proceeding in error.—Elwell v. Fosdick, Ill., 10 S.Ct. 598, 134 U.S. 500, 33 L.Ed. 998.

49. U.S.—Crawshay v. Soutter, Wis., 6 Wall. 739, 18 L.Ed. 845.

Acquiescence held not shown

A party cannot be held to have acquiesced in an interlocutory order or decree by proceeding in the case if such action is not inconsistent with an appeal, as where there is no stay of proceedings and it is necessary for him to go on in order to protect his rights, and he has made and entered proper objections and exceptions.—Stone v. South Carolina, S.C., 6 S.Ct. 799, 117 U.S. 430, 29 L.Ed. 962.

50. U.S.—U. S. v. Babbitt, 104 U.S. 767, 26 L.Ed. 921.

Judgment not covered by consent

The consent of a party to a particular judgment, order, or decree will not preclude him from appealing from a subsequent judgment, order, or decree not in conformity to, or covered by, his consent.—Livingston v. Woodworth, Mass., 15 How. 546, 14 L.Ed. 809.

51. U.S.—Dakota County v. Glidden, Neb., 5 S.Ct. 428, 113 U.S. 222, 28 L.Ed. 981—O'Hara v. MacConnell, Pa., 93 U.S. 150, 23 L.Ed. 840.

The involuntary payment, performance, or satisfaction of a judgment, order, or decree does not affect the right to appeal or bring error therefrom.—O'Hara v. McConnell, supra.

Avoiding compulsory enforcement

Whether payment or performances of a judgment, order, or decree is voluntary or involuntary depends upon the circumstances. Payment, performance, or satisfaction of a judgment, order, or decree on execution or to avoid its compulsory enforcement by pending or threatened execution, contempt proceedings, or otherwise, is regarded as coerced, and not voluntary within the rule that a voluntary payment, performance, or satisfaction bars an appeal or proceeding in error for reversal. —O'Hara v. McConnell, supra.

54. U.S.—Crawshay v. Soutter, Wis., 6 Wall. 739, 18 L.Ed. 845.

Amount less than claim

Acceptance or collection of amount of judgment for less than amount of claim is sufficient to estop a party from appealing for the purpose of modifying the judgment so as to increase the amount of the recovery. —U. S. v. Benedict, N.Y., 43 S.Ct. 357, 261 U.S. 294, 67 L.Ed. 662, affirming, C.C.A., 280 F. 76.

55. U.S.—Gilfillan v. McKee, App.D.C., 16 S.Ct. 6, 159 U.S. 303, 40 L.Ed. 161.

Right to review not waived or estopped

(1) Where the right to the benefit received is conceded by the opposite party or appellant is entitled thereto in any event, so that it could not be denied if the portions of the judgment or decree granting it should be reversed.—Erwin v. Lowry, La., 7 How. 172, 12 L.Ed. 655.

(2) Where appellant is shown to be so absolutely entitled to the sum collected or accepted that reversal of the judgment or decree will not affect his right to it, as in the case of the collection of an admitted or uncontroverted part of his demand, and in other like cases.—Erwin v. Lowry, supra.

(3) Where the controversy is a separable one and the different parts of the judgment, order, or decree are separate and independent, so that acceptance of a benefit from the part which is favorable is not inconsistent with an appeal from the part which is adverse.—Gilfillan v. McKee, App.D.C., 16 S.Ct. 6, 159 U.S. 303, 40 L.Ed. 161—Terry v. Abraham, Ga., 93 U.S. 38, 23 L.Ed. 794.

(4) The receipt by an appellant of the balance remaining after the satisfaction of prior liens does not estop him from appealing from that part of the decree adjudging the priority of those liens.—Reynes v. Dumont, N.Y., 9 S.Ct. 486, 130 U.S. 354, 32 L.Ed. 934.

(5) The acceptance of a share in a special fund does not operate as a waiver of an appeal from another part of the decree disposing of the general fund.—Gilfillan v. McKee, D.C., 16 S.Ct. 6, 159 U.S. 303, 40 L.Ed. 161.

56. Bill of review

The filing and prosecution of a bill of review, or of a petition in the nature thereof, is not a waiver of the right to appeal from the original judgment of decree, at least where there is no action of the court on the petition and answer.—O'Hara v. MacConnell, Pa., 93 U.S. 150, 23 L.Ed. 840.

Motion for new trial

A mere motion or petition, for a new trial not granted, does not

As a general rule, questions not raised and properly preserved for review in the trial court, by objections and exceptions to the court's ruling thereon, will not be considered on review by the supreme court.

Necessity and sufficiency in general. Subject to a few exceptions and limitations,[57] the general rule is that questions, of whatever nature, not raised and properly preserved for review in the trial court will not be noticed on appeal to the supreme court;[58] and this is the case, irrespective of consent or waiver by the parties and notwithstanding any stipulations to the contrary into which they may have entered.[59] Accordingly, the supreme court will not consider or entertain particular questions or matters not raised in the court below, as with respect to relief,[60] causes of action or grounds for recovery,[61] grounds of defense or opposition,[62] or con-waive a writ of error.—U. S. v. Hodge, La., 6 How. 279, 12 L.Ed. 437.

Appeal to circuit court of appeals

The fact that an appeal might have been taken to the supreme court in the first instance does not estop appellant from subsequently appealing to that court from the judgment of the circuit court of appeals to which the cause was first taken.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amato, N.Y., 12 S.Ct. 740, 144 U.S. 465, 36 L.Ed. 596, affirming 49 F. 881, 1 C.C.A. 468.

57. U.S.—Hormel v. Helvering, 61 S.Ct. 719, 312 U.S. 552, 85 L.Ed. 1037, affirming, C.C.A., Helvering v. Hormel, 111 F.2d 1, certiorari granted Hormel v. Helvering, 61 S. Ct. 35, 311 U.S. 626, 85 L.Ed. 397.

Question of administration

Whether supreme court should review a question raised in it for the first time depends on the facts and circumstances disclosed by the particular record; as the rule is for the purpose of orderly administration and the attainment of justice, whether or not the court will follow it is ordinarily a question of administration.—Hormel v. Helvering, supra.

Parties proceeding on mutual mistake

It has been held that an erroneous judgment may be reversed where the parties proceeded on a mutual mistake of the law, although the only ground relied on in the court below against the judgment is not sustained.—Murdock v. Ward, N.Y., 20 S.Ct. 775, 178 U.S. 139, 44 L.Ed. 1009.

58. U.S.—Hormel v. Helvering, 61 S.Ct. 719, 312 U.S. 552, 85 L.Ed. 1037, affirming, C.C.A., Helvering v. Hormel, 111 F.2d 1, certiorari granted Hormel v. Helvering, 61 S. Ct. 35, 311 U.S. 626, 85 L.Ed. 397—Denver Union Stock Yard Co. v. U. S., Colo., 58 S.Ct. 990, 304 U. S. 470, 82 L.Ed. 1469, affirming, D. C., 21 F.Supp. 83—Becker Steel Co. of America v. Cummings, N.Y., 56 S.Ct. 15, 296 U.S. 74, 80 L.Ed. 54, affirming, C.C.A., 75 F.2d 1005, affirming, D.C., 10 F.Supp. 343, certiorari granted 55 S.Ct. 657, 295 U.S. 724, 79 L.Ed. 1677—Duignan v. U. Actions by or against executors and administrators

Public lands

(1) In proceedings relating to public lands it has been held that the objection that the grant was fictitious cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court.—U. S. v. Larkin, Cal., 18 How. 557, 15 L.Ed. 485.

(2) The same is true of an objection that the receiver took part with the register in the hearing and decision in the land office.—Carr v. Fife, Wash., 15 S.Ct. 427, 156 U.S. 494, 39 L.Ed. 508.

Right to urge other ground to support judgment distinguished

Although respondent or appellee in federal appellate court may, without cross petition or appeal, support judgment in his favor on grounds different from those on which the court below rested its decision, it is only in exceptional cases, and then only in cases coming from the federal courts, that United States supreme court considers questions urged by a petitioner or appellant but not pressed or passed on in the courts below.—McGoldrick v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 60 S.Ct. 670, 309 U. S. 430, 84 L.Ed. 849, reversing Compagnie Generale Transatlantique v. McGoldrick, 18 N.E.2d 28, 279 N.Y. 192, affirming 4 N.Y.S.2d 661, 254 App.Div. 237, reargument denied and remittitur amended 21 N.E.2d 199, 280 N.Y. 691, certiorari granted McGoldrick v. North American Transportation & Trading Co., 40 S.Ct. 518, 253 U.S. 330, 64 L.Ed. 935, affirming North American Transportation & Trading Co. v. U. S., 53 Ct.Cl. 424.

62. U.S.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. West, 50 S.Ct. 123, 280 U.S. 234, 74 L.Ed. 390, reversing 145 A. 340, 157 Md. 70—City and County of Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., Colo., 38 S.Ct. 278, 246 U.S. 178, 62 L.Ed. 649—Johnson v. Lankford, Okl., 38 S.Ct. 203, 245 U.S. 541, 62 L.Ed. 460.

Inconsistent defense

Text rule is especially true where the defense which is sought to be urged in the supreme court is inconsistent with the defense relied on in the court below.—State of Ohio ex rel. Seney v. Swift & Co., Ohio, 43 S.Ct. 22, 260 U.S. 146, 67 L.Ed. 176, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., 270 F. 141.

Particular defenses

(1) Contributory negligence or assumption of risk—Southern R. Co. v. Gadd, Tenn., 34 S.Ct. 696, 233 U. S. 572, 58 L.Ed. 1099.

(2) Statute of limitations.—Bardon v. Land & River Impr. Co., Wis., 15 S.Ct. 650, 157 U.S. 327, 39 L.Ed. 719—Upton v. McLaughlin, Wyo., 105 U.S. 640, 26 L.Ed. 1197.

Validity of contract

(1) As a rule an objection to the validity of a contract or instrument in suit cannot be urged for the first time in the appellate court.—Robinson v. Belt, Ind.T., 23 S.Ct. 16, 187 U.S. 41, 47 L.Ed. 65—McGahan v. Rondout Nat. Bank, S.C., 15 S.Ct. 347, 156 U.S. 218, 39 L.Ed. 403.

(2) Thus it cannot be objected for the first time on appeal that a contract is usurious.—Ewing v. Howard, Tenn., 7 Wall. 499, 19 L.Ed. 293—Newell v. Nixon, La., 4 Wall., 572, 18 L.Ed. 305.

(3) However, illegality of a contract may be raised for the first time on appeal where it appears on the face of the pleadings, on the face of the contract, or from the stitutional questions.[63] So, also, a party cannot, when a cause is brought up for review to the supreme court, assume an attitude inconsistent with, or different from, that taken by him at the trial;[64] he is restricted to the theory on which the cause was prosecuted or defended in the court below.[65] So the parties cannot change their theory or position as to the nature of the cause of action,[66] grounds of defense or of opposition,[67] construction of pleadings,[68] relief sought and grounds therefor,[69] evidentiary matters,[70] and the measure of damages or the amount of recovery.[71]

For a matter to have been sufficiently presented before the trial court so as to warrant review on appeal, it must have definitely been called to the trial court's attention sufficiently to obtain a ruling thereon.[72] Even where the constitutionality of a law is questioned in the lower court, new grounds cannot be first urged on appeal.[73]

Objections and motions and rulings thereon. In accordance with the rule stated above that questions not presented in the trial court in some appropriate manner will not be considered on review by the supreme court, it is a rule of general application that objections must be made in the trial court in order to reserve questions for review,[74] except in the case of fundamental or determinative errors which are apparent on the face of the record.[75] To be available the objection must be a timely one,[76] and it must usually be specific and point out the ground or grounds relied on in such a manner as to advise the court and opposing counsel thereof, so that the ruling may be made understandingly and the objection obviated if possible.[77] Only grounds of objection urged in the trial court will be considered on appeal; a party will not be permitted to change them or to add others.[78] A mere objection without a direct ruling or decision thereon by the admitted facts that the contract is immoral or otherwise contrary to public policy.—Oscanyon v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co., N.Y., 103 U.S. 261, 26 L.Ed. 539—Coppell v. Hall, La., 7 Wall. 542, 19 L.Ed. 244.

66. U.S.—San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena, Puerto Rico, 32 S. Ct. 399, 224 U.S. 89, 56 L.Ed. 680.

Legal cause of action

The parties by consent cannot compel the appellate court to review as an equitable cause a suit which seeks a legal remedy for a legal cause of action.—Twist v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co., Okl., 47 S.Ct. 755, 274 U.S. 684, 71 L.Ed. 1297, reversing, C.C.A., 6 F.2d 347, certiorari granted 46 S.Ct. 355, 270 U.S. 639, 70 L.Ed. 775.

68. U.S.—San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena, Puerto Rico, 32 S. Ct. 399, 224 U.S. 89, 56 L.Ed. 680.

Particular matters

(1) When an answer setting up affirmative matter is treated as a plea of set-off, counterclaim, cross complaint, or cross petition in the trial court, it will be so treated on appeal.—Perego v. Dodge, Utah, 16 S. Ct. 971, 163 U.S. 160, 41 L.Ed. 113.

(2) Where a case has been tried without objection as though the pleadings raised a certain issue, the objection that the issue was not raised by the pleadings, or that the issues were not complete, cannot be made for the first time in the supreme court.—Campbell v. U. S., Colo., 32 S.Ct. 398, 224 U.S. 99, 56 L.Ed. 684, reversing 170 F. 318, 95 C. C.A. 114.

(3) An objection that an allegation is not sufficiently specific to raise an issue which was tried in the court below cannot be made for the first time in the supreme court.—San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena, Puerto Rico, 32 S.Ct. 399, 224 U.S. 89, 56 L.Ed. 680.

(4) Although the record on appeal contains no reply to an answer alleging new matter, it will be treated as though a reply had been filed, where the case has been tried in the lower court in that manner without objection on account of the want of a reply.—Troxell v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., Pa., 33 S.Ct. 274, 227 U.S. 434, 57 L.Ed. 586, reversing 200 F. 44, 118 C.C.A. 272.

69. U.S.—Hull v. Burr, Mass., 34 S.Ct. 892, 234 U.S. 712, 58 L.Ed. 1557.

70. Facts admitted or conceded

Where a fact is admitted, conceded, or assumed without objection in the trial court, it cannot be contested in the appellate court or objected to on ground that there was no evidence on the question, but the theory in the trial court will be adhered to.—Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., Tex., 27 S. Ct. 350, 204 U.S. 426, 51 L.Ed. 553.

71. U.S.—New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, Mo., 13 S.Ct. 444, 147 U.S. 591, 37 L.Ed. 292—Roberts v. Graham, Cal., 6 Wall. 578, 18 L. Ed. 791.

72. U.S.—Denver Union Stock Yard Co. v. U. S., Colo., 58 S.Ct. 990, 304 U.S. 470, 82 L.Ed. 1469, affirming, D.C., 21 F.Supp. 83.

3 C.J. p 742 note 3.

75. U.S.—Bennett v. Butterworth, Tex., 11 How. 669, 13 L.Ed. 859—Garland v. Davis, D.C., 4 How. 131, 11 L.Ed. 907.

76. U.S.—American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, N.Y., 28 S.Ct. 72, 207 U.S. 284, 52 L.Ed. 208, 12 Ann. Cas. 595, affirming 146 F. 375, 76 C.C.A. 647.

In order to be timely, the objection must be made during the trial, at the time of the action or ruling to which it is directed or at the earliest opportunity thereafter; a question cannot afterward be raised, for the purpose of appellate review, by an objection made on a motion or argument for a new trial or rehearing.—American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, supra.

77. U.S.—Tevis v. Ryan, 34 S.Ct. 481, 233 U.S. 273, 58 L.Ed. 957, affirming 108 P. 461, 13 Ariz. 120.

trial court presents no question for appellate review, for, unless there is a ruling by the court, there can be no predicate for an assignment of error.[79]

Where no such objection was raised in the trial court, a party will not be permitted on appeal to raise a question as to the propriety of the form of the action or the nature of the proceeding,[80] or as to jurisdiction of the person.[81] On the other hand, since consent of parties cannot give a court jurisdiction over the subject matter of an action, the question of jurisdiction of the subject matter may, as a rule, be raised for the first time in the supreme court, or the court may, on its own motion, take notice of such want of jurisdiction.[82] Where, however, a court has general jurisdiction of a class of cases, an objection that, because of irregularities or other special circumstances, it had no jurisdiction of a particular case belonging to that class, or that it had no jurisdiction to render the particular judgment, must generally have been made in the court below.[83]

An objection cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court as to the capacity or right of plaintiff to sue,[84] the misjoinder of parties, either plaintiff or defendant,[85] the misnomer of a party to a cause,[86] or the want of merely proper or formal parties, or other formal defects as to the parties;[87] but objection may be first made in the supreme court if the defect in parties is not merely formal but amounts to the complete want of a party who is

3 C.J. p 750 note 59.

Decree rendered on petition

Rule applies to an objection that decrees were rendered only on petition, when they should have been rendered on a supplemental bill, cross bill, or bill in that nature.—Coburn v. Cedar Valley Land & Cattle Co., Mo., 11 S.Ct. 258, 138 U.S. 196, 34 L.Ed. 876.

Legal or equitable remedy

(1) Generally where an action is brought and tried without objection as an equitable one, neither party can object on appeal that a court of equity had no jurisdiction because there was an adequate remedy at law, or object that the cause of action was of legal cognizance only and should have been tried as a legal action and not as an equitable one.—Louisville & Nashville R. Co. v. F. W. Cook Brewing Co., Ind., 32 S.Ct. 189, 223 U.S. 70, 56 L.Ed. 355, affirming 172 F. 117, 96 C.C.A. 322, 40 L.R.A.,N.S., 798—3 C.J. p 757 note 20.

(2) However, if it is obvious that there is an adequate remedy at law, the supreme court will act sua sponte to preserve the courts of equity as a forum for extraordinary relief.—Petroleum Exploration v. Public Service Commission of Kentucky, Ky., 58 S.Ct. 834, 304 U.S. 209, 82 L.Ed. 1294, affirming, D.C., 21 F. Supp. 254, motion denied 58 S.Ct. 527.

(3) If the cause is one not properly cognizable by a court of equity under any circumstances, or it is not competent to grant the relief, the objection may be raised at any time, as want of jurisdiction of the subject matter is always fatal at any stage of the proceedings.—Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., Tenn., 11 S.Ct. 682, 139 U.S. 658, 35 L.Ed. 303 —3 C.J. p 758 note 23.

Time of objection

An objection to the form of remedy comes too late to be available in an appellate court when first made on a motion for a new trial after verdict.—American Tobacco Co. v. Werckmeister, N.Y., 28 S.Ct. 72, 207 U.S. 284, 52 L.Ed. 208, 12 Ann. Cas. 595, affirming 146 F. 375, 76 C. C.A. 647.

3 C.J. p 752 note 86.

Want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the record will be taken notice of by the appellate court, whether set up and relied on as a defense in the court below or not.—U. S. v. Corrick, Ill., 56 S.Ct. 829, 298 U.S. 435, 80 L.Ed. 1263, rehearing denied 56 S.Ct. 951, 298 U.S. 692, 80 L.Ed. 1409—Perez v. Fernandez, Puerto Rico, 26 S.Ct. 561, 202 U.S. 80, 50 L.Ed. 942—25 C.J. p 782 note 30.

Jurisdictional amount

It must clearly appear that the necessary amount is not involved before the appellate court will take cognizance of an objection on that ground which was not raised below; failure of the record to show that the jurisdictional amount is in controversy may be disregarded if it appears probable that the defect could be remedied by amendment.—Giles v. Harris, Ala., 23 S.Ct. 639, 189 U.S. 475, 47 L.Ed. 909.

Averments will be liberally construed for the purpose of sustaining the jurisdiction where objection is made for the first time on appeal.—Gordon v. Third Nat. Bank of Chattanooga, Ala., 12 S.Ct. 657, 144 U. S. 97, 36 L.Ed. 360.

Rule applied to particular objections

(1) That plaintiff is an alien.—O'Reilly v. Campbell, Utah, 6 S.Ct. 421, 116 U.S. 418, 29 L.Ed. 669.

(2) That suit is brought by wrong person or official.—Fortier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, La., 5 S.Ct. 234, 112 U.S. 439, 28 L.Ed. 764.

85. U.S.—Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Mo., 30 S.Ct. 633, 218 U.S. 135, 54 L.Ed. 970.

87. U.S.—Lenman v. Jones, App.D. C., 32 S.Ct. 18, 222 U.S. 51, 56 L. Ed. 89.

Conflict with issues

A suggestion as to want of parties below, made after final judgment, is not available on appeal when that suggestion conflicts with the issues as made up and on which the case is tried, and which, if the suggestion be correct, will involve reversing the judgment at the request of appellant because of deceit practiced by him on the court below.—Southern Pine Lumber Co. v. Ward, 28 S.Ct. 239, 208 U.S. 126, 52 L.Ed. 420, affirming 85 P. 459, 16 Okl. 131.

so necessary that a final judgment or decree cannot be rendered without affecting his or her interests.[88] The rule that objections must be raised in the court below to be preserved for review also applies to objections based on defects in process or notice,[89] objections to motions or the hearing or rulings thereon,[90] and objections to provisional remedy proceedings.[91]

A party is generally precluded from objecting for the first time in the supreme court with respect to matters of pleading,[92] as in the case of objections to the absence of pleadings,[93] to the form[94] or sufficiency[95] of pleadings, to the allowance or refusal of amendments thereto,[96] and to variance between the pleadings and the proof;[97] but, if there is a complete failure to state a cause of action, the defect is regarded as a fundamental one which may be raised for the first time in the appellate court.[98]

So, also, the supreme court will not consider objections made for the first time on appeal, as to reference of the cause or questions,[99] the drawing, summoning, or impaneling of the jurors,[1] the time or order of the trial or hearing,[2] the mode or conduct of the trial or hearing,[3] evidence[4] and witness-

Refusal of continuance

On appeal, a party may not object to a refusal of a continuance on grounds not brought to the attention of the court below.—J. S. Keator Lumber Co. v. Thompson, Ill., 12 S.Ct. 669, 144 U.S. 434, 36 L.Ed. 495.

92. U.S.—George A. Fuller Co. v. McCloskey, App.D.C., 33 S.Ct. 471, 228 U.S. 194, 57 L.Ed. 795.

Sufficiency of objection

No matter how made, the objection must point out the particular defects or grounds relied on, so as to bring the same to the attention of the lower court and opposing counsel, and none other will be considered by the appellate court.—George A. Fuller Co. v. McCloskey, supra.

3 C.J. p 778 note 28.

Particular pleadings

(1) Bill or complaint.—Friedenstein v. U. S., N.Y., 8 S.Ct. 838, 125 U.S. 224, 31 L.Ed. 736—The Vaughan and Telegraph, 14 Wall. 258, 20 L. Ed. 807.

(2) Plea, answer, or subsequent pleading.—Campbell v. U. S., Colo., 32 S.Ct. 398, 224 U.S. 99, 56 L.Ed. 684, reversing 170 F. 318, 95 C.C.A. 114.

Particular defects

(1) That a pleading was not filed in time, or that it was not formally or properly filed.—Clements v. Moore, Tex., 6 Wall. 299, 18 L.Ed. 786.

(2) That a certain defense should have been set up by plea or answer and not raised by demurrer.—U. S. v. Freel, N.Y., 22 S.Ct. 875, 186 U. S. 309, 46 L.Ed. 1177, affirming 99 F. 237, 39 C.C.A. 491.

(3) That there is a departure.—Ankeny v. Clark, Wash., 13 S.Ct. 617, 148 U.S. 345, 37 L.Ed. 475.

3 C.J. p 779 note 37.

Pleading bad on demurrer

It cannot be objected for the first time on appeal that the cause of action is defectively stated, even though the defect is such that the pleading would have been bad on the demurrer or motion in the lower court.—Grant Bros. Constr. Co. v. U. S., Ariz., 34 S.Ct. 452, 232 U.S. 647, 58 L.Ed. 776—3 C.J. p 781 note 40.

97. U.S.—Roberts v. Graham, Cal., 6 Wall. 578, 18 L.Ed. 791.

Text rule has no application where the objection could not have been obviated in the court below.—Roberts v. Graham, Cal., 6 Wall. 578, 18 L.Ed. 791.

Sufficiency of objection

If evidence objected to on the ground of variance has been admitted provisionally subject to motion to strike when all the evidence is in, it is necessary to renew the objection by subsequent motion in order to permit its consideration on appeal.—McCandless v. Furlaud, N. Y., 56 S.Ct. 41, 296 U.S. 140, 80 L.Ed. 121, reversing, C.C.A., 75 F.2d 977, certiorari granted 55 S.Ct. 830, 295 U.S. 726, 79 L.Ed. 1677, rehearing denied 56 S.Ct. 304, 296 U.S. 664, 80 L.Ed. 473.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) Objection to admission of evidence must, in order to present any question for consideration by supreme court, specifically state the grounds or reasons which render the evidence inadmissible; no grounds or reasons will be considered other than those that have been specified or urged in the trial court.—Tevis v. Ryan, Ariz., 34 S.Ct. 481, 233 U.S. 273, 58 L.Ed. 957—3 C.J. p 811 note 93, p 819 note 26, p 835 note 24.

(2) Although seasonable objection is made to a question, objection must be renewed by moving to strike the answer where it is not responsive to question asked.—Gould v. Day, Mich., 94 U.S. 405, 24 L.Ed. 232.

Rule applied to other matters

(1) Improper restriction on use of evidence.—Cunningham v. Springer, N.M., 27 S.Ct. 301, 204 U.S. 647, 51 L. Ed. 662, 9 Ann.Cas. 897.

(2) Mode and order of receiving evidence.—Shields v. Hanbury, Ill., 9 S.Ct. 176, 128 U.S. 584, 32 L.Ed. 565.

Text rule does not apply where defect is of such character that its ill effects could under no circumstances have been obviated in the court below.—Houghton v. Jones, Cal., 1 Wall. 702, 17 L.Ed. 503—U. S. v. Auguisola, Cal., 1 Wall. 352, 17 L.Ed. 613.

(2) Examination of witness.—Burley v. German-American Bank, N. Y., 4 S.Ct. 341, 111 U.S. 216, 28 L.Ed. 406—Schuchardt v. Allens, N.Y., 1 Wall. 359, 17 L.Ed. 642.

No other grounds or reasons than those stated will be considered by the supreme court.—Camden v. Doremus, Mo., 3 How. 515, 11 L.Ed. 705.

6. U.S.—Crumpton v. U. S., Ark., 11 S.Ct. 355, 138 U.S. 361, 34 L.Ed. 958.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) Objection must be made at the time of the improper argument, remark, or other misconduct, and it must be coupled with, or followed by, a request for an instruction or admonition to the jury.—Crumpton v. U. S., Ark., 11 S.Ct. 355, 138 U.S. 361, 34 L.Ed. 958.

(2) Where proper objection is made and exception saved to improper argument, it is not necessary that the objection and exception be repeated on repetition of the improper argument.—Waldron v. Waldron, Ill., 15 S.Ct. 383, 156 U.S. 361, 39 L.Ed. 453.

Defects in instructions given

(1) Generally.—Graham v. U. S., Md., 34 S.Ct. 148, 231 U.S. 474, 58 L. Ed. 319—Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., Md., 9 S.Ct. 553, 130 U.S. 396, 32 L.Ed. 979.

(2) Usually the objection must specifically and definitely point out the particular ground or grounds on which it is based.—Jacobs v. Southern Ry. Co., Va., 36 S.Ct. 588, 241 U. S. 229, 60 L.Ed. 970.

(3) No ground or grounds other than those specified will be considered by the supreme court.—First Unitarian Soc. v. Faulkner, Ill., 91 U.S. 415, 23 L.Ed. 283.

(4) Objection must be made before the retirement of the jury.—U. S. v. Carey, La., 3 S.Ct. 424, 110 U.S. 51, 28 L.Ed. 67—Hunnicutt v. Peyton, Tex., 102 U.S. 333, 26 L.Ed. 113.

Failure to instruct

(1) If instructions given are correct as far as they go, partial failure to instruct on all points in case will not be reviewed unless there has been a request for further or more specific instructions.—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. v. Smith, N.Y., 59 S.Ct. 262, 305 U.S. 424, 83 L.Ed. 265, affirming, C.C.A., Smith v. Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 96 F.2d 98, certiorari granted Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. v. Smith, 59 S.Ct. 81, 305 U.S. 586, 83 L.Ed. 370—Atlantic Const. Line R. Co. v. Ford, 53 S.Ct. 249, 287 U.S. 502, 77 L.Ed. 457, affirming Ford v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 168 S.E. 143, 169 S.C. 41—Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Ellzey, La., 48 S.Ct. 80, 275 U.S. 236, 72 L.Ed. 259, reversing, C.C.A., Ellzey v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., 12 F.2d 4, certiorari granted Kansas City So. Ry. Co. v. Ellzey, 46 S.Ct. 638, 271 U.S. 659, 70 L.Ed. 1137—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Minds, Pa., 39 S.Ct. 531, 250 U.S. 368, 63 L.Ed. 1039, affirming 244 F. 53, 156 C.C.A. 481—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Brown, 36 S.Ct. 602, 241 U.S. 223, 60 L.Ed. 966, affirming 144 P. 1075, 45 Okl. 143—Southern Ry. Co. v. Gadd, 34 S.Ct. 696, 233 U.S. 572, 58 L.Ed. 1099, affirming 207 F. 277, 125 C.C.A. 21—3 C.J. p 850 note 24, p 854 note 33, p 857 note 49.

(2) A material misdirection in the charge of the court will be reviewed on proper and timely objection alone, without any request having been made for a correct instruction.—St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Bachman, W.Va., 52 S.Ct. 270, 285 U.S. 112, 76 L.Ed. 648, reversing, C.C.A., 49 F.2d 158, certiorari granted 52 S. Ct. 31, 284 U.S. 605, 76 L.Ed. 518.

(3) Ordinarily the request should specifically refer to the point sought to be made in order to render its refusal available on appeal, and only the point made by the request will be considered.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Moser, 48 S.Ct. 49, 275 U.S. 133, 72 L.Ed. 200, reversing, Tex.Civ.App., 277 S.W. 722, set aside to conform to mandate, Civ.App., 4 S.W.2d 1118, and certiorari granted 46 S.Ct. 489, 271 U.S. 655, 70 L.Ed. 1135.

(4) A defective request may sometimes be sufficient to call the court's attention to a complete failure to instruct on a particular issue.—St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Bachman, supra.

Modification of requested instruction form or sufficiency of the verdict,[10] trial, decision, and findings by the court,[11] the amount of recovery and extent of relief,[12] and the judgment, order, or decree,[13] unless the errors therein are fundamental, or apparent of record;[14] and the same rule as to necessity of raising proper objection in the trial court holds true of alleged errors as to execution and enforcement of judgment.[15] On appeal to the supreme court from the judgment of a circuit court, objection cannot be taken for the first time to the proceedings to perfect the appeal to the circuit court or to the proceedings therein, but such objections, to be considered, must have been first taken in the circuit court.[16]

Exceptions. It is a general rule of law that rulings or decisions which affect substantial rights, and on which error is predicated, will not be revised in the supreme court unless an appropriate exception to the alleged error was reserved;[17] but, where the alleged error complained of appears in the record proper, the supreme court may notice it and reverse the judgment of the court below, although no exception was taken.[18] Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 46, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, formal exceptions to the rulings or orders of the district courts are no longer necessary, and it is sufficient that a party make known to the court the action which he desires the court to take or his objection to the action of the court and his grounds therefor.

Exceptions, when necessary, must be definite and specific to be sufficient on appeal; and an exception to one ruling or decision, or to one specific error therein, will present no question as to another.[19] Ordinarily the proper time to take exception is at the time the ruling or decision complained of is made.[20] Where, on a trial, a party takes a step or adopts a course directly inconsistent with an exception previously taken by him to some ruling of the trial court, he will be deemed to have waived such exception and cannot take advantage of it on appeal.[21]

Where exceptions are necessary, the failure to Questions of law

On the trial to the court of an action at law, where the evidence is not contradictory, the proper mode of raising a question of law for review by the appellate court is for each party to submit to the trial court a declaration in his favor on such question.—Martinton v. Fairbanks, Ill., 5 S.Ct. 321, 112 U.S. 670, 28 L.Ed. 862—3 C.J. p 871 note 12.

Rule also applies to equitable issues

U.S.—McLaughlin v. Potomac Bank, D.C., 7 How. 220, 12 L.Ed. 675—Brockett v. Brockett, D.C., 3 How. 691, 11 L.Ed. 786.

Want of jurisdiction

No exception may be necessary to enable party to raise the objection that the trial court was without jurisdiction, where its want of jurisdiction is apparent on the record.—Perez v. Fernandez, Puerto Rico, 26 S.Ct. 561, 202 U.S. 80, 50 L.Ed. 942.

3 C.J. p 900 note 96.

Individual exceptions

If there are several rulings which are deemed erroneous and which it is desired to have reviewed, an exception must be properly served to each ruling, and not taken in gross or to all the rulings jointly.—McCabe & Steen Constr. Co. v. Wilson, Okl., 28 S.Ct. 558, 209 U.S. 275, 52 L.Ed. 788—3 C.J. p 902 note 5.

Exceptions relating to evidence

Exceptions to rulings on evidence, such as on its admission or rejection, must as a general rule be made at the time of such rulings.—U. S. v. Carey, La., 3 S.Ct. 424, 110 U.S. 51, 28 L.Ed. 67.

Instructions

It will usually be unavailing to except to the charge for the first time after verdict.—Thiede v. Utah, Utah, 16 S.Ct. 62, 159 U.S. 510, 40 L.Ed. 237—Michigan Ins. Bank v. Eldred, Wis., 12 S.Ct. 450, 143 U.S. 293, 36 L.Ed. 162.

The making of a motion for a new trial does not constitute a waiver of exceptions which have been previ-

follow such procedure may preclude the supreme court from reviewing rulings made with respect to pleadings or the filing thereof,[22] except where the error complained of is apparent on the record on appeal.[23] So, also, the failure to take a proper exception ordinarily precludes review of rulings and orders made before the trial or hearing,[24] or rulings or matters arising during the trial or hearing,[25] such as with respect to conduct or remarks of the presiding judge[26] or counsel,[27] evidence[28] and witnesses,[29] dismissal or nonsuit,[30] instructions[31] and failure or refusal to instruct,[32] verdict or findings of the jury,[33] and decision or findings by the court without a jury.[34]

Also, proper exception in the trial court is ordinarily necessary to obtain review in the supreme court of alleged errors with respect to the judgment or decree,[35] the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict or findings,[36] and the report or decision of a referee, master, commissioner, or like officer.[37]

(2) Ruling on a demurrer or exception to a pleading.—German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Hale, Ala., 31 S.Ct. 246, 219 U.S. 307, 55 L.Ed. 229.

Whether pleadings support judgment

Whether the pleadings support and warrant the judgment is question which arises on the record proper, and may be reviewed without any exception.—Vicksburg & M. R. R. Co. v. O'Brien, Miss., 7 S.Ct. 118, 119 U. S. 99, 30 L.Ed. 299.

24. U.S.—Fleischmann Const. Co. v. U. S., to Use of Forsberg, Va., 46 S.Ct. 284, 270 U.S. 349, 70 L.Ed. 624, affirming, C.C.A., 298 F. 330, which affirmed, D.C., U. S. v. Fleischmann Const. Co., 298 F. 320, and error allowed, C.C.A., 298 F. 1020.

27. U.S.—Crumpton v. U. S., Ark., 11 S.Ct. 355, 138 U.S. 361, 34 L.Ed. 958.

Failure to particularize an exception to prejudicial argument by counsel will not, however, preclude supreme court from considering alleged error in permitting such argument where the error in question ought to be considered on appeal, in view of public interest.—New York Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, Mo., 49 S.Ct. 300, 279 U.S. 310, 73 L.Ed. 706, reversing, C. C.A., 27 F.2d 699, certiorari granted 49 S.Ct. 27, 278 U.S. 590, 73 L.Ed. 523, and opinion amended 49 S.Ct. 417.

Rulings as to admission or exclusion

(1) A mere objection to the evidence or ruling, not followed by an exception, is insufficient to preserve the question for review.—Laber v. Cooper, Ill., 7 Wall. 565, 19 L.Ed. 151—Poole v. Fleeger, Tenn., 11 Pet. 185, 9 L.Ed. 680—Scott v. Lloyd, D.C., 9 Pet., 418, 9 L.Ed. 178—3 C.J. p 913 note 97.

(2) Exceptions must be sufficiently specific to identify the evidence and ruling thereon and to point out the particular error relied on, and must not be taken in bulk, where some of the evidence was properly admitted or rejected.—Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, Tenn., 24 S.Ct. 24, 191 U. S. 64, 48 L.Ed. 96, affirming 112 F. 888, 50 C.C.A. 591.

(3) Where exceptions are properly saved to erroneous rulings on evidence, such rulings may be reviewed without afterward excepting to the instruction on the question.—Boyd v. U. S., Ark., 12 S.Ct. 292, 142 U.S. 450, 35 L.Ed. 1077, reversing, C.C.A., 45 F. 851.

Specificness

Exceptions to instructions given must be specific rather than general or in gross and must point out the particular matter complained of as error.—Guerini Stone Co. v. P. J. Carlin Const. Co., Puerto Rico, 39 S. Ct. 102, 248 U.S. 334, 63 L.Ed. 275, reversing P. J. Carlin Const. Co. v. Guerini Stone Co., 241 F. 545, 154 C. C.A. 321, certiorari granted Guerini Stone Co. v. P. J. A failure or refusal to make or file findings of fact may not be considered in the absence of a request therefor and an exception to the court's refusal or noncompliance with the request.—Law v. U. S., Mont., 45 S.Ct. 175, 266 U.S. 494, 69 L.Ed. 401, reversing, C.C.A., U. S. v. Law, 299 F. 61, which reversed, D.C., Law v. U. S., 290 F. 972.

3 C.J. p 948 note 76.

Determination of court

It was held, however, that, where the determination of the court below is based on an insufficient or erroneous report, no exception to it is necessary to enable the supreme court to inquire into its correctness.

e. Parties

Generally, all parties to the judgment or decree below whose interests will be directly affected if the determination is sustained, reversed, or modified on review may, and usually must, be made parties; but the nonjoinder of parties only precludes adjudication of the interests of the absent parties, although the appeal may be dismissed where the defect is jurisdictional or where there is a misjoinder.

The general rule is that all parties to the record who appear to have any rights or interests that may be directly affected by a judgment on appeal must be made parties to the application for review by proper description therein, or must be given notice thereof, and an opportunity of being heard and defending their rights;[38] but parties who have suffered a default need not be made parties.[39]

Appellants or plaintiffs in error. With the exception of nominal or useless parties,[40] generally all parties against whom the judgment or decree was rendered may, and usually must, be joined as appellants or plaintiffs in error in an appeal by one or more of them,[41] especially where a joint judgment or decree has been rendered against them.[42] However, joinder of all parties is not required where their interests are separate, and only the interests of the party or parties appealing are involved;[43] and, even where there is a joint liability or interest, one or more coparties may maintain separate proceedings for review where there has been a severance of the parties in interest effected by summons and severance, or by an equivalent proceeding appearing in the record,[44] or where the other coparties have refused to join in or prosecute the appeal.[45]

Appellees, respondents, or defendants in error. The general rule is that all parties in favor of whom a judgment or decree has been rendered below, or who are interested in having such a judgment or decree sustained, and all interested coparties of appellant or plaintiff in error, who are not made coappellants or coplaintiffs in error, must be made appellees, respondents, or defendants in error.[46]

—Himley v. Rose, S.C., 5 Cranch 313, 3 L.Ed. 111—Murray v. Schooner Charming Betsey, 2 Cranch 64, 2 L. Ed. 208.

Exception to finding by commission

An exception to the allowance of any amount as a fee for attorney's services was held to be insufficient to raise the point that the amount allowed for such services was excessive in a case heard before a commission.—Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., Pa., 35 S.Ct. 328, 236 U.S. 412, 59 L.Ed. 644, reversing Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Meeker, 211 F. 785, 128 C.C. A. 311.

3 C.J. p 1003 note 45.

The purpose of the rule is that the successful party may be at liberty to enforce his judgment, decree, or order without delay against those parties who do not desire to have it reversed, and that the supreme court may not be required to decide the same question more than once on the same record.—Masterson v. Herndon, Tex., 10 Wall. 416, 19 L.Ed. 953.

Appeals prosecuted by or against partnerships without setting out the names of the individual members are nugatory, and should be dismissed.—The Protector, Ala., 11 Wall. 82, 20 L.Ed. 47.

Intervention

(1) In the absence of a permissive statute, intervention in an appeal has been denied.—U. S. v. Patterson, La., 15 How. 10, 14 L.Ed. 578.

(2) Persons not parties can be heard originally in the federal supreme court as to the settlement of a decree entered on a mandate from the supreme court directing decree for reorganization of railroad terminal facilities violating Anti-Trust Act July 2, 1890, as far as it operates prejudicially to their rights.—United States v. Parties abiding by judgment

Rule applies, even though some of the parties may choose to abide by the judgment or decree sought to be modified or reversed.—Nash v. Harshman, Ohio, 13 S.Ct. 845, 149 U.S. 263, 37 L.Ed. 727.

3 C.J. p 1016 note 1.

Parties differently affected

Where a judgment is favorable to one or more codefendants, and adverse as to others, the latter should be joined in an appeal or writ of error brought by plaintiff to review the action in favor of the former.—Wilson v. Kiesel, Utah, 17 S.Ct. 124, 164 U.S. 248, 41 L.Ed. 422.

In proceedings for review by an intervener, or other indirect party, all the parties to the action, both plaintiff and defendant, should usually be made appellees or defendants in error.—Davis v. Mercantile Trust Co., Ohio, 14 S.Ct. 693, 152 U.S. 590, 38 L.Ed. 563.

Public officers

Where suit was brought against the state attorney general, a county district attorney, and the public service commission, the abolition of the public service commission made it unnecessary to make it a party to an appeal.—Newton v. Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, N.Y., 44 S.Ct. 481, 265 U.S. 78, 68 L.Ed. 909, setting aside dismissal of appeal 44 S.Ct. 401, 264 U.S. 571, 68 L.Ed. 855, and affirming, D.C., Consolidated Gas Co. of New York v. Newton, 291 F. 704.

Mere nominal parties, however, or parties who have no interests that can be affected by the judgment on appeal are neither necessary nor proper parties.—Amadeo v. Northern Assur. Co., Puerto Rico, 26 S.Ct. 507, 291 U.S. 194, 50 L.Ed. 722—Basket v. Hassell, Ind., 2 S.Ct. 415, 107 U.S. 602, 27 L.Ed. 500.

Transfer of interest, or death of party. Where the interests of a party to an appeal devolve on another, a person acquiring such interests will usually be allowed to be substituted in place of the original party, if the proper steps are taken.[47]

It was held that the death of a sole plaintiff in error prior to the assignment of error abated a writ of error,[48] although the death of a merely nominal plaintiff would not prevent the prosecution of a writ of error by the real parties in interest.[49]

An appeal will not abate by reason of the death of appellee before the taking of the appeal.[50] Where pending an appeal or writ of error, appellant or plaintiff in error dies, the appeal or writ is not abated;[51] but, where the judgment below is for defendant, and he dies pending appeal or writ of error prosecuted by plaintiff, the appellate proceedings will abate.[52] Where continuance or revival of an appeal is necessitated by the death of a party,[53] proceedings therefor must be instituted and maintained in the proper time and manner.[54]

Defects, objections, and amendments. Generally, the nonjoinder of parties, either as appellants or plaintiffs in error, or as appellees, respondents, or defendants in error, will have no further effect than to preclude any investigation or adjudication which will affect the rights and liabilities of the parties not joined, but will have this effect;[55] but, if the defect is jurisdictional, the writ of error or appeal will be dismissed.[56] An appeal or writ of error will be dismissed, on motion for a misjoinder of appellees, respondents, or defendants in error.[57] Such defects as those arising from the nonjoinder or misnomer of parties are usually amendable in the supreme court.[58]

Persons who were not parties below and who are not parties to the judgment need not and should not be joined, although interested in the judgment as rendered.—Brewster v. Wakefield, Minn., 22 How. 118, 16 L. Ed. 301—3 C.J. p 1017 note 12.

47. U.S.—Bowden v. Johnson, N.J., 2 S.Ct. 246, 107 U.S. 251, 27 L.Ed. 386.

Substitution permitted

(1) Assignee in bankruptcy for the bankrupt.—Herndon v. Howard, Tex., 9 Wall. 664, 19 L.Ed. 809, 40 How.Pr., N.Y., 288—3 C.J. p 1032 note 27.

(2) Successor of public officer.—Gorham Mfg. Co. v. Wendell, N.Y., 43 S.Ct. 318, 261 U.S. 1, 67 L.Ed. 505.

(3) Appeal is not to be dismissed in injunction suit against official body because some of its members had ceased to hold office pending the appeal where body as a whole maintained its official status and new members were substituted.—Irwin v. Wright, Ariz., 42 S.Ct. 293, 258 U.S. 219, 66 L.Ed. 573.

(4) Before substitution of successor corporation will be allowed, the circumstances under which the old corporation was dissolved and its successor appointed must be clearly shown to the court.—Oklahoma Natural Gas Co. v. State of Oklahoma, Okl., 47 S.Ct. 391, 273 U.S. 257, 71 L. Ed. 634.

Receivers of a state corporation, appointed by state court, will not be substituted as plaintiffs in error in stockholders' suit pending in supreme court, where four years previously a federal court in another state had appointed other receivers for such corporation.—United Copper Securities Co. v. Amalgamated Copper Co., N.Y., 37 S.Ct. 509, 244 U.S. 261, 61 L.Ed. 1119, affirming 223 F. 421, 139 C.C.A. 15.

48. U.S.—Green v. Watkins, Ky., 6 Wheat. 260, 5 L.Ed. 256.

49. U.S.—Amadeo v. Northern Assur. Co., Puerto Rico, 26 S.Ct. 507, 201 U.S. 194, 50 L.Ed. 722.

50. U.S.—Green v. Watkins, Ky., 6 Wheat. 260, 5 L.Ed. 256.

51. Sole appellant

The death of a sole appellant or plaintiff in error pending his appeal or writ of error will not abate the appeal or writ, particularly where the cause of action survives, but the legal representatives of such party will be permitted to prosecute the proceedings to final judgment.—Green v. Watkins, Ky., 6 Wheat. 260, 5 L.Ed. 256.

The death of one of several appellants or plaintiffs in error does not abate a suit or necessitate a revival of it in the appellate court; the cause survives to, and may be prosecuted by, the other plaintiffs in error.—McKinney v. Carroll, Ky., 12 Pet. 66, 9 L.Ed. 1002.

52. U.S.—Iron Gate Bank v. Brady, Va., 22 S.Ct. 529, 184 U.S. 665, 46 L.Ed. 739.

53. Death before appeal

Where a party to an action or suit dies before an appeal has been taken, it is required that there shall be a suggestion of such death and a revival of the action or suit in the name of the legal representatives of decedent as a condition precedent to proceedings for review.—Bigler v. Waller, Va., 12 Wall. 142, 20 L.Ed. 260.

54. U.S.—McClane v. Boon, Or., 6 Wall., 244, 18 L.Ed. 835.

Time for revival or substitution

Where not regulated by statute or by rules of court, the time within which proceedings for revival or substitution of parties are to be commenced is limited only by the discretion of the court.—Noonan v. Bradley, Wis., 12 Wall. 121, 20 L.Ed. 279—Phillips v. Preston, La., 11 How. 294, 13 L.Ed. 702—3 C.J. p 1028 note 89.

In what court prosecuted

Where the death of a party occurs after the appeal or writ of error has been taken, proceedings to substitute the representative of the decedent are properly taken in the supreme court.—Southern Pine Lumber Co. v. Ward, 28 S.Ct. 239, 208 U.S. 126, 52 L.Ed. 420, affirming 85 P. 459, 16 Okl. 131.

Privies may be substituted

f. Requisites and Proceedings for Transfer of Cause

(1) In general
(2) Application for, and allowance of, appeal
(3) Bond or security
(4) Notice, docketing, and appearance

(1) In General

Appeals to the supreme court must be taken and perfected in accordance with the acts of congress and the rules and practice of the court.

The taking and perfecting of proceedings for review by the supreme court of judgments, orders, or decrees are regulated by acts of congress and the rules and practice of the court,[59] and cross appeals are required to be taken, perfected, and prosecuted under the same conditions or circumstances and in the same manner as other appeals.[60]

A proceeding for the review of the action of a lower court must be taken within the prescribed statutory time,[61] and this rule applies to a second appeal, where the right thereto exists,[62] and to cross appeals.[63] While a justice of the supreme court may extend the time for applying for a writ of certiorari, no provision is expressly made with respect to incapacity of the parties with regard to the time to appeal although under prior statutes the term of disability was excluded in computing the time.[64] The statute prescribing limitations as to the time for taking appeals or proceedings for review starts to operate when entry of the final judgment, order, or decree takes place,[65] and it is the time of actual entry which determines the commencement of the period.[66] With respect to a judgment of reversal on appeal and judgment thereafter entered in the lower court pursuant to the decision on appeal, the time for appeal starts to run from the time of entry of the judgment in the appellate court.[67] If a motion or petition for rehearing, reargument, or new trial, or the like is made or presented properly and in due season, and is entertained by the court, the time does not begin to run until such motion or petition is disposed of, the judgment or decree not taking final effect for the purpose of review until that time,[68] and the same rule applies with respect to a motion to vacate or modify a judgment, order, or decree.[69]

An appeal or proceeding for review in the supreme court is deemed to have been taken and perfected within the statutes of limitation when the conditions precedent in the statutes or rules of the court prescribing the steps for taking and perfecting the same have been complied with, and not until then, and, therefore, whether it has been taken and perfected within the time limited depends on their terms and provisions.[70] It has been held that an appeal is not taken until it is in some way pre

Signifying intention
Where a party may appeal as of right, and he signifies his intention to appeal within the time allowed by statute, the statutory limitation ceases to affect the case.—U. S. v. Adams, Ct.Cl., 6 Wall. 101, 18 L.Ed. 792.

Mere petition insufficient
A petition for an appeal filed in the lower court without an allowance of the appeal by that court does not bring the case up before the supreme court.—Barrel v. Western Transp. Co., Ill., 3 Wall. 424, 18 L. Ed. 168.

sented to the court which made the decree appealed from, thereby putting an end to its jurisdiction over the cause,[71] and that this is done by filing the papers, namely, the petition and allowance of appeal, where there is such petition and allowance, the appeal bond, and the citation.[72] However, where the application for, or allowance of, an appeal ipso facto saves appellant from the bar of the statute, neither notice nor the issuing of the citation nor the giving of bond within the statutory time is jurisdictional,[73] but an appeal taken in open court becomes inoperative when not docketed in the supreme court before the end of the term to which it is made returnable.[74]

Statutes or rules of court which limit the time for appeals or proceedings for review are mandatory and jurisdictional,[75] and the time cannot be extended by the appellate court or a judge thereof or relief granted in case of a failure to proceed in time,[76] as by a nunc pro tunc entry of appeal or allowance thereof;[77] and hence, in the absence of express provision to the contrary, an appeal or proceeding for review which is not taken and perfected within time will be disallowed or dismissed.[78] However, if the appeal is prayed for or otherwise taken in due time, it is not dismissible because of a delay in its allowance.[79]

(2) Application for, and Allowance of, Appeal

A party must ordinarily apply for and obtain an order, within the time prescribed therefor, allowing an appeal to the supreme court.

Under the statutes and rules of the supreme court a party must ordinarily apply for and obtain an order allowing the appeal[80] within the time prescribed therefor,[81] and it has been held that the court cannot allow an appeal by a nunc pro tunc order after expiration of the time for appealing.[82] The application must be made to, and its allowance obtained from, the court, judge, or official designated by statute or rules of court,[83] and, where an appeal is given as a matter of right on compliance with prescribed conditions, the court has no discretion to refuse the appeal, but must grant it as a matter of course, leaving it for the appellate court to say whether it will lie.[84] While some appeals have been considered without any formal order of allowance,[85] the order allowing an appeal should conform to conditions prescribed by statutes or rules of the court.[86] When a statute or rule of court provides that, to entitle a party in certain causes to appeal, the lower court or judge shall make a prescribed certificate, as, for example, of importance, that a question of law is involved which ought to be reviewed, etc., a case within the class of causes specified is not appealable, and the appellate court can acquire no jurisdiction, without the proper certificate.[87] Also an appeal must be taken or the writ made returnable to the term of court or day prescribed by statute, and a failure to comply with the statute in this respect may be ground for dismissal.[88] However, if, by reason of

Color of authority
A motion to dismiss, on the ground that the writ of error and citation were not made returnable in time was denied, on the ground that, as appellant had color of authority from the court and a judge thereof, justice would be better served by dealing with the merits.—Beaumont v. If the parties appeal from the proceedings, an order allowing an appeal need not name individually all the appellees.—Richardson v. Green, Mich., 9 S.Ct. 443, 130 U.S. 104, 32 L.Ed. 872.

defects in the application or order of allowance or for other reasons, an attempted appeal or proceeding for review is ineffectual, the party may, as a general rule, abandon it and obtain another order of allowance within the time prescribed by statute.[89]

Under the general power of the court over its judgments, decrees, and orders, an order allowing an appeal may be revoked or vacated during the term at which it was made, as long as the appeal remains unperfected and the cause has not passed into the jurisdiction of the appellate court.[90]

In the absence of an affidavit of the inability of appellant to pay, the costs and fees of the officer of the supreme court for docketing and other services must be paid or secured in advance, or within a certain time fixed by statute or rule of court, or the officer may refuse to docket the case or the appeal may be dismissed.[91]

(3) Bond or Security

Ordinarily appellant must give a bond or other security on the taking of an appeal, and such bond or security must comply with statutory provisions and orders of the court.

In accordance with statutory requirements, except in cases brought by the United States or by direction of any department of the government,[92] appellant must ordinarily give a bond, recognizance, or undertaking for payment of costs on the taking of an appeal,[93] since, in the absence of express statutory provision, the fact of poverty or inability to procure sureties does not of itself relieve appellant from the necessity of giving an appeal bond or other security,[94] and statutes merely authorizing persons to sue in forma pauperis have been held not to extend to appeals.[95] However, while the appeal bond or undertaking is essential to the prosecution of the appeal, it has been held not essential to the validity of the appeal in such a sense as to prevent the appellate court from acquiring jurisdiction.[96]

The bond or other undertaking on appeal must comply with statutory provisions,[97] and, where a person appeals in forma pauperis, he must comply with statutory provisions and rules of court, and the affidavit or oath must be made by appellant.[98] The bond or undertaking should give the names of all the parties to the judgment,[99] and should run in favor of the appellee or appellees, or of the party or parties whose interest is adverse to that of the party or parties appealing.[1] It has been held that the bond need not be signed by all of several appellants, even though all must join in the appeal, but that it is sufficient if it appears to have been executed on behalf of all.[2] The bond or undertaking must be for the amount required by statute or fixed by the order of the court,[3] and the fixing of the amount of an appeal bond, when not fixed by statute, is a judicial act, generally within the discretion of the court.[4]

Sureties
A bond was held sufficient where the sureties were not bound jointly and severally for the full amount of the bond, but each of them severally for a specified part only, each being sufficient to the extent of his obligation.—New Orleans Ins. Co. v. E. D. Albro Co., La., 5 S.Ct. 289, 112 U.S. 506, 28 L.Ed. 809.

4. U.S.—Omaha Hotel Co. v.

An objection to an appeal bond should be taken by way of a preliminary motion to dismiss the appeal.[5]

To be sufficient the bond or undertaking must be approved by the judge or justice allowing the appeal,[6] and such power cannot be delegated to any authority other than that named in the statute.[7] In the absence of a statute or court rule requiring that the approval of an appeal bond or undertaking, or of the sureties thereon, shall be made in some prescribed form or mode, the approval need not be in explicit terms, but may be inferred from the facts of the transaction,[8] and where the bond or undertaking is received and filed without objection by the judge his approval will be presumed.[9] When exercising discretion vested in him, the action of a judge in approving a bond is conclusive[10] in the absence of a material change in the circumstances of the case or parties, or in the pecuniary condition of the sureties arising since approval.[11]

There must be a substantial compliance with the requirements of statutes or rules of court as to the manner of filing an appeal bond or undertaking.[12] The court may allow the bond or security to be filed after the time for taking the appeal has expired where the appeal was taken or allowed in time,[13] provided sufficient excuse for failure to file the same in proper time and due diligence are shown,[14] and a stipulation of the parties extending the time for filing an appeal bond has been held equivalent to an order of the same date renewing the allowance of the appeal.[15] However, appeals or proceedings for review have been dismissed where appellant failed to file his bond within a reasonable time.[16]

When an appeal bond is defective in form or substance, but not void so as to deprive the court of jurisdiction, the court may allow an amendment to correct the deficiency, or the filing of a new bond,[17] but the lower court cannot require an amendment of the bond or a new bond after it has lost jurisdiction by perfection of the appeal.[18]

(4) Notice, Docketing, and Appearance

Generally a citation should be issued and served on appellee on the taking of an appeal, and the appeal must be entered or docketed within the time specified. A general appearance will cure defects in the form of process.

Where an appeal is allowed in open court and perfected during the term at which the decree or judgment appealed from was rendered, no citation is necessary,[19] but, if the appeal is not perfected until after the term, a citation must be issued to bring in the parties, unless they voluntarily appear or waive the citation,[20] and, a fortiori, a citation is one of the necessary elements of an appeal taken after the term when the judgment or decree was rendered.[21]

The citation should comply with statutes and rules of court[22] with respect to the return day,[23] and must be signed by a judge of the lower court or by a justice of the supreme court,[24] and should be properly served,[25] within the time prescribed by statute,[26] on appellee or his attorney if not in some manner personally waived by one of them.[27]

As a rule, errors or defects in the citation or other process, or in the return thereon, which are not imputable to appellant or plaintiff in error, or which are not prejudicial, are not cause for the dismissal of the appeal or writ, but, on a proper and timely application to the court, amendments will be allowed, or a new or alias citation or other process granted.[28]

The citation on appeal may be waived by appellee or by his attorney[29] by express stipulation or agreement.[30] It has been held therefore that no citation is necessary in a case where, in point of fact, by agreement of parties, actual notice of an intention to appeal appears on the record.[31]

Entry or docketing. The appeal or proceedings for review must be entered or docketed[32] within the time specified,[33] and in the absence of a waiver thereof[34] the appeal may be dismissed[35] or the judgment affirmed.[36] The court may permit the appeal to be entered or docketed after the time has expired,[37] as where the delay was due to the neglect or error of the court or the clerk,[38] or to fraud,[39] ignorance of the rules,[40] or alleged oversight;[41] but an entry nunc pro tunc will not be permitted where a large number of cases have intervened.[42]

Payment of the docket or other fees, or security therefor, is usually made a condition precedent to the procurement of an entry, and where the fees are not prepaid or secured the clerk is justified in refusing to docket the appeal.[43]

Appearance in appellate court. It is generally of no importance to appellant whether an appearance for appellee is or is not entered on the record, for, if appellant is entitled to his appeal, and has prosecuted it according to law, the refusal or omission of appellee to appear will not delay a hearing, and a judgment against him will be as conclusive as though an appearance had been entered on the docket,[44] but when a case is called and neither appellant nor appellee appears it is usual to dismiss the appeal.[45] An appearance by an attorney must be authorized by his client,[46] and, although the court

Proof of service

In some jurisdictions a citation on appeal or error is no part of the record, and the fact of its having been issued and served may be proved aliunde.—Innerarity v. Byrne, 5 How. 295, 12 L.Ed. 159.

3 C.J. p 1213 note 65.

However, it has been held that jurisdiction of the appeal is not defeated by failure to obtain a citation within the time allowed for taking an appeal, and the court has allowed a citation to issue after such time on a showing of a sufficient excuse for the delay.—Mendenhall v. Hall, La., 10 S.Ct. 616, 134 U.S. 559, 33 L.Ed. 1012—Evans v. State Nat. Bank of New Orleans, La., 10 S.Ct. 493, 134 U.S. 330, 33 L.Ed. 917—Dayton v. By approval of bond

The filing of an appeal or supersedeas bond, and the approval of such bond in open court by appellees' counsel, have been held to afford notice to appellee and to do away with the necessity of a citation.—Goodwin v. Fox, Ill., 7 S.Ct. 779, 120 U.S. 775, 30 L.Ed. 815.

may allow an appearance to be withdrawn in a proper case, leave to withdraw an appearance has been held not to authorize a motion to dismiss the appeal.[47] A general appearance will cure defects in the form of process,[48] but a special appearance for the sole purpose of moving to dismiss for want of jurisdiction is not a waiver of objections.[49]

g. Effect of Transfer of Cause or Proceedings Therefor

On perfection of an appeal to the supreme court, the jurisdiction of the lower court ceases, although it may make orders relating to collateral matters looking to a continuance of the status quo.

Although the jurisdiction of the cause remains in the trial court until the appeal is perfected,[50] yet as soon as that has been done the jurisdiction of the supreme court attaches, and that of the trial court ceases,[51] and the supreme court has exclusive power and authority over the subject matter of the appellate proceeding.[52] However, the lower court may make up the record in due form,[53] and during the trial term the lower court may perfect its judgment or decree[54] and correct obvious mistakes.[55] While a judgment or decree, except in so far as its execution is stayed on appeal, remains in force and is binding on the parties as to every question directly decided until it is reversed or set aside,[56] an appeal, as a rule, does not stay further proceedings in the lower court with reference to rights not passed on or affected by the order or decree appealed from, but only such as affect the execution or operation of such order or decree,[57] and the lower court has power to make orders looking to a continuance of the status quo.[58] Also the pendency of an appellate proceeding does not deprive the trial court of power to hear and determine matters which are independent of, or collateral to, the subject matter before the appellate court,[59] but the lower court cannot take such action as will be, in effect, an execution of its judgment or will destroy the subject of the appeal or place the funds involved where they will be beyond the control of the ultimate judgment or decree.[60]

h. Supersedeas or Stay of Proceedings

A supersedeas or stay of proceedings pending an appeal can be had only on compliance with the terms and conditions prescribed by statutes and rules of court, but when granted it suspends all further proceedings tending to enforce the judgment, order, or decree.

Ordinarily an appeal has no effect as a supersedeas,[61] and a supersedeas or stay can be had only on a compliance with the terms and conditions prescribed by the statutes and rules of court.[62]

Punishing violation of injunction

Where an appeal from a decree enjoining defendant from doing an act does not suspend the operation of the injunction, or where the lower court properly continues an injunction or grants a restraining order pending an appeal, it is usually held that the doing of the act enjoined may be punished by the lower court as a contempt notwithstanding the appeal.—Merrimack River Sav. Taking appeal in time

To entitle appellant to a supersedeas or stay, the appeal must gen-

An appeal from an order or decree granting or dissolving an injunction does not disturb its operative force, even where the party complaining of it has given a bond or undertaking and otherwise complied in all respects with the general requirements for a supersedeas or stay of proceedings.[63] A fortiori the prosecution of an appeal cannot operate as an injunction where none has been granted, as in the case of an appeal from a decree dismissing a bill for an injunction or from an order denying a preliminary injunction.[64] However, even in the case of appeals from such orders or decrees, the lower court or the supreme court has the power, in order to preserve the status quo pending the appeal or to prevent irreparable injury or multiplicity of suits, to issue a supersedeas or stay or to suspend, modify, grant, or continue an injunction.[65]

Allowance by court. Either the lower or the supreme court, according to the circumstances, has power to grant a supersedeas or stay of proceedings pending an appeal,[66] and this power has been held to be inherent in the courts.[67] While a supersedeas or stay is generally allowed as a matter of course on compliance by appellant with prescribed conditions,[68] the court cannot grant a supersedeas or stay in a case which is not within the statute or in the absence of compliance with prescribed conditions.[69]

Bond or security. In accordance with statutory provisions and rules of court, a bond or undertaking must be given in order to obtain or effect a supersedeas or stay pending appeal.[70] Such bond or undertaking must ordinarily be given within the time prescribed,[71] and must conform substantially to the requirements of the statute and orders of the court.[72] Where the court is authorized and required to fix the amount of the bond, it should fix such an amount as will give full protection,[73] but a condition imposed in addition to those required by statute has been held void.[74] The bond or undertaking should sufficiently identify the judgment, order or decree appealed from,[75] and must be prop-erally be taken or allowed by the court in the manner and within the time prescribed by statute or rule of court.—Title Guaranty & Surety Co. v. U. S. to Use of General Electric Co., supra—Kitchen v. Randolph, Pa., 93 U.S. 86, 23 L.Ed. 810—3 C. J. p 1275 note 71.

Notice of application
Except in extraordinary circumstances, notice should be given opposing counsel of an application for an injunction pending appeal from an order denying an interlocutory injunction.—Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Louisiana Public Service Commission, La., 43 S.Ct. 75, 260 U.S. 212, 67 L.Ed. 217.

Application referred to lower court
The supreme court will generally refer applications for injunction pending appeal from the denial of an interlocutory injunction to the court of three judges who heard the application and are familiar with the record.—Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Louisiana Public Service Commission, supra.

Effect of order
The action of the district court, consisting of three judges, denying an application for an interlocutory injunction, in granting an injunction pending an appeal, will not revive or vitalize a void order previously granted by a single judge.—Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Louisiana Public Service Commission, supra.

Amount held insufficient
Where a defendant against whom a judgment for fourteen thousand dollars was affirmed by the state court procured a review with a supersedeas bond in the sum of two thousand dollars only, which, however, provided that it should not affect the liability on the bond for an appeal to the state court, the supersedeas will be vacated unless a bond for twenty thousand dollars is given by plaintiff in error.—Missouri Pac. erly approved by the court,[76] but defects may be corrected in a proper case,[77] or permission may be given to file new or additional security.[78]

Modification of stay. On a proper showing an order granting a supersedeas or stay of proceedings may be modified or vacated and set aside on motion in the lower court before it has lost jurisdiction, or in the supreme court after it has acquired jurisdiction.[79] Thus a supersedeas or stay may be set aside and vacated on a showing that it has been improperly issued or ordered,[80] or that it has been obtained by fraud,[81] or, as a general rule, where the supersedeas or stay bond or undertaking is insufficient,[82] but it will not be modified or vacated on motion, where no necessity or good reason therefor is shown.[83] An application to modify or vacate a supersedeas may and should be made by motion to dismiss the order,[84] and it has been held that the propriety of an order granting a supersedeas cannot be considered on a motion to dismiss the appeal.[85]

Operation and effect. A supersedeas suspends all further proceedings on the judgment, order, or decree appealed from and prevents the enforcement thereof in whole or in part pending the appeal,[86] but as a general rule a supersedeas or stay operates from, and only from, the time of the completion of those acts which are requisite to call it into existence.[87] Ordinarily it does not reverse, annul, or undo what has already been done,[88] but, while it does not discharge a previous levy or the lien thereby acquired, it does suspend further proceedings under such levy or lien.[89] However, the supersedeas or stay is confined to proceedings in the suit in which the judgment, order, or decree is rendered or made, and to such as are based on, or touch the enforcement or carrying into effect of, that judgment, order, or decree appealed from,[90] and it does not discharge interlocutory orders made for the preservation of the property or protection of the rights and interests of the parties pending the litigation[91] or prevent the prosecution of collateral or independent actions or proceedings.[92]

Proceedings in violation of a supersedeas or stay may be vacated or set aside,[93] and, where a stay is perfected by the execution of the bond as prescribed by statute, if the trial court undertakes to proceed to exercise an unauthorized jurisdiction pending such stay it may be restrained by a writ of prohibition.[94]

Liability on bonds. Generally the rights, liabilities, and obligations of a surety on a bond given on appeal to the supreme court are governed by applicable statutes and rules of the court.[95]

Suit to enjoin enforcement of judgment

Pendency of an appeal with a supersedeas or stay to reverse a judgment does not prevent a suit to enjoin enforcement of the judgment on grounds independent of the merits of the original controversy.—Johnson v. St. Louis, I. M & S. R. Co., Ark., 12 S.Ct. 124, 141 U.S. 602, 35 L.Ed. 875.

95. Penalty of bond

Recovery may be had on an appeal bond to the extent of the penalty of the bond together with interest.—'ves v. Merchant's Bank of Boston, R. I., 12 How., U.S., 159, 13 L.Ed. 936.

i. Record and Proceedings Not of Record

(1) Matters to be shown by record
(2) Scope and contents of record
(3) Necessity of bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts
(4) Contents, making, and settlement of bill of exceptions
(5) Contents, making, and settlement of statement of facts
(6) Report by trial judge of facts found
(7) Making, form, and requisites of transcript of record
(8) Authentication and certification
(9) Printing, transmission, and filing of record
(10) Defects, objections, amendments, and corrections
(11) Conclusiveness and effect of record
(12) Questions presented for review
(13) Matters not apparent of record

(1) Matters to Be Shown by Record

The record on appeal to, or review by, the supreme court must affirmatively show the taking of all steps and the existence of all facts necessary to confer jurisdiction on such court. It must show the jurisdiction of the lower court, the rendition of an appealable judgment, order, or decree, the objection to proceedings in the lower court, the ruling of the court thereon, and the saving of an exception to such ruling.

The record, on an appeal to the supreme court, must show affirmatively the proper taking of all the steps and the existence of all the facts necessary to confer jurisdiction on such court.[96] It must show the rendition and entry in the lower court of an appealable judgment, decree, or order, presenting a final adjudication against appellant as to some right claimed by him,[97] and the judgment, order, or decree under review must be set out in the record proper, and its absence is not supplied by a mere recital in the bill of exceptions, or other part of the record, that judgment has been entered.[98]

Jurisdictional amount. The record must show affirmatively that the amount or value of the thing or matter in controversy is sufficient to confer appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court;[99] and, while a stipulation of the parties as to the amount is not controlling, it may in the discretion of the court be regarded, with reference to the other facts appearing in the record of the particular case, as sufficient proof of the amount in controversy to sustain its jurisdiction.[1]

Jurisdiction of lower court. The record must show that the lower court had jurisdiction of the

Damages

(1) Where the bond secures a stay of execution or supersedeas, a condition to pay damages and costs may include the amount of the judgment. —Jerome v. McCarter, Mich., 21 Wall. 17, 22 L.Ed. 515—Catlett v. Brodie, D.C., 9 Wheat. 553, 6 L.Ed. 158—4 C.J. p 1291 note 14.

(2) The liability on the bond may cover damages not awarded by the supreme court where the bond is conditioned for the payment of damages resulting from the appeal.—Omaha Hotel Co. v. Kountze, Neb., 2 S. Ct. 911, 107 U.S. 378, 27 L.Ed. 609—Catlett v. Brodie, supra.

(3) There is ordinarily no liability on an appeal bond for a reasonable attorney's fee paid by appellee to his attorney for the appeal, such a liability not being included in a condition to pay damages.—Wayne County Sup'rs v. Kennicott, Ill., 103 U.S. 554, 26 L.Ed. 486—4 C.J. p 1296 note 96.

Foreclosure of liens

(1) If the action is wholly in rem, to subject a specific property or fund to the satisfaction of a claim, as in foreclosure of mortgages or other liens, and no personal judgment for a deficiency is entered, an appeal bond conditioned to satisfy the judgment is not security for such deficiency; such a bond does not cover the rents and profits of such property or fund, but only the deterioration or loss thereof because of the appeal; nor does it cover the value of the use of the mortgaged property pending the appeal.—Omaha Hotel Co. v. Kountze, Neb., 2 S.Ct. 911, 107 U.S. 378, 27 L.Ed. 609—4 C.J. p 1291 note 24.

(2) However, recovery may be had for use of the property where the appeal is from an order confirming a foreclosure sale and directing the immediate execution and delivery of a deed to the purchaser.—Woodworth v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., Mo., 22 S.Ct. 676, 185 U.S. 354, 46 L.Ed. 945, following Brown v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co., Neb., 119 F. 148, 55 C.C.A. 654.

Filing petition for appeal

Where the record shows the filing of a petition for an appeal, its allowance, the filing and approval of a bond containing a recital that appellant had obtained an appeal and filed a copy thereof in the clerk's office, and the service and filing of the citation, it sufficiently shows that the appeal as allowed was duly filed.—Harkrader v. case,[2] and if the requisite jurisdiction is anywhere expressly averred in the record, or facts are therein stated which in legal intendment constitutes such an allegation, the jurisdiction will be sustained.[3]

Proceedings sustaining judgment, order, or decree. Where there was a trial without the intervention of a jury, the record on appeal must disclose the trial judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law;[4] but this rule does not apply where the appeal is from an adjudication on a claim under a special act of congress, which requires the lower court to exercise equity jurisdiction.[5] It is usually required that the findings of fact and the conclusions of law when contained in the record, should be stated separately,[6] and a defect in the record in this respect is not cured by the fact that the record contains the evidence.[7] Where the right to trial by jury must be expressly waived, the written stipulation of the parties waiving the jury must appear in the record.[8]

Evidence. The evidence in the court below, in an equity proceeding, generally should be made a part of the record on appeal to the supreme court;[9] but it is not necessary that the record show the evidence in a cause which was disposed of on demurrer.[10]

Grounds of review and presentation and reservation thereof. It is the duty of the complaining party clearly and affirmatively to show by the appellate record that prejudicial error was committed in the court below,[11] and such error will not be inferred from a doubtful statement in the record.[12] The record must show that the question sought to be reviewed was presented to, and passed on by, the trial court,[13] that a specific and timely objection was taken to the proceeding deemed erroneous and a ruling obtained thereon,[14] and that a proper and timely exception to the ruling complained of was saved,[15] and that the exception was specific where it is required to be so.[16] In accordance with these rules, where such error is assigned for review, the record must show proper and timely objection, and exception saved, to the ruling of the court with respect to presumptions,[17] the admission or exclusion of evidence,[18] and that the party complaining was prejudiced or aggrieved thereby;[19] the giving or refusing of instructions,[20] to rulings on motions,[21] and to the judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law.[22] An alleged failure to give a certain instruction is not available on review unless the record discloses a timely and proper request therefor.[23] Exceptions to the report of a master or referee must, as a rule, be incorporated in the record.[24]

(2) Scope and Contents of Record

The record ordinarily consists of the enrolled proceedings and facts of the case, and does not include matters which are not on the record proper unless they are brought in by bill of exceptions or other appropriate means.

The record ordinarily consists of substantially a written history of the enrolled proceedings or facts, from the beginning to the end of the case,[25] and does not include other matters which are not a part of the record proper, unless they are brought in by bill of exceptions or other appropriate means.[26]

Process and appearance. Where the record shows a denial of the right to proceed and the grounds therefor, by defendant who claims that he was never served and never appeared generally, it is not necessary that it be shown by the bill of exceptions even though defendant went to trial on the merits.[27] Withdrawal of appearance is sufficiently made a part of the record on appeal by being put therein by a bill of exceptions or something which is equivalent.[28]

The opinion of the lower court is no part of the record,[29] and the fact that it is required by statute or rule of the supreme court to be annexed to and transmitted with the record does not of itself make it a part of the record.[30] Accordingly the opinion of a state court ordinarily constitutes no part of the record on appeal to the supreme court of the United States;[31] but it has been held that such opinion may be examined, in connection with other portions of the record, to ascertain whether the judgment or decree appealed from involves a federal question within the reviewing power of the supreme court.[32]

That proper objections were seasonably made must be shown by the record, where error is assigned to the giving of certain instructions by the trial judge.—Hutchins v. King, N.H., 1 Wall. 53, 17 L.Ed. 544.

21. U.S.—Eastman Kodak Co. v. Gray, Pa., 54 S.Ct. 722, 292 U.S. 332, 78 L.Ed. 1291, reversing, C.C.A., Gray v. Eastman Kodak Co., 67 F.2d 190, certiorari granted Eastman Kodak Co. v. Motion for judgment

Transcript showing docket entry opposite date before case was submitted to court without jury by stipulation that plaintiff's motion for judgment on verdict and assessment of treble damages was filed was insufficient to show that a motion for judgment on whole record was duly presented and overruled accompanied by adequate exceptions.—Eastman Kodak Co. v. Gray, supra.

Where a motion for new trial is in question, the record should show the trial judge's ruling or order on the motion, and the grounds on which the motion was granted or refused.—Poydras de la Lande v. Louisiana, La., 18 How. 192, 15 L.Ed. 350.

Appeals from inferior federal courts

The opinion of the court is not made a part of the record in a case coming from the district court of the United States by a statute of the state in which the court sits.—Parks v. Turner, La., 12 How. 39, 13 L.Ed. 883.

In Louisiana the opinion of the court is a part of the record, and in cases coming to the United States supreme court on error from the su-

Stipulations of the parties are not ordinarily a part of the record unless brought into the record by bill of exceptions or some substitute therefor;[33] and, moreover, as a general rule the parties cannot, by stipulation, make or add to the record of the court,[34] or present for consideration a question different from that which appears by the record to have been decided in the court below.[35]

An agreed statement of facts may be equivalent to a special verdict or a finding of facts on which the reviewing court may declare the applicable law, if such statement is of the ultimate facts,[36] but not where it is merely a recital of testimony or evidential facts.[37]

Evidence introduced on a trial is not ordinarily a part of the record, and will not be considered on appeal, unless embodied in a bill of exceptions, case-made, or statement, or some statutory substitute therefor;[38] and this rule applies to documentary evidence,[39] such as affidavits[40] and depositions.[41] In an equity suit, testimony which has been objected to and ruled out will not be excluded from the record on appeal in passing on the ruling.[42] A demurrer to the evidence, and the action of the court thereon, makes the evidence a part of the record.[43]

Instructions ordinarily form no part of the record but may be made so by bill of exceptions or other appropriate means;[44] and it is well settled that objections to instructions, given or refused, will not be considered on appeal where such instructions do not appear of record.[45]

A special verdict has the effect of incorporating facts into the record and a bill of exceptions is not necessary to make it a part thereof.[46]

Findings of the court, on issues tried by it, are a part of the record proper,[47] unless they have been filed after the expiration of the time allowed by law.[48]

Intermediate appeals. Whatever is matter of record in the intermediate court constitutes a part of the record on appeal to the supreme court without a bill of exceptions,[49] and accordingly the judgment of the court appealed from is always a part of the record of the case.[50]

Official certificates. A certificate of the clerk, made without legal authority, cannot bring into the record matters which are not properly there in the mode prescribed by law.[51]

(3) Necessity of Bill of Exceptions, Case, or Statement of Facts

A bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts generally is necessary only for the review of errors, occurring during the trial below, which are not apparent on the record proper, and ordinarily is not necessary in an equity case. No substitute is allowable for a bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts except as authorized by statute.

Where the error sought to be remedied appears on the record, the party aggrieved may avail himself of it on appeal without bill of exceptions,[52] and accordingly a bill of exceptions is not necessary to raise questions of jurisdiction apparent on the record.[53]

On the other hand, rulings and decisions of the lower court, the correctness of which cannot be determined from the record proper, must be made a part of the transcript or record on appeal by a bill of exceptions in order to secure their review by the supreme court;[54] and, unless such rulings of the lower court, the correctness of which cannot be determined from the record proper, are thus made a part of the record on appeals, the supreme court will consider only those errors that are shown by the judgment roll or record proper.[55] Accordingly, a bill of exceptions, settled and allowed in accordance with the requirements of law, is indispensable to the presentation of errors alleged to have occurred during the trial of the cause, but which do not appear upon the face of the record, together with the grounds of objection to the rulings or decision complained of;[56] and this has been held necessary to the review of decisions of the lower court upon questions of law arising on the trial,[57] as where error is assigned to rulings admitting or excluding evidence[58] or to rulings giving or refusing instructions.[59]

Where case was tried by court, without jury, a bill of exceptions is the appropriate remedy by a party aggrieved by any ruling of the court which would affect the conclusions of fact, as on the admission or rejection of evidence,[60] and if there is no bill of exceptions the only question for review is whether the pleadings and findings sustain the judgment.[61]

In equity all pleadings, evidence, rulings, and decrees are part of the record, and therefore need not be set forth in a bill of exceptions or statement of facts in order to present them on appeal;[62] and a bill of exceptions cannot be taken on the trial of a feigned issue directed by a court of equity,[63] or, if taken, it can be used only on a motion for new trial made to such court.[64]

Presentation of exceptions taken. Where exceptions to the court's rulings do not appear on the face of the record, a party desiring a review in the supreme court must prepare his bill of exceptions, incorporating all exceptions taken to the rulings of the trial court which he wishes to have reviewed;[65] as in the case of exceptions to the granting or refusing of instructions;[66] and where a bill of exceptions is the proper place for such exceptions to appear, it is insufficient if they are shown only by other parts of the record, or by the record proper.[67] Where an election is made to change a case into a bill of exceptions or special verdict, but no change is in fact made, the supreme court has no record on which to review the action of the lower court, and it is its duty either to dismiss the writ or affirm the judgment of the court below.[68]

Substitutes. Unless authorized by statute, no substitute is allowable for a bill of exceptions, and if matter is brought into the record otherwise than in an authorized manner it will be disregarded.[69] Under the acts of congress defining the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, it has been held that there may be substituted for a formal bill of exceptions a finding of facts, or agreed statement of the ultimate facts;[70] but the necessity of a bill of exceptions cannot be dispensed with by an affidavit or deposition[71] or by a signed entry in the minutes of the court.[72] Unless authorized by statute, or by virtue of a stipulation to that effect, a statement made on a motion for a new trial cannot, where no appeal is taken from the order denying the motion, be used as a statement on appeal from the judgment.[73]

Effect of failure to make or file bill, case, or statement. Where appellant fails to make a bill of exceptions, prepared and settled as required by law, the order, judgment, or decree appealed from ordinarily should be affirmed.[74] Where, on an appeal from the supreme court of a territory, no statement of the facts is presented in the record, and the record does not show whether the facts found were sufficient to sustain the judgment rendered, and there were no exceptions taken to the rulings in the admission or rejection of evidence, no question is presented to the court for review.[75] Where, however, the court of the territory determined the case on findings of fact and law together with a statement of the evidence, which statement is not embodied in the record on appeal to the United States supreme court, the latter court may determine the case on the sufficiency of the findings in connection with the pleadings.[76] An original bill of exceptions signed by the trial judge, indorsed by the clerk as properly filed in the trial court, and by the clerk of the territorial supreme court as properly filed therein, may be used in the United States supreme court.[77]

(a) In General

A bill of exceptions brings into the record matters which otherwise would not be a part thereof, and presents specific questions of law for review. It usually should be in the form prescribed by statute or rule of court, but informalities or irregularities may be disregarded. It should embrace only matters necessary to present the question of law sought to be reviewed, include evidence adduced at the trial material to the exceptions involved, and specifically point out the action or error complained of and the grounds of objection thereto.

The office or purpose of a bill of exceptions is to preserve in, and make a part of, the record such matters as transpire in the progress of a trial, which otherwise would not become a part thereof.[78] It cannot be used to bring up the whole case,[79] but must be confined to some particular point or question to which exception was taken pending the trial,[80] and generally can be used to present only questions of law which it is wished to have reviewed.[81]

Under Sup.Ct.Rules, rule 8 par 1, the party excepting must state distinctly the several matters of law in the court's charge to which he excepts.—Hanna v. Maas, Mich., 7 S. Ct. 1055, 122 U.S. 24, 30 L.Ed. 1117.

Form and number. A bill of exceptions ordinarily may and must be in the form prescribed by the applicable statute or rule of court;[82] and if it is defective in any material part it cannot be supplied by any intendment of the court.[83] However, it is generally held that statutes relating to bills of exceptions are remedial in their nature and must be liberally construed,[84] and that whatever brings upon the record, properly verified by the attestation of the judge, the matters of fact occurring at the trial on which the point of law arises which enters into the ruling and decision of the court excepted to, answers sufficiently the description of a proper bill of exceptions,[85] although it is designated by another name, such as "a case and exceptions."[86]

It is the usual practice to include all the exceptions taken on the trial in one bill of exceptions and it is not necessary that a separate bill be made to each ruling or decision.[87]

Contents in general. Although the ultimate decision as to what the bill should contain rests with the trial judge,[88] a bill of exceptions may and must embrace all matters material to the question of law raised by the exception taken;[89] immaterial and unnecessary matters should not be incorporated in the bill.[90]

Incorporating evidence. So much of the evidence given on the trial as may be necessary to present the legal questions raised and noted should be carried into the bill,[91] and this may be done by referring to the evidence so as to make it a part of the record,[92] or, in accordance with the Supreme Court Rules, rule 8 paragraph 2, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 354, the evidence may be reduced to a summarized or narrative statement.[93] The bill should contain all of the evidence where it is essential to a consideration of the error or exception involved.[94]

A document which has been admitted in evidence may be contained in the bill of exceptions by attaching and identifying it as an exhibit and incorporating it by unmistakable reference.[95]

Showing as to grounds of objection and exceptions. Generally a bill of exceptions must specify the action, decision, or ruling complained of, and point out the alleged error therein, and ground of objection thereto,[96] for errors not apparent of record which are not shown in a bill of exceptions will

(b) Settlement of Bill in General

A bill of exceptions ordinarily is prepared by the appellant or exceptant, and served on the opposite party, and may be settled and allowed only by the judge who presided at the trial at which the proceedings or rulings excepted to were had.

As a general rule, the duty, in the first instance, is on appellant or exceptant, or his attorney, to reduce the exceptions and matters connected therewith to writing in the proper form of a bill of exceptions,[99] and to deliver the bill to the opposite party or his counsel for inspection and correction.[1] The settling and allowance, that is, determining the contents and correctness of a bill of exceptions, is a judicial act to be performed by the exercise of judicial power,[2] and accordingly a bill of exceptions may be settled and allowed only by the judge or judicial officer designated by statute.[3] Under the express provisions of Revised Statutes § 953, 28 U.S.C.A. § 776, ordinarily it may be settled and signed only by the judge who presided at the trial at which the proceedings or rulings excepted to were had,[4] or, if more than one sat, by the presiding judge,[5] and the parties cannot by agreement or stipulation authorize or validate a bill signed by another than such judge.[6] Under this statute, as amended by Act June 5, 1900, c 717 § 1, if the trial judge, by reason of his death, sickness, or other disability, is unable to allow and sign the bill, such duty may be performed by his successor in office.[7]

(c) Time of Settlement

A bill of exceptions ordinarily may be settled and allowed only during the term of court at which the trial was had and judgment rendered, unless a further time is allowed by an order of court or agreement of the parties, entered or made during the term, or by a standing rule of court.

Generally a bill of exceptions should be presented to the trial judge and settled and signed during the term of court at which the trial was had and judgment rendered,[8] or within a further time, after the term, allowed by order of court entered at that term,[9] or by consent of the parties given during the term,[10] or by a standing rule of court.[11] After the term has expired, without the time for settling and

Silence not consent

The silence of counsel for the appellee when a proposed bill of exceptions is presented to the court after the close of the term, and after it has lost all judicial power over the record, does not show consent by the appellee to the filing and allowance of the bill nunc pro tunc.—Jennings v. allowing the bill having been extended by order or rule of court, or consent of the parties, the court has no authority to settle and allow a bill of exceptions, then first presented, and if it does so the bill is invalid and cannot be considered[12] unless extraordinary circumstances excuse the delay,[13] or where the application of the general rule that the trial judge cannot sign and allow a bill of exceptions after the expiration of the trial term would work injustice, and the party seeking relief is without fault.[14] After the term at which judgment was rendered has expired, without the time for filing a bill of exceptions having been extended by order of court or agreement of the parties, jurisdiction cannot be restored by a subsequent agreement of the parties extending the time.[15] Where the time has been extended by order of court, the bill must be presented for settlement and filed within the extended time ordered, and, if not presented within such time, allowance thereof may properly be refused by the court, or, if allowed and filed, it does not become a part of the record and will not be considered on appeal.[16]

Under strict common-law practice each exception should be reduced to the form of a bill when taken, and tendered, settled, and signed by the trial judge on the trial before verdict, or before the jury were discharged;[17] but, to meet the convenience of bench and bar, the practice obtained of allowing the bill to be reduced to form and signed after trial or judgment,[18] although the bill in such cases should, however, be signed nunc pro tunc, and purport to be actually in form as though signed during the trial.[19]

In vacation. A trial judge has no authority, in vacation, to extend the time fixed for filing of exceptions.[20]

(d) Mandamus to Compel Settlement; Review

Mandamus may issue from the supreme court to compel the trial court to settle and sign a bill of exceptions which he has erroneously refused to settle and sign.

If the trial court erroneously refuses to settle and sign a true bill of exceptions, a writ of mandamus may be issued by the supreme court to compel it to settle and sign the bill,[21] to effectuate the supreme court's own jurisdiction of the cause on review.[22] As a general rule, however, the writ will not issue to control the judge in the exercise of his judicial discretion, by directing him to decide in a particular way what the bill shall contain. A peremptory writ will not lie to compel the judge to settle the very bill presented,[23] but it has been held that, where the judge has refused to authenticate a particular bill, fair and truthful on its face, actually presented to him, an alternative writ may issue requiring him to authenticate it or to show in his return the reasons why he does not do so.[24] Mandamus has been held not to lie to compel a judge to settle and sign a bill of exceptions where the judge asserts that it contains erroneous or untruthful matter, or where he returns that the bill presented is incorrect.[25]

Where the bill of exceptions has been partially settled by the judge, but, by stipulation of the counsel for the parties, and to suit the convenience of the judge, the matter is postponed and the bill is not signed until after the beginning of the term of the supreme court at which the case is returnable, and during a term of the lower court succeeding that at which the case was tried, it will not be stricken from the record because not allowed and signed in time.—Davis v. Mandamus will not be granted to compel the judge to resettle a bill of exceptions, on affidavits that the bill of exceptions as settled and signed by him was incorrect, where a motion in the lower court for such resettlement has been denied.—In re Streep, N.Y., 15 S.Ct. 358, 156 U.S. 207, 39 L.Ed. 399.

A judge need not make oath to his return of the reasons why he refused to sign a bill of exceptions, and his return to an alternative writ of mandamus to show cause why he should not be compelled to settle and sign a bill of exceptions, which states a good reason for his refusal to do so, is conclusive, as, for example, a return stating that his refusal was because the bill did not state the facts truly.[26]

Review. A refusal to settle a bill of exceptions cannot be assigned as error for review where the judge has signed a bill of exceptions taken to his decision refusing to sign one.[27]

(e) Amendment and Correction of Bill

A bill of exceptions may be amended or corrected by the trial judge so as to make it conform to the facts, if application therefor is seasonably made.

The trial court or judge has power, on an application seasonably made, to amend or correct a bill of exceptions, so as to conform to the facts,[28] and such an amendment may be made after the end of the term,[29] and even after an appeal bond has been given and approved.[30] On the other hand, it has been held that any fault or omission in framing the bill, being the act of the party and not of the court, cannot be amended after the expiration of the term at which it is filed.[31] The supreme court cannot correct errors or omissions made in the trial court in framing a bill of exceptions;[32] but it can take cognizance of amendments made below when a proper application for a certiorari has been made and granted, and the amended record sent up in accordance therewith.[33]

(5) Contents, Making, and Settlement of Statement of Facts

A case or statement of facts must state only the ultimate facts, presenting questions of law, and must be settled and signed, and filed, within the time prescribed therefor.

A case made or statement of facts, filed in addition to or as a substitute for a bill of exceptions, see supra subdivision i (3) of this section, must state the ultimate facts of the case, presenting questions of law only,[34] and must not be a mere recital of evidence or circumstances which may tend to prove the ultimate facts, or from which they may be inferred, as such a recital brings nothing before the supreme court for consideration.[35] The case or statement made must be settled and signed by the trial judge and filed within the time prescribed by statute or rule of court, such as before the expiration of the term; otherwise it does not become a part of the record and will not be considered by the supreme court.[36]

(6) Report by Trial Judge of Facts Found

A statement or report by the trial judge of the facts found by him must be of the ultimate facts.

Where, as required or authorized by some statutes, a statement or finding of facts is prepared and filed by the lower court on appeal to the supreme court, as where the parties do not agree on a statement of facts,[37] the statement or finding filed by the court must be of the ultimate facts, and not merely a recital of testimony or evidentiary facts,[38] although a mere incorporation of unnecessary detail is not fatal, if a sufficient statement is made.[39] Such a statement or finding is of no effect unless it is filed within the time prescribed therefor.[40] A statement of facts made and filed by the trial judge, after the issuance or service of the writ removing the case to the supreme court, without the consent of the parties, is a nullity.[41]

(7) Making, Form, and Requisites of Transcript of Record

The party desiring a review should see to it that there is transmitted to the supreme court a transcript of so much of the record in the court below as may be proper and necessary to the review.

It is the duty of a party desiring a review in the supreme court of an adverse judgment, order, or decree to require a proper and correct transcript of the record from the clerk of the trial court.[42] The transcript should contain all matters and proceedings necessary to a review of the alleged errors, and, if necessary for this purpose, a full and complete transcript of the whole record of the court below should be furnished,[43] together with a brief, as required by Supreme Court Rules, rule 27, with reference to the pages of the record;[44] but, on the other hand, as permitted by some statutes or rules of court, a partial transcript may be furnished, if it is complete in itself and contains sufficient matter clearly to show the errors alleged,[45] and, moreover, the transcript should not be encumbered with useless repetitions and irrelevant matter.[46] Under Equity Rules, rules 75 and 76, 28 U.S.C.A. § 723 appendix, in setting forth evidence material or necessary to the review the evidence should be stated in simple and condensed form, omitting nonessential and mere formal parts,[47] and a violation of such rules may be punished, in the discretion of the supreme court, possibly by a dismissal of the appeal.[48] A case-made or statement of facts, duly settled, signed, and filed, becomes a part of the record.[49]

(8) Authentication and Certification

The transcript of the record must be authenticated or certified as required by law.

It is a general requirement that the transcript on appeal must be authenticated or certified; otherwise it cannot be considered[50] unless the defect is remedied.[51] Papers included in, referred to, or annexed to the transcript must also be duly authenticated and identified, or they will not be considered by the supreme court.[52] The authentication must, in form and substance, be in conformity with the requirements of the statutes or the rules of court.[53] Where authorized by statute, the transcript may be authenticated by the seal of the court below and the signature of the deputy clerk thereof in the name of and for his principal.[54] As a general rule the certificate to the transcript must be under the seal of the court authenticating the transcript,[55] and it must be signed by the proper official.[56]

Bill of exceptions. Under the provisions of Revised Statutes § 953, 28 U.S.C.A. § 776, relating to the authentication of bills of exceptions, a bill of exceptions must be authenticated by the signature of the trial or presiding judge,[57] but it is not necessary that the seal of the court or judge be affixed.[58] Although signing by initials is not approved, and it has been held that it is not sufficient for the judge merely to affix his initials to the bill of exceptions,[59] such form of signing the bill is sufficient if it is done in such a manner as to refer to the judge's office and characterize his action as official.[60] The signature cannot be waived and the bill validated by express stipulation of counsel.[61]

(9) Printing, Transmission, and Filing of Record

A transcript of the record must be printed, transmitted, and filed in accordance with the rules of the supreme court, and must comply with such rules as to time of filing.

It is generally the duty of the clerk of the lower court to transmit the transcript of the record on appeal,[62] and the performance of this duty may be compelled by mandamus.[63] It is the duty of appellant to cause a proper and sufficient transcript of the record to be filed,[64] and if he fails to do so, without a sufficient excuse for his failure, the supreme court may dismiss the appeal[65] or require appellant to supply a transcript.[66] On a motion to dismiss or affirm, it is necessary to print only so much of the record as will enable the supreme court to act understandingly, without referring to the transcript.[67]

Time of filing. The transcript of the record must be filed within the time prescribed by the statute or rule of court in force at the time,[68] unless a recognized satisfactory excuse for a failure to file in time is made,[69] as where appellant, without fault on his part, is prevented from seasonably obtaining the transcript by the fraud of the other party, or by the ill-founded order of the court, or by the contumacy of its clerk.[70] However, as authorized by statute or rule of court, an extension of time for filing the record may be granted for good cause shown such as to afford ample opportunity to file a record made up in conformity with the views of the court,[71] but it has been held that the time should not be extended because the clerk of the lower court certifies that he cannot, consistently with his other duties, have the record ready in time.[72] Appellant may be guilty of laches in failing to resort to mandamus or other appropriate remedy to procure the transmission and filing of the transcript.[73] If appellant files the record within the prescribed time a copy previously filed by appellee is premature.[74]

If, without fault of appellee, appellant fails to file the transcript of the record within the time prescribed therefor, or within the extension, if any has been granted, such failure constitutes ground for dismissal of the appeal,[75] but it has been held

Mistake of clerk no excuse
That the clerk of the lower court, that this rule does not apply where the transcript is filed before the motion for dismissal is made,[76] or where the delay in transmitting or filing the record occurred through appellee's own fault, or was equally attributable to him,[77] or where the delay was caused entirely by the neglect or fault of the clerk or judge.[78]

Withdrawal and refiling. If the case is not properly before the supreme court, appellant may be permitted to withdraw the transcript and use it in connection with the proper and legal process to bring the case to such court.[79]

(10) Defects, Objections, Amendments, and Corrections

The supreme court may dismiss the appeal, affirm the judgment, or take other appropriate action where the record, because of material defects or omissions therein, fails to comply with the requirements of the statutes or rules of court; or, on timely application therefor, it may permit the record to be corrected by amendment; or it may issue a certiorari to have the record corrected and brought up.

Where the record before the supreme court is so imperfect, by reason of defects or omissions therein, that the rights of the parties cannot properly be determined, the court may dismiss the appeal,[80] or in a proper case it may affirm the judgment below.[81] An appeal will be dismissed where the transcript fails to show that the value or amount in controversy was sufficient to give the supreme court jurisdiction,[82] but it has been held that a deficiency in the record in this respect may be supplied by affidavits or stipulation filed in the supreme court.[83] A failure of a statement of facts found by the lower court to comply with the rules of the supreme court is not necessarily ground for dismissing the appeal, and the record may be remanded for a proper finding;[84] but such a statement of facts not made and filed in time may be disregarded and the judgment affirmed.[85]

Where the appeal record contains all that is necessary to present the questions to be reviewed and for their determination, immaterial defects or omissions are not fatal[86] and may be disregarded,[87] but the costs incident to including immaterial matter may be taxed against the party preparing and presenting the record.[88] Moreover, the whole record may be looked to for the purpose of curing defects in other parts of the record.[89]

Amendment and correction. Defects or errors in a transcript, when not of a jurisdictional character, are as a rule amendable, in the discretion of the court;[90] and the supreme court may make appropriate orders for the amendment or correction of the record of the lower court,[91] and may direct that the amended matters be supplied without issuing a writ of certiorari,[92] but it cannot itself make such amendments or corrections,[93] nor will it consider an amendment which presents matter which was not presented in the trial court.[94] An order remitting or remanding a cause to the lower court in order to allow an amended transcript or return to be filed may be made in the discretion of the appellate court.[95] Any amendments to the record must be properly made a part thereof or they will not be considered.[96]

Time for amendments. Amendments of the record must be applied for and made within a reasonable time, to be determined by the circumstances of the particular case.[97] An application for leave to amend the record must be made prior to the submission of the case to the supreme court;[98] it comes too late after the case has once been decided and while an application for a rehearing is pending,[99] and a rehearing will not ordinarily be granted in order that a party may correct or perfect the record.[1] Furthermore, it is held that if the case should be reached before a return a certiorari to perfect the record will not be regarded as a reason for continuance.[2]

Certiorari to bring up record. After the transcript has been filed in the supreme court, amendments can as a rule be made only by certiorari.[3] The supreme court may issue a certiorari to have a defective record corrected and brought up,[4] as for the purpose of correcting a diminution in the record,[5] or for bringing up matters of record omitted therefrom;[6] but certiorari will not issue for the purpose of bringing up immaterial or unnecessary matter[7] or matters not of record or not considered in the court below.[8] An application for a certiorari may be made by either party,[9] or where, on inspection of the record, it appears that there are defects or omissions in the transcript which may be important, the supreme court may, of its own motion, issue a certiorari.[10] However, a writ of certiorari to bring up a corrected record does not issue as a matter of right on mere suggestion of defects in the record, but the application must be supported by evidence of the defects alleged to exist.[11]

(11) Conclusiveness and Effect of Record

Generally speaking, the record is the sole and conclusive evidence of the proceedings below.

Generally speaking, the record filed for the purpose of appeal imports absolute verity, and is the sole and conclusive evidence of the proceedings in the lower court,[12] and accordingly it cannot be impeached or varied, on appeal, by affidavits or other

(12) Questions Presented for Review

Such questions only may be reviewed by the supreme court as are properly presented by the record.

As a general rule, such questions only may be reviewed by the supreme court as are properly presented by the record or the requisite part thereof,[15] but any error apparent on the record is open to review regardless of how it is made to appear.[16] The supreme court will review only such errors as are properly presented by the record, relating to the jurisdiction of the lower court,[17] the parties,[18] the pleadings,[19] or to rulings on the admission or exclusion of evidence.[20] Questions which depend on the evidence are generally available on appeal only where such evidence or the relevant portion thereof appears of record;[21] and error in admitting certain evidence, which depends on other evidence, will not be reviewed unless such other evidence is disclosed in the record.[22] A ruling refusing to allow a witness to answer a question will not be reviewed where the record does not show what the answer would have been, or what was proposed to be proved by the question asked.[23] The sufficiency of the evidence may be reviewed only where the record sets forth all or substantially all of the evidence,[24] but it is sufficient if it affirmatively appears from a reasonable construction of the language used that all, or substantially all, the material evidence is preserved,[25] as where the record shows that the bill

General finding of court as conclusive

Where there were no special findings of fact by the court, its general finding, which has the effect of a verdict under Rev.St. § 649, 28 U.S.C.A. § 773, is conclusive on all matters of fact, and, if there were no exceptions to rulings of law in the progress of the trial, authorizing review under Rev.St. § 700, 28 U.S.C.A. § 875, the review is limited to the sufficiency of the complaint.—Vicksburg, S. & P. Ry. Co. v. Anderson-Tully Co., Miss., 41 S.Ct. 524, 256 U.S. 408, 65 L.Ed. 1020, affirming, C.C.A., 261 F. 741.

Application of payments

Where there is no definite expression in record as to whether payments by national bank shareholders to receiver to assist in paying bank's indebtedness were to be applied on shareholders' statutory liability, the supreme court on appeal is required to decide which contention is more reasonable and probable considering all facts and circumstances stipulated and proved.—Korbly v. Springfield Inst. for Savings, Mass., 38 S.Ct. 88, 245 U.S. 330, 62 L.Ed. 326, affirming Pepper v. Springfield Inst. for Savings, 218 F. 814, 134 C.C.A. 502.

An indirect recital or certification that all the evidence is preserved in the record may be sufficient, if the implication necessarily flows from the language used, especially where there is nothing in the record to indicate or to suggest that anything has been omitted.—Board of Com'rs of Gunnison County, Colo., v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, supra.

of exceptions contains all the evidence, although such recital is omitted from the bill.[26]

Objection to the giving or refusing of an instruction by the trial court will be reviewed only where the instruction involved is made a part of the record, as explained supra subdivision i (2) of this section, and where an instruction depends on the evidence which was adduced and is proper or otherwise, according to the proof, the supreme court can review the giving or the refusal of the instruction in question, only where the record properly sets out the evidence.[27] In general an assignment of error that the court below failed to give a proper instruction will not be considered unless it affirmatively appears from the record that a proper and timely request therefor was made, as stated supra subdivision i (1) of this section.

(13) Matters Not Apparent of Record

Generally matters not properly included or shown in the record will not be considered by the supreme court.

The supreme court generally will not consider on appeal any matter or question which is not properly included or shown in the record;[28] the sole question which the court is required to determine is whether the judgment which is the subject of review is a legitimate conclusion from the premises which the record contains.[29] Evidence dehors the record, whether by affidavit[30] or otherwise,[31] ordinarily will not be considered by the supreme court, but may be considered to show circumstances occurring subsequently to the appeal, which materially affect the rights involved.[32] Public, but not private, laws may be considered although not found in the record.[33] A copy of a brief in the circuit court of appeals which is tendered as an exhibit, but which was not made a part of the record, cannot be examined in determining whether assignments of error have been waived.[34] Stipulations or agreed statements of fact which are not properly embodied or shown in the record will not be considered.[35]

j. Assignment of Errors; Briefs

Errors not included within a proper assignment of errors will generally not be considered by the supreme court, but the court has discretion to take notice of plain and serious errors even though unassigned. Proper and sufficient briefs must be submitted.

Assignment of errors. Under the supreme court rules, it is generally necessary that appellant shall file a proper assignment or specification of errors relied on, and alleged errors not so assigned are not properly before the supreme court and will not be considered by it.[36] Accordingly, where no errors are assigned, or the assignment is insufficient, the supreme court may affirm the judgment,[37] or dismiss or quash the appeal.[38] However, notwithstanding the absence of an assignment of errors, the supreme court may, in its discretion, take notice of a plain and serious error,[39] such as with respect to its own want of jurisdiction,[40] or the lower court's want of jurisdiction over the subject matter.[41]

Cross assignment

Appellee or defendant in error

Assignments of errors must substantially comply as to form and contents, and in other particulars with the requirements of statutes and rules of court governing the matter,[42] and assignments which do not so comply will, in general, be disregarded, even though the opposing party treats them as adequate.[43] Assignments must point out definitely and specifically the particular error or errors relied on;[44] and no one assignment should embrace more than one specification of error.[45] The assignment of errors must be attached to, or made a part of, the record.[46] The practice of assigning a large and unnecessary number of errors is disapproved.[47]

Briefs. Under the supreme court rules, it is required that the parties submit proper and sufficient briefs, and on appellant's failure to comply with such rules, the court may dismiss the appeal;[48] but objections for failure to serve a brief are waived cannot make a cross assignment of errors unless he himself appeals or takes out a writ of error.—Bolles v. Outing Co., N.Y., 20 S.Ct. 94, 175 U.S. 262, 44 L.Ed. 156—3 C.J. p 1403 note 57.

Questions not preserved for review

Assignments of errors cannot raise questions which were not preserved for review by timely and proper objections and exceptions in the lower court.—Burton v. Driggs, Vt., 20 Wall. 125, 22 L.Ed. 299.

Compliance with mandate

Where appeals were from a decree entered under mandate of the supreme court, the court has jurisdiction, of its own motion, to consider whether the mandate has been complied with.—Continental Ins. Co. v. Reading Co., Pa., 42 S.Ct. 540, 259 U.S. 156, 66 L.Ed. 871, modifying, D.C., U. S. v. Reading Co., 273 F. 848.

Error held not "plain" within rule

U.S.—San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Wagner, Tex., 36 S.Ct. 626, 241 U.S. 476, 60 L.Ed. 1110, affirming, Civ.App., 166 S.W. 24.

Record not minutely scrutinized

In exercising its option to notice plain errors not assigned, the court will not subject the opinion of the court below to minute scrutiny to discover error of law when, on the whole, it is clear that the facts found by that court justify the judgment.—Behn Meyer & Co. v. Erroneous instruction

Assignment of error directed against a charge embodying several propositions as a whole, or against the giving or refusing of a group of instructions embodying distinct propositions, is insufficient; the portion of the charge complained of, or the instructions, the giving or refusing of which is claimed to be error, should be distinctly designated or pointed out.—Bogk v. Unnecessary assignments not considered

Where a great number of assignments have been filed, the court will endeavor to consider only the questions which, in its opinion, seem to be material to the judgment.—Phillips & Colby Constr. Co. v. Seymour, Ill., 91 U.S. 646, 23 L.Ed. 341.

Judgment was affirmed in an early case, on failure to submit a brief.—Ryan v. Koch, Mich., 17 Wall. 19, 21 L.Ed. 611.

Requisites of brief

(1) The brief must specify such of the assigned errors as are intended to be urged.—Benites v. Hampton, Utah, 8 S.Ct. 254, 123 U.S. 519, 31 L.Ed. 260.

(2) The errors for which a reversal is sought should be specifically pointed out.—Schooner Catherine v. U. S., 7 Cranch 99, 3 L.Ed. 281.

(3) However, a question as to the want of jurisdiction may be considered, even though it is not urged in the brief.—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co., Ind., where the cause is duly submitted on behalf of the opposite party.[49]

k. Dismissal or Withdrawal

The supreme court, in a proper case and on proper grounds, may dismiss an appeal or permit its withdrawal; but on good cause shown, the court may vacate its order of dismissal and reinstate the appeal.

The supreme court, in a proper case and on proper grounds, may dismiss an appeal.[50] As a rule, an appeal may be dismissed or withdrawn by request or consent of all interested parties,[51] or of appellant.[52] An appeal will generally be dismissed where no actual controversy exists between the parties at the time of the hearing;[53] but dismissal will not be ordered where the question involved is a matter of public interest,[54] where the controversy has not ceased to exist,[55] or where merely a part of the controversy has ceased to exist, other questions remaining for decision.[56] An appeal may also be dismissed for want of jurisdiction in the supreme court, if it is patent or can be readily ascertained by an examination of the record,[57] for failure of

Improper matter

A brief which contains scandalous or abusive matter directed against counsel or the parties may be stricken from the files.—Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum v. Green, 35 S.Ct. 724, 237 U.S. 531, 59 L.Ed. 1089, L.R.A.1916A 771, reversing Green v. Defects subsequently cured

The supreme court may refuse to dismiss an appeal for defects and irregularities in the proceedings for review when such defects and irregularities have been subsequently cured.—Gates v. Goodloe, Tenn., 101 U.S. 612, 25 L.Ed. 895.

Conditional dismissal

On motion to dismiss for insufficiency of the appeal bond, it may be provided that the dismissal shall be conditioned on the failure to file a new or amended bond within a certain time.—Seward v. Corneau, La., 102 U.S. 161, 26 L.Ed. 86.

Grounds for dismissal shown

(1) Where appellant becomes the sole party in interest and dominus litis on both sides.—Lord v. Veazie, Me., 8 How. 251, 12 L.Ed. 1067.

(2) Where the right in controversy has expired by lapse of the period of time fixed for its continuance.—Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, Ky., 26 S.Ct. 316, 200 U.S. 450, 50 L.Ed. 549—Security Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Prewitt, 26 S.Ct. 314, 200 U.S. 446, 50 L.Ed. 545, dismissing error 83 S.W. 611, 119 Ky. 321, 26 Ky.L. 1239, 1 L.R.A.,N.S., 1019, 84 S.W. 527, 27 Ky.L. 77, 115 Am.S.R. 264.

(3) Where it appears that there has been a valid settlement or adjustment by the parties of all their rights and differences respecting the subject matter of the controversy.—Dakota County v. Glidden, Neb., 5 S.Ct. 428, 113 U.S. 222, 28 L.Ed. 981—4 C.J. p 579 note 12.

(4) Where the judgment or decree appealed from has been satisfied or complied with by appellant.—Codlin v. Kohlhausen, 21 S.Ct. 584, 181 U.S. 151, 45 L.Ed. 793, dismissing appeal 58 P. 499, 9 N.M. 565.

(5) Matters pertaining to the conduct of an election will not usually be determined when, pending the appeal, the election has been held.—Richardson v. McChesney, Ky., 31 S.Ct. 43, 218 U.S. 487, 54 L.Ed. 1121—Mills v. Green, S.C., 16 S.Ct. 132, 159 U.S. 651, 40 L.Ed. 293.

(6) The propriety of the granting of a temporary injunction or restraining order becomes moot after the expiration of the time for the stay.—Tennessee v. Condon, 23 S.Ct. 579, 189 U.S. 64, 47 L.Ed. 709, dismissing error 65 S.W. 871, 108 Tenn. 82.

Costs

Appeal in a case which has become moot will not be retained merely for the purpose of determining the question of costs.—Wingert v. Hagerstown First Nat. Bank, Md., 32 S.Ct. 391, 223 U.S. 670, 56 L.Ed. 605, dismissing appeal 175 F. 739, 99 C.C.A. 315.

Transfer to circuit court of appeals

(1) Under Jud.Code § 238a, an appeal taken to the supreme court in a case where it should have been taken to the circuit court of appeals was transferable to that court for determination, as if the appeal had been duly taken to it.—Transportes Maritimos do Estado v. Almeida, N.

appellant to perfect his appeal,[58] or for want of prosecution;[59] and an appeal may be dismissed where circumstances have rendered a determination unnecessary or ineffectual.[60] Although the supreme court may have the power to dismiss an appeal which is manifestly and palpably frivolous and without merit,[61] it will not, as a rule, dismiss on such ground, but will affirm the judgment below.[62]

Motion to dismiss. While the supreme court may in some cases order dismissal of an appeal on its own motion,[63] in other cases a motion to dismiss the appeal must be made by a proper party,[64] in the proper time[65] and manner,[66] and must be made,

(2) Jud.Code § 238a was expressly repealed by Act of Febr. 13, 1925, 43 St. at L. p 942 with a savings clause as to cases pending in the supreme court.—Timken Roller Bearing Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Ohio, 47 S.Ct. 550, 274 U.S. 181, 71 L.Ed. 989, setting aside dismissal 47 S.Ct. 454, 273 U.S. 665, 71 L.Ed. 829.

"Dismissal for want of substantial federal question" of an appeal, by the supreme court, means that every question brought for decision is so clearly undebatable and lacking in merit as to require dismissal for want of substance.—Johnson v. Town of Deerfield, D.C.Mass., 25 F.Supp. 918, affirmed 59 S.Ct. 791, 306 U.S. 621, 83 L.Ed. 1027, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 832, 307 U.S. 650, 83 L.Ed. 1529.

60. U.S.—State of Ohio v. U. S., Ohio, 54 S.Ct. 792, 292 U.S. 498, 78 L.Ed. 1388, affirming, D.C., 6 F. Supp. 386, vacated U. S. v. State of Ohio, 54 S.Ct. 452, 291 U.S. 644, 78 L.Ed. 1041, and U. S. v. Wheeling & L. E. R. Co., 54 S.Ct. 452, 291 U.S. 644, 78 L.Ed. 1041, rehearing granted State of Ohio v. U. S., 55 S.Ct. 66, 293 U.S. 627, 79 L.Ed. 714, affirmed 55 S.Ct. 146, 293 U.S. 528, 79 L.Ed. 638.

Appeal from interlocutory injunction order will be dismissed, where appeal from final judgment making interlocutory injunction permanent is also before supreme court for review.—Sterling v. Constantin, Tex., 53 S.Ct. 190, 287 U.S. 378, 77 L.Ed. 375, dismissing appeal, D.C., Constantin v. Smith, 57 F.2d 227.

Other judicial proceedings

Appeal may be dismissed where the question in controversy has been settled by another order in the same action or in another action, as where the judgment was vacated subsequent to the appeal.—Sterling v. Constantin, Tex., 53 S.Ct. 190, 287 U.S. 378, 77 L.Ed. 375—Champlin Refining Co. v. Corporation Commission, Okl., 52 S.Ct. 559, 286 U.S. 210, 76 L.Ed. 1062, 86 A.L.R. 403—Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Kuykendall, Wash., 44 S.Ct. 553, 265 U.S. 196, 68 L.Ed. 975—Shaffer v. Carter, Okl., 40 S.Ct. 221, 252 U.S. 37, 64 L. Ed. 445—U. S. v. Ayers, Ct.Cl., 9 Wall. 608, 19 L.Ed. 625—4 C.J. p 585 note 65.

Question held not moot

U.S.—Old Colony Trust Co. v. City of Seattle, Wash., 46 S.Ct. 552, 271 U.S. 426, 70 L.Ed. 1019.

Reversal on cross appeal

A writ of error from a judgment of the circuit court of appeals affirming a judgment of a circuit court must, together with a writ of error from a separate and subsequent judgment of the circuit court of appeals on a cross writ of error, reversing the same judgment of the circuit court, and remanding the cause for a new trial on the question presented by such cross writ of error, be dismissed, as the judgment of the circuit court of appeals first rendered ceased to be final by the operation of the second judgment which was itself not final.—Montana Min. Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill Co., Mont., 22 S.Ct. 744, 186 U.S. 24, 46 L.Ed. 1039.

61. U.S.—Steele v. Culver, Mich., 29 S.Ct. 9, 211 U.S. 26, 53 L.Ed. 74.

Appeal regularly taken and docketed should not be dismissed on the ground that there is no error apparent of record, but the judgment below should be affirmed.—Hecker v. Fowler, N.Y., 1 Black 95, 17 L.Ed. 45.

63. U.S.—Nyanza S. S. Co. v. Jahncke Dry Dock No. 1, La., 44 S. Ct. 355, 264 U.S. 439, 68 L.Ed. 777.

Particular grounds

(1) Want of jurisdiction.—Nyanza S. S. Co. v. Jahncke Dry Dock No. 1, supra—4 C.J. p 589 note 12 [a]—p 590 note 14.

(2) Defects in the proceedings for review.—Hilton v. Dickinson, D.C., 2 S.Ct. 424, 108 U.S. 165, 27 L.Ed. 688—Edmonson v. Bloomshire, Ohio, 7 Wall. 306, 19 L.Ed. 91.

(3) Want of prosecution.—Hilton v. Dickinson, supra.

(4) Want of actual controversy.—East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co., Neb., 8 S.Ct. 1391, 125 U.S. 695, 31 L.Ed. 853.

64. Stranger to decree may not move to dismiss appeal therefrom.—Denver & Rio Grande R. Co. v. Alling, Colo., 99 U.S. 463, 25 L.Ed. 438.

65. U.S.—Sparrow v. Strong, Nev., 3 Wall. 97, 18 L.Ed. 49.

Stage of proceedings

(1) A motion to dismiss for defects or irregularities in the proceedings for review, not going to the jurisdiction, should be made at a preliminary stage or the defects or irregularities will be deemed waived.—Sparrow v. Strong, supra.

(2) However, a motion to dismiss for jurisdictional defects may be made at any stage of the proceedings before a final disposition of the case.—Clark v. Hancock, Cal., 94 U.S. 493, 24 L.Ed. 146—Estis v. Trabue, Miss., 9 S.Ct. 58, 128 U.S. 225, 32 L.Ed. 437.

When motion premature

(1) A motion to dismiss will not lie until after the jurisdiction of the supreme court has attached, by the performance of the conditions requisite to the perfection of the appeal.—Stafford v. Union Bank of La., Tex., 16 How. 135, 14 L.Ed. 876.

(2) Such motion is not premature because the record has not been printed, where the supreme court is advised as to the matter from a printed transcript of the proceedings.—Lazarus, Michel & Lazarus v. Prentice, La., 34 S.Ct. 851, 234 U.S. 263, 58 L.Ed. 1305, dismissing appeal Musica v. Prentice, 211 F. 326, 127 C.C.A. 575.

(3) A motion to dismiss an appeal which has been regularly brought and placed on the calendar and is within the jurisdiction of the court will not be entertained before the cause is reached in its regular order on the calendar.—The Eutaw, N.Y., 12 Wall. 136, 20 L.Ed. 278.

66. Form and requisites

(1) A motion to dismiss should set out the facts and the grounds on which it is based and should point out the specific defects or errors complained of.—Power v. Baker, 5 S.Ct. 361, 112 U.S. 710, 28 L.Ed. 825.

according to the decisions, on proper notice.[67] In determining the motion the supreme court will not ordinarily consider or determine the merits of the appeal, or questions involving its merits;[68] and where the facts on which the motion is based are controverted,[69] or where the affidavits filed in support of the motion are conflicting,[70] the motion will be overruled. Dismissal for failure of appellant to file the record within the time required,[71] or for want of prosecution,[72] does not operate as an affirmance of the judgment appealed from.

The supreme court, on a motion addressed to its judicial discretion,[73] may vacate the order of dismissal and reinstate the appeal, on good cause shown.[74]

l. Hearing and Rehearing

The court has discretionary power, in some instances, to advance a cause for hearing. The hearing must be conducted in accordance with applicable statutes and rules of court, and in a proper case, the court may grant a rehearing.

Advancing cause for hearing. While appeals are ordinarily heard in the order in which they are docketed, the supreme court has discretionary power to advance a cause for hearing,[75] and the usual method of procuring such action is by motion or application.[76] The power to advance a cause will not be exercised if there is nothing in the cause proposed to be advanced to distinguish it in character from other cases;[77] and advancement or preference will be usually given only to those causes, or for those grounds, which are designated by statutes,

(2) A certificate of the clerk, or an affidavit, or both, must accompany the motion.—Smith v. Clark, Mass., 12 How. 21, 13 L.Ed. 875—Holliday v. Batson, La., 4 How. 645, 11 L.Ed. 1140.

While motions to dismiss made before record is printed should ordinarily be accompanied by a statement of facts on which they rest, or by printed copies of so much of the record as will enable the court to understand the case, a motion to dismiss, for want of jurisdiction, an appeal to the federal supreme court from a circuit court of appeals is not premature because the record has not been printed, where the supreme court is sufficiently advised as to the situation of the case from a printed transcript of the proceedings in the district court to dispose of the motion without doing injustice to the parties.—Lazarus, Michel & Lazarus v. Prentice, La., 34 S.Ct. 851, 234 U.S. 263, 58 L.Ed. 1305.

67. U.S.—Davidson v. Lanier, Miss., 131 U.S. appendix lxxii, 16 L.Ed. 796.

Notice must designate time for hearing

U.S.—Glenny v. Langdon, Ohio, 94 U. S. 604, 24 L.Ed. 237.

68. U.S.—Hill v. Chicago & E. R. Co., Ill., 9 S.Ct. 269, 129 U.S. 170, 32 L.Ed. 651.

4 C.J. p 602 note 33.

Postponing of consideration of a motion to dismiss a writ of error until hearing of the merits is not a decision in the affirmative of the question of the power to review.—Cerecedo v. United States, Puerto Rico, 36 S.Ct. 3, 239 U.S. 1, 60 L.Ed. 113.

Examination of record

Where, in passing on a motion to dismiss, the court would be required to examine the entire record, the motion will ordinarily not be considered in advance of a hearing on the merits, or will be denied.—Blossom v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., Wis., 1 Wall. 655, 17 L.Ed. 673—Day v. Washburn, Ind., 23 How. 309, 16 L.Ed. 551.

Proof dehors the record

Motion to dismiss does not lie where, to support or resist it, proof is necessary dehors the record.—U. S. v. Griffith, Fla., 11 S.Ct. 1005, 141 U.S. 212, 35 L.Ed. 719.

69. U.S.—St. Louis Nat. Bank v. U. S. Insurance Co., Mo., 100 U.S. 43, 25 L.Ed. 547.

70. U.S.—Rector v. Lipscomb, Ark., 12 S.Ct. 83, 141 U.S. 557, 35 L.Ed. 857.

72. U.S.—Loudon v. Shelby County Taxing Dist., Tenn., 104 U.S. 771, 26 L.Ed. 923.

Condition unchanged

A dismissal for want of prosecution remands the case to the lower court in the same condition as before the appeal was taken.—Newman v. Moyers, 40 S.Ct. 478, 253 U.S. 182, 64 L.Ed. 849, reversing 47 App.D.C. 102.

73. U.S.—Deming's Appeal, Ct.Cl., 10 Wall. 251, 19 L.Ed. 893.

Time for making motion

(1) Due diligence is required of the moving party or the delay will be fatal.—Johnson v. Wilkins, Fla., 6 S.Ct. 1048, 118 U.S. 228, 30 L.Ed. 210—Deming v. U. S., Ct.Cl., 10 Wall. 251, 19 L.Ed. 893.

(2) Motion must be made during the term in which the appeal was dismissed.—Jackson v. Ashton, Pa., 10 Pet. 480, 9 L.Ed. 502.

74. U.S.—James v. McCormack, Va., 105 U.S. 265, 26 L.Ed. 1044—Alviso v. U. S., Cal., 6 Wall. 457, 18 L.Ed. 721.

Defect of jurisdiction

Dismissal solely for a defect of jurisdiction apparent on the record, and founded on a mistake, constitutes no bar to reinstatement.—The Palmyra, S.C., 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L.Ed. 531—4 C.J. p 610 note 27.

75. U.S.—Ward v. Maryland, Md., 12 Wall. 163, 20 L.Ed. 260.

76. U.S.—Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Bourbon County, Ky., 6 S.Ct. 601, 116 U.S. 538, 29 L.Ed. 725.

4 C.J. p 615 note 80.

Necessity of record

Such a motion cannot be considered in the absence of a printed record.—Crane Iron Co. v. Hoagland, N. J., 1 S.Ct. 17, 108 U.S. 5, 27 L.Ed. 630.

Statement of grounds

Motion should show the grounds on which it is based, without reference to the record.—Call v. Palmer, Iowa, 1 S.Ct. 2, 206 U.S. 39, 27 L.Ed. 61—4 C.J. p 615 note 81.

77. U.S.—Sage v. Central R. Co., Iowa, 93 U.S. 412, 23 L.Ed. 933.

Concurrence of parties

A motion to advance a cause is not granted as of course, even when both parties concur, as such an order, if improperly made, would prejudice the rights of other parties on the calendar. Miller v. New York, N.Y., 12 Wall. 159, 20 L.Ed. 259.

Assignment of other cases

After a case has been called and has been placed at the foot of the docket, the court cannot take it up, on motion, and assign a day for its argument, when other cases of great public importance have already been assigned for what may be the remainder of the term.—Barry v. Mercein, N.Y., 4 How. 574, 11 L.Ed. 1108.

Appeal without merit

An appeal cannot be brought on out of its order merely on the ground that it is without merit.—Amory v. Amory, N.Y., 91 U.S. 356, 23 L.Ed. 436.

or rules of court.[78]

Hearing. The hearing in the supreme court must ordinarily be conducted in accordance with the applicable statutes and rules of court.[79] Compliance must be had with rules as to limitations on the right to oral argument on motions,[80] and as to submission of a case on printed briefs alone, by consent of the parties.[81] Where all the questions involved in several cases on appeal have grown out of the same transaction and depend on the same facts or principles, the cases may be consolidated and argued together.[82] While causes must generally be ready for hearing when they are reached,[83] the court may, for good cause shown, continue or postpone the hearing of an appeal.[84]

Rehearing. Under the rules of the court, a rehearing may be granted only where some member of the court who concurred in the judgment doubts the correctness thereof and desires a further argument on the subject, and the proposal receives the support of the majority of the court.[85] While a rehearing may be granted by the supreme court on its own motion,[86] ordinarily the party complaining of the decision must file application for rehearing within the time prescribed by court rules.[87] A rehearing will usually be refused if no material fact or principle of law has been overlooked or disregarded;[88] if it is not made to appear that a rehearing would change the result;[89] or if the error is immaterial.[90] A rehearing will not ordinarily be granted because of defects or errors in the record or transcript,[91] or on the ground of after-discovered

4 C.J. p 613 note 69 [a].

Public importance

(1) Appeal may be advanced where the questions in dispute may embarrass the government or state while such questions remain unsettled.—U. S. v. Fossatt, Cal., 21 How. 445, 16 L.Ed. 185—4 C.J. p 614 note 78.

(2) However, the mere fact that the questions involved in a cause are of public importance will not necessarily entitle the parties to an advancement of such cause to a hearing in preference to others.—Poindexter v. Greenhow, Va., 3 S.Ct. 8, 109 U.S. 63, 27 L.Ed. 860.

Cases to which state is party may be entitled to preference over other causes.—Huntington v. Texas, Tenn., 131 U.S. appendix cx, 20 L.Ed. 550—4 C.J. p 614 note 76.

79. U.S.—Aurrecoechea v. Bangs, Cal., 3 S.Ct. 639, 110 U.S. 217, 28 L. Ed. 125.

Reargument

In cases where constitutional questions are involved, unless a majority of the judges concur in the opinion, the court will not deliver a judgment except in cases of absolute necessity, but will direct that the cases be reargued at the next term.—Briscoe v. Kentucky Bank, Ky., 8 Pet. 118, 8 L. Ed. 887.

80. U.S.—Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co., Tex., 14 S.Ct. 63, 150 U.S. 170, 37 L.Ed. 1041.

81. U.S.—Aurrecoechea v. Bangs, Cal., 3 S.Ct. 639, 110 U.S. 217, 28 L.Ed. 125.

Withdrawal of stipulation

Stipulations of counsel to submit case on printed argument alone, cannot be withdrawn by either party without the consent of the other, except by leave of the court on cause shown.—Aurrecoechea v. Bangs, supra—4 C.J. p 618 note 43.

Submission on briefs may be set aside and an oral argument ordered.—Louisiana v. New Orleans, La., 131 U.S. appendix cci, 26 L.Ed. 427.

82. U.S.—Ableman v. Booth, Wis., 18 How. 479, 15 L.Ed. 465.

83. U.S.—Alvord v. U. S., Idaho, 99 U.S. 593, 25 L.Ed. 399.

84. U.S.—New Orleans v. New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co., La., 1 S.Ct. 187, 108 U.S. 15, 27 L.Ed. 635.
4 C.J. p 620 note 61.

Continuances granted

(1) Because of the failure of appellant to enter the appeal at the proper term.—Brown v. Swann, D.C., 8 Pet. 435, 8 L.Ed. 1001.

(2) Because of the death of counsel shortly before the term.—Hunter v. Fairfax, Va., 3 Dall. 305, 1 L.Ed. 613.

85. U.S.—Ambler v. Whipple, D.C., 23 Wall. 278, 23 L.Ed. 127.
4 C.J. p 622 note 3.

Equal division of court on a motion for a rehearing constitutes a denial thereof and leaves the original judgment in force.—Carmichael v. Eberle, N.M., 20 S.Ct. 571, 177 U.S. 63, 44 L.Ed. 672.

86. U.S.—Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Pendleton, Tenn., 6 S.Ct. 74, 115 U.S. 39, 29 L.Ed. 432.

87. U.S.—Chicago & N. R. Co. v. McKinley, Iowa, 99 U.S. 147, 25 L.Ed. 272.

During term

The petition must be filed before the end of the term at which the case is decided.—Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co., Colo., 14 S. Ct. 22, 150 U.S. 82, 37 L.Ed. 1007—4 C.J. p 638 note 62.

Answer or reply to petition for a rehearing is usually neither necessary or proper.—Ambler v. Whipple, D.C., 23 Wall. 278, 23 L.Ed. 127.

Time of acting on application

The court may take action on a petition after the time limited for making the application has expired, provided such petition was duly filed within the statutory period, and something has been done within the term at which judgment was rendered to keep the case within the jurisdiction of the court.—Goddard v. Ordway, D.C., 101 U.S. 745, 25 L.Ed. 1040.

88. U.S.—Morgan v. U. S., Mo., 58 S. Ct. 999, 304 U.S. 1, 82 L.Ed. 1129, denying rehearing 58 S.Ct. 773, 304 U.S. 1, 82 L.Ed. 1129, reversing, D. C., 23 F.Supp. 380, mandate conformed to 24 F.Supp. 214, reversed on other grounds 59 S.Ct. 795, 307 U.S. 183, 83 L.Ed. 1211, mandate conformed to, D.C., Morgan v. U. S., 32 F.Supp. 546.

Matters fully considered

If no omissions or new authorities or points of law or fact are shown, the supreme court will seldom permit a rehearing simply for the purpose of obtaining a reargument on, and a reconsideration of, points, authorities, and matters which have already been fully considered by the court, on the assertion of counsel that, notwithstanding the court fully considered everything wished to be urged on the rehearing, it reached the wrong conclusion.—Williams v. Bank of U. S., Ohio, 2 Pet. 96, 7 L.Ed. 360.

89. U.S.—Treat v. Jemison, Cal., 131 U.S. appendix cxxxv, 23 L.Ed. 134.

evidence;[92] but the petition will be granted where it clearly appears that the decision was based on a mistaken assumption of fact.[93] A second application for a rehearing is generally refused at least where it is made by the same party and on the same grounds as a former application that has been considered and denied.[94]

m. Review

The general principles of review, such as that prohibiting reversal for harmless error, are applied by the supreme court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.

Where the supreme court has once obtained jurisdiction of a cause, it obtains it for all purposes and may give judgment on all points properly presented for decision.[95]

Matters not necessary to decision on review. Questions not directly involved in an appeal, or not necessary or relevant to, or material in, the final determination of the cause, will not be considered or decided by the supreme court;[96] thus abstract, moot, academic, or hypothetical questions will not be considered or decided, as where the controversy has come to an end,[97] however convenient it might

92. U.S.—U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Case, Colo., 7 S.Ct. 1271, 122 U.S. 365, 30 L.Ed. 1211.

94. U.S.—Williams v. Conger, N.C., 9 S.Ct. 793, 131 U.S. 390, 33 L.Ed. 201.

95. U.S.—James-Dickinson Farm Mortg. Co. v. Harry, Ill., 47 S.Ct. 308, 273 U.S. 119, 71 L.Ed. 569.
4 C.J. p 644 note 48.

Matters stipulated by parties
The court will not consider matters outside of the record and stipulated to by the parties.—Schley v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., Ill., 7 S.Ct. 730, 120 U.S. 575, 30 L.Ed. 789.

Matters of evidence
(1) Matters not offered or introduced in evidence in the lower court will not as a rule be considered.—Mitchel v. U. S., Fla., 9 Pet. 711, 9 L.Ed. 283.

(2) Where bill, when read in light of facts of which court may take judicial notice, may be regarded as sufficient to state cause of action, decision on constitutional questions should not turn on other facts which are proper subjects of evidence and of determination of facts by trial court.—Borden's Farm Products Co. v. Baldwin, N.Y., 55 S.Ct. 187, 293 U.S. 194, 79 L.Ed. 281, reversing, D.C., 7 F.Supp. 352, and mandate granted 55 S.Ct. 239.

Delaying final determination of cause
Supreme court will not determine constitutionality of section of act regulating petroleum production on questions certified by circuit court of appeals on appeal from preliminary injunction restraining production in excess of quotas, where to do so would necessitate ordering up entire record, which would merely bring before court interlocutory order and would result in unnecessary delay in final determination of cause.—Wilshire Oil Co. v. U. S., Cal., 55 S.Ct. 673, 295 U.S. 100, 79 L.Ed. 1329.

An issue raised on an affidavit, and not shown in the bill, will not be considered.—Home Telephone & Telegraph Co. of Spokane v. Kuykendall, Wash., 44 S.Ct. 557, 265 U.S. 206, 68 L.Ed. 982.

Construction of state statutes or constitutions
(1) Where conclusion of lower court on contention that state public utility commission proceeded under wrong subsection of statute in fixing temporary rate for utility was not supported by a state decision, the supreme court will analyze for itself the provisions of the applicable statute.—Driscoll v. Edison Light & Power Co., Pa., 59 S.Ct. 715, 307 U.S. 104, 83 L.Ed. 1134, reversing, D.C., Edison Light & Power Co. v. Driscoll, 25 F.Supp. 192, and rehearing denied Driscoll v. Edison Light & Power Co., 59 S.Ct. 831, 307 U.S. 650, 83 L.Ed. 1529.

(2) When not instructed by some state court decision, supreme court is disposed, in exercising appellate jurisdiction, to accept construction given by lower federal court to state statute, particularly when lower federal court is composed wholly of citizens of state familiar with history of statute, local conditions to which it applies, and character of state laws.—Thompson v. Consolidated Gas Utilities Corporation, Tex., 57 S.Ct. 364, 300 U.S. 55, 81 L.Ed. 510, affirming, D.C., Consolidated Gas Utilities Corporation v. Thompson, 14 F.Supp. 318.

(3) In absence of definitive construction of constitution of state by its highest court, supreme court defers to lower federal court's understanding of state constitution.—Henderson Co. v. Thompson, Tex., 57 S.Ct. 447, 300 U.S. 258, 81 L.Ed. 632, affirming, D.C., 14 F.Supp. 328.

96. U.S.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Gallagher, Cal., 59 S.Ct. 389, 306 U.S. 167, 83 L.Ed. 586, affirming, D.C., Southern Pac. Co. v. Corbett, 23 F.Supp. 193—Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Weeks, N.D., 56 S.Ct. 426, 297 U.S. 135, 80 L.Ed. 532, reversing, C.C.A., 77 F.2d 405, certiorari granted 56 S.Ct. 108, 296 U.S. 558, 80 L.Ed. 99—City of Cincinnati v. Vester, Ohio, 50 S.Ct. 360, 281 U.S. 439, 74 L.Ed. 950, affirming, C.C.A., 33 F.2d 242, 68 A.L.R. 831, certiorari granted 50 S.Ct. 38, 280 U.S. 545, 74 L.Ed. 605—U. S. v. Alaska S. S. Co., N.Y., 40 S.Ct. 448, 253 U.S. 113, 64 L.Ed. 808, reversing, D.C., Alaska S. S. Co. v. U. S., 259 F. 713—City and County of Denver v. Effect of law on person not involved in controversy will not be considered.—James Stewart & Co. v. Rivara, 47 S.Ct. 718, 274 U.S. 614, 71 L.Ed. 1234, affirming Rivara v. James Stewart & Co., 149 N.E. 851, 241 N.Y. 259, affirming 210 N.Y.S. 911, 214 App.Div. 737.

Ground of reversal
Where a judgment is reversed on one ground, other grounds of reversal assigned will not ordinarily be passed on, as the same questions may not arise on a subsequent appeal.—Jones v. Randolph, D.C., 104 U.S. 108, 26 L.Ed. 671.

be to have the question decided for the government of future cases[98] nor can the supreme court give decisions which are merely advisory.[99]

Review dependent on mode of trial in lower court. In cases tried by the court, as on waiver of a jury by stipulation, if the record discloses no findings of fact there is nothing which the supreme court can review; and under these circumstances the judgment of the lower court will be presumed to be right and will be affirmed if it appears that such court had jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties.[1] If the finding is general, only such rulings of the court in the progress of the trial can be reviewed as are presented by a bill of exceptions;[2] and such rulings do not include the general findings or conclusions of the court.[3] If the facts are found specially, the court may and should determine whether under the pleadings they are sufficient to support the judgment, but the correctness of the special findings of fact themselves is not open to inquiry.[4]

Jurisdiction of controversy see supra § 199.

Constitutional questions

(1) The supreme court "will not decide important constitutional questions . . . hypothetically. . . . Questions relating to the constitutional validity of an excess condemnation should not be determined upon conjecture as to the contemplated purpose."—City of Cincinnati v. Vester, Ohio, 50 S Ct. 360, 281 U.S. 439, 74 L.Ed. 950, affirming, C.C.A., 33 F.2d 242, 68 A.L.R. 831, certiorari granted 50 S.Ct. 38, 280 U.S. 545, 74 L.Ed. 605.

(2) Constitutional questions will not be anticipated by supreme court or dealt with abstractly, but will be dealt with only as they are appropriately raised on the record before court.—Allen-Bradley Local No. 1111, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, Wis., 62 S.Ct. 820, 315 U.S. 740, 86 L.Ed. 1154.

Theoretical disputes

The supreme court does not deal with theoretical disputes, but only with concrete and specific issues raised by actual cases.—Allen-Bradley Local No. 1111, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, supra.

Questions held moot

(1) Issue of undue prejudice and unjust preference passed on by interstate commerce commission became moot on acquiescence in rate adjustment by carriers.—Alexander Sprunt & Son v. U. S., Tex., 50 S.Ct. 315, 281 U.S. 249, 74 L.Ed. 832, reversing, D. C., 23 F.2d 874.

(2) Validity of provisions of cross license agreements between patentees, voluntarily canceled some months before entry of decree, became moot question, where relief sought was by injunction and related only to future.—Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) v. U. S., Ill., 51 S.Ct. 421, 283 U.S. 163, 75 L.Ed. 926, reversing, D.C., U. S. v. Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), 33 F.2d 617.

(3) Where governor appointed conservator for state bank and conservator accepted special trust deposits and permitted such depositors to withdraw them, question whether, in conducting such restricted business, overhead expenses exceeded net income and jeopardized creditors, held moot, where governor subsequently directed liquidation of bank.—Gibbes v. Zimmerman, S.C., 54 S.Ct. 140, 290 U.S. 326, 78 L.Ed. 342.

Cause held not moot

98. U.S.—U. S. v. Alaska S. S. Co., N.Y., 40 S.Ct. 448, 253 U.S. 113, 64 L.Ed. 808, reversing, D.C., Alaska S. S. Co v. U. S., 259 F. 713.

In absence of stipulation

(1) Under Rev.St. §§ 649, 700, Comp.St. §§ 1587, 1668, relative to trials without a jury, if there be no written stipulation waiving a jury, no questions can arise on writ of error, except those which arise on the process, pleadings, or judgment.—Commissioners of Road Improvement Dist. No. 2 of Lafayette County, Ark., v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co., Ark., 42 S.Ct. 250, 257 U.S. 547, 66 L.Ed. 364, affirming, C.C.A., St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Commissioners of Road Improvement Dist. No. 2 of Lafayette County, Ark., 265 F. 524, certiorari granted 41 S.Ct. 15, 254 U.S. 626, 65 L.Ed. 445.

(2) "Unless there is a written stipulation waiving a jury, there can be no review of the rulings on questions of law in the course of the trial or of the sufficiency of a special finding to support the judgment."—Duignan v. U. S., N.Y., 47 S.Ct. 566, 567, 274 U.S. 195, 71 L. Ed. 996, affirming, C.C.A., U. S. v. Duignan, 4 F.2d 983.

Extent of review

Where a jury was waived in writing, review by the supreme court is limited to the sufficiency of the facts specially found to support the judgment and to rulings excepted to and presented by a bill of exceptions.—Ingram-Day Lumber Co. v. McLouth, Mich., 48 S.Ct. 153, 275 U.S. 471, 72 L.Ed. 378, reversing, C.C.A., 13 F.2d 581, certiorari granted 47 S.Ct. 239, 273 U.S. 684, 71 L. Ed. 839—Lewellyn v. 4. U.S.—Ingram-Day Lumber Co. v. McLouth, Mich., 48 S.Ct. 153, 275 U.S. 471, 72 L.Ed. 378, reversing, C.C.A., 13 F.2d 581, certiorari

To obtain a review of the conclusions of law, a party must obtain from the trial court special findings which raise the legal propositions, or present the propositions of law and obtain a ruling thereon.[5]

The supreme court may consider the facts admitted and the concessions made by the parties, with the district court's findings of fact, notwithstanding the rule restricting its inquiry to a consideration of the case on the findings.[6]

An appeal in equity has been said to import a broad power of revision.[7] Where, in an equity case, issues are submitted to a jury, the case is to be reviewed on the findings and decision of the court as though there had been no such submission;[8] hence the court will not consider objections based on alleged error in admitting or excluding evidence.[9]

Where a cause is referred by consent of the parties, and the referee's findings and conclusions are adopted by the court, the supreme court may examine the findings and determine whether they support the judgment.[10]

Theory and grounds of decision of lower court. The question for review and determination on appeal is whether the ruling or action of the lower court is correct and not whether the reason given therefor, or the ground on which it professes to be based, is sound or tenable;[11] if the decision or result is correct, it is immaterial whether the grounds or reasons are correct, erroneous, or sufficient.[12] It granted 47 S.Ct. 239, 273 U.S. 684, 71 L.Ed. 839—Tyng v. Grinnell, N. Y., 92 U.S. 467, 23 L.Ed. 733.

Nature of special finding

(1) A special finding within this rule is not a mere report of the evidence, but is a finding of those ultimate facts on which the law must determine the rights of the parties. —Norris v. Jackson, Ill., 9 Wall. 125, 19 L.Ed. 608.

(2) Opinion of trial judge, dealing generally with issues of law and fact, and giving reasons for conclusion, is not special finding of fact. —Fleischmann Const. Co. v. U. S., to Use of Forsberg, Va., 46 S.Ct. 284, 270 U.S. 349, 70 L.Ed. 624, affirming, C.C.A., 298 F. 330, affirming, D.C., U. S. v. Fleischmann Const. Co., 298 F. 320, error allowed, C.C.A., 298 F. 1020.

An agreed statement of facts, as far as it sets forth ultimate facts as distinct from testimony as to evidential facts, may be considered as taking the place of special findings.—Lehnen v. Dickson, Mo., 13 S. Ct. 481, 148 U.S. 71, 37 L.Ed. 373—4 C.J. p 656 note 26.

5. U.S.—Fleischmann Const. Co. v. U. S., to Use of Forsberg, Va., 46 S.Ct. 284, 270 U.S. 349, 70 L.Ed. 624, affirming, C.C.A., 298 F. 330, affirming, D.C., U. S. v. Fleischmann Const. Co., 298 F. 320, error allowed, C.C.A., 298 F. 1020.

7. U.S.—Radio Corporation of America v. Radio Engineering Laboratories, N.Y., 55 S.Ct. 928, 293 U.S. 1, 79 L.Ed. 163, amending 54 S.Ct. 752, 78 L Ed. 1453, reversing, C.C.A., 66 F.2d 768, reversing, D.C., 1 F.Supp. 65, certiorari granted 54 S.Ct. 373, 290 U.S. 624, 78 L.Ed. 544, amended and rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 66, 293 U. S. 522, 79 L Ed. 634.

Review of refusal of preliminary injunction

Fair compliance with rule of civil procedure for district courts requiring findings of fact is of the highest importance to proper review of court's action in granting or refusing preliminary injunction.—Mayo v. Lakeland Highlands Canning Co., Fla., 60 S.Ct. 517, 309 U.S. 310, 84 L.Ed. 774, reversing, D.C., Lakeland Highlands Canning Co. v. Mayo, 28 F.Supp. 44.

Speculation as to lower court's action

Where the court of claims rejected requests for additional findings which were filed more than the prescribed sixty days after judgment, not because of the delay, but for reasons which showed that the court misapprehended the nature of the main issue, the supreme court could not say that the court of claims would have rejected the requests because of the delay if it had not done so on the other grounds.—Winton v. Amos, 41 S.Ct. 342, 255 U.S. 373, 65 L.Ed. 684, affirming in part, and reversing in part 51 Ct.Cl. 284, and reversing 52 Ct.Cl. 90.

The exclusion of evidence, even though not proper on the ground, or one of the grounds, stated in the ruling, is not reversible error where it is proper on any ground.—Lewellyn v. Electric Reduction Co., 48 S. Ct. 63, 275 U.S. 243, 72 L Ed. 262, reversing, C.C.A., Electric Reduction Co. v. Foote, N.Y., 14 How. 218, 14 L.Ed. 394.

Examination of record to sustain judgment

If respondents by record can demonstrate that judgment below was right and should be affirmed although given on untenable grounds, supreme court, if satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that it can do so without prejudice to petitioner, may properly refrain from reversal; but in absence of claim of respondents is only in exceptional cases coming from the federal courts that questions not pressed or passed on below are reviewed by the supreme court.[13]

A party who was successful in the trial court cannot, in the supreme court, support his judgment on a theory other than that on which he brought and tried his case.[14]

An erroneous award of damages will not be upheld, on appeal, as an estimate, where it was not made as such.[15]

Review dependent on nature of decision appealed from. An appeal from a final decree of the circuit court of appeals brings up the entire cause for such disposition as the justice of the case may require.[16] On appeal from a decree pro confesso, the sufficiency of the bill,[17] but not the sufficiency of the evidence,[18] to sustain the decree is open to review; and the sufficiency of the bill to sustain the decree has been declared the only question open for review.[19]

On appeal from a decree dismissing the complaint in limine, questions as to burden of proof or mode of trial are not before the court;[20] and, on appeal from a dismissal for want of jurisdiction, matters pertaining to the merits cannot be considered.[21] On appeal from a judgment dismissing a complaint solely on the ground that it did not state a cause of action, the court may read the complaint in the light of facts of which it may take judicial notice,[22] and the decision on appeal should not turn on other matters which are the proper subjects of determinations of fact by the trial court.[23]

On appeal from an order granting or denying a preliminary or interlocutory injunction, the court will not decide the merits but will consider only whether the court below properly exercised its discretion.[24]

Review dependent on mode of review. In a proceeding by appeal, review extends to the findings of fact as well as to the rulings on questions of law;[25] but the review on a writ of error extended, and was confined, to errors of law apparent on the record,[26] and did not extend to questions of fact.[27] Where a case is properly before the supreme court, an objection which would not have entitled the re-that, conceding errors exposed by opinion of supreme court judgment below was right, court will not examine record to discover grounds to sustain judgment.—Indiana Farmers' Guide Pub. Co. v. Prairie Farmer Pub. Co., Ind., 55 S.Ct. 182, 293 U.S. 268, 79 L.Ed. 356, reversing, C. Decree held final

A decree of the circuit court of appeals, dismissing an appeal from a decree for defendant in a suit to set aside an Indian's deed on a finding that his stipulation for dismissal of the suit with prejudice was a final settlement of the issues, is a final decree, an appeal from which brings not only the validity of the stipulation, but the entire cause, to the supreme court for disposition, under Rev.St. § 701, Comp.St. § 1669. —Kendall v. Matter treated as admitted

Where a bill to set aside an order of the interstate commerce commission permitting a railroad company to acquire control of railroads alleged as a fact that the commission's finding that such acquisition would be in the public interest was unsupported by evidence, and the motions to dismiss did not suggest that such fact was not well pleaded, or that a copy of the evidence should have been annexed to the bill, such fact will be treated as admitted on appeal from a decree of dismissal.—Chicago Junction Case, Ill., 44 S.Ct. 317, 264 U.S. 258, 68 L. lator to bring the case to that court by appeal must be considered.[28]

Interlocutory, collateral, and supplementary matters. Orders or rulings on demurrers[29] or on pleas in abatement[30] are reviewable on appeal or writ of error from the final judgment, provided the order or ruling was adverse to appellant. An order refusing to remove the cause from the state to the federal court may be reviewed on appeal from the final judgment.[31]

An appeal from a final decree in equity ordinarily brings up the whole cause on its merits, including interlocutory orders or decrees connected with the final decree and affecting the merits of the controversy,[32] and an appealable interlocutory order or decree may be reviewed on appeal from the final decree.[33]

A previous order, judgment, or decree which is final in its nature and from which an appeal might have been taken is not brought up by, and cannot be considered or reviewed on, an appeal from a subsequent order or decree,[34] such as a decree confirming a sale.[35]

Parties entitled to allege error; estoppel. The court will not entertain assignments of error which appellant bases on rulings, orders, or proceedings in the trial court which may be prejudicial or injurious to others, but are not so as to him;[36] and a decree will not be reversed at the instance of appellant because of alleged errors which concern only parties below who are not parties to the appeal.[37]

An appellee is not entitled to present for review exceptions taken by him to rulings, orders, instructions, decisions, or findings of the trial court, or to attack the judgment entered below, unless he has taken or sued out a separate, or cross, appeal;[38] if he has not done so he cannot go beyond supporting the judgment and opposing every assignment of error.[39] Findings in equity may be revised at the instance of appellant, if they are against the weight of evidence, but not on behalf of appellee if the revision of the findings carries with it as an incident a revision of the judgment.[40]

A party on appeal will not be permitted to take advantage of errors which he himself invited or induced the trial court to commit,[41] and a party

Extent of appellee's contention

Without a cross appeal, an appellee may urge in support of a decree any matter appearing in record, although involving an attack on the reasoning of the lower court or an insistence on a matter overlooked or ignored by it, but may not attack the decree with a view to enlarging his own rights or lessening the rights of his adversary, whether he seeks to correct an error or to supplement the decree.—Morley Const. assigning error to a portion of a decree cannot have it reversed in that particular where he fails to furnish the data necessary for the change requested;[42] but a plaintiff against whom judgment is rendered is not estopped to assert, on appeal or error, that the court to which he resorted had no jurisdiction of the person of defendant.[43] A party who pleads over, or proceeds to trial on the merits, after an adverse decision on his motion for verdict[44] or for nonsuit[45] will not be permitted to allege error in such decision.

Amendment; additional proofs; trial de novo. The amendment of a pleading so as to show jurisdictional facts may now be allowed by the supreme court, under empowering statute, or the court may, in proper circumstances, consider the pleading as so amended;[46] but an amendment of a pleading will not be permitted where it would have the effect of reversing the judgment or in any way affecting a substantial right of the adverse party.[47] A motion to amend a bill, first made in the supreme court, will be overruled where it does not appear that the alleged facts have been recently discovered and there is no affidavit in respect of them.[48]

Defects in proofs cannot be supplied in the supreme court, and that court can determine a cause only on the record of the court below;[49] an appeal to the court is in no sense a trial de novo.[50]

Presumptions. The supreme court will indulge a presumption in favor of the correctness of the judgment, order, or decree from which the appeal was taken,[51] the burden of showing error being on

Mode of trial generally

Where a party voluntarily adopts a certain form of procedure or agrees to the manner in which his rights shall be submitted for determination in the trial court, he will not be permitted to complain, on appeal or error, that proceedings had in conformity thereto were erroneous.—Perego v. Dodge, Utah, 16 S.Ct. 971, 163 U.S. 160, 41 L.Ed. 113.

Admission of evidence

Appellant or plaintiff in error will not be permitted to assign as error the admission of evidence which he himself has introduced.—Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Collins Produce Co., Ill., 39 S.Ct. 189, 249 U.S. 186, 63 L. Ed. 552, affirming 235 F. 857, 149 C.C.A. 169—McGillin v. Bennett, Ill., 10 S.Ct. 122, 132 U.S. 445, 33 L.Ed. 422—Avendano v. Gay, La., 8 Wall. 376, 19 L.Ed. 422.

Instructions

A defendant in error will not be heard to allege error in an instruction given at his request by the trial court.—Maxwell Land-Grant Co. v. Dawson, N.M., 14 S.Ct. 458, 151 U.S. 586, 38 L.Ed. 279.

Finding

A party on appeal is precluded from attacking a finding or conclusion amended at his instance.—U. S. v. St. Louis & M. V. Transp. Co., 22 S.Ct. 350, 184 U.S. 247, 46 L.Ed. 520, affirming 33 Ct.Cl. 251.

Judgment or order; amount of recovery

(1) A party who procures the rendition or entry of a judgment, decree, or order, or is responsible for error therein, is estopped to assert, on error, that it is erroneous.—U. S. v. Memphis, Tenn., 97 U.S. 284, 24 L.Ed. 937.

(2) An appellant is precluded from objecting, on appeal, that an excessive allowance was made to his adversary out of a fund in which both of them are interested, where he has received the benefit of a similar allowance.—Terry v. Abraham, Ga., 93 U.S. 38, 23 L.Ed. 794.

Where enough appears on the face of the papers to give the court jurisdiction, it is within its discretion to allow the pleadings to be amended on motion, provided no new cause of action, affecting the jurisdiction of either court, is thereby introduced.—Kennedy v. Georgia Bank, Ga., 8 How. 586, 12 L.Ed. 1209.

49. U.S.—Roemer v. Simon, N.J., 91 U.S. 149, 23 L.Ed. 267.

4 C.J. p 724 note 6.

In equity cases, no new evidence can be received in the supreme court.—Blease v. Garlington, S.C., 92 U.S. 1, 23 L.Ed. 521.

50. Cal.—Sanborn v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co., 108 P.2d 458, 42 Cal. App.2d 99.

51. U.S.—Bagnell v. Broderick, Mo., 13 Pet. 436, 10 L.Ed. 235.

Admission and reception of evidence

(1) Where evidence was admitted and the record does not show any ruling on an objection thereto, it may be presumed that the evidence was admitted by consent.—Shields v. Hanbury, Ill., 9 S.Ct. 176, 128 U. S. 584, 32 L.Ed. 565.

(2) If the trial court rejected an offer of testimony, and allowed a bill of exceptions, which shows that the offer was made and refused, and there is nothing else in the record to indicate bad faith, the supreme court must assume that the proof could have been made.—Scotland County v. Hill, Mo., 5 S.Ct. 93, 112 U.S. 183, 28 L.Ed. 692.

Sufficiency of evidence

(1) Where the appeal is on the judgment roll alone, the court "must assume that there was sufficient evidence to sustain the court's decree."—Neblett v. Carpenter, 59 S.Ct. 170, 174, 305 U.S. 297, 83 L.Ed. 182, affirming Carpenter v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Cal., 74 P.2d 761, 10 Cal.2d 307, certiorari granted

Neblett v. Carpenter, 58 S.Ct. 1039, 304 U.S. 555, 82 L.Ed. 1524, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 61, 305 U.S. 562, 83 L.Ed. 354, and rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 355, 305 U.S. 675, 83 L.Ed. 437.

(2) Where the determination of a question presented for review depends on evidence, and the record on appeal does not show or purport to show all the evidence pertaining to it in the manner required by the practice in the particular jurisdiction, it will be presumed that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the ruling or the action of the court.—Cohn v. Daley, Ariz., 19 S.Ct. 802, 174 U.S. 539, 43 L.Ed. 1077.

(3) In case bill of exceptions does not contain all evidence, it will be presumed that evidence omitted was sufficient to justify refusal of directed verdict.—Krauss Bros. Lumber Co. v. Mellon, Ala., 48 S.Ct. 358, 276 U.S. 386, 72 L.Ed. 620, reversing, C. C.A., 18 F.2d 369, certiorari granted 48 S.Ct. 35, 275 U.S. 513, 72 L.Ed. 400, certiorari denied 49 S.Ct. 513, 279 U.S. 872, 73 L.Ed. 1008, and amended 48 S.Ct. 527, 72 L.Ed. 1018, mandate conformed to, C.C.A., 30 F.2d 901.

Presumption for reversal

(1) "We will not . . . indulge in any presumptions unfavorable to the judgment, and for the purpose of reversing it, unless they are natural and probable, and such as ought to be drawn from the facts actually found by the court below."—Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrigation Co. v. Garland, Utah, 17 S.Ct. 7, 14, 164 U.S. 1, 41 L.Ed. 327.

(2) The court will not, for the purpose of finding reversible error, presume the existence of facts as to which the record is silent.—Collins v. Riley, W.Va., 104 U.S. 322, 26 L.Ed. 752.

Pleading

(1) In case the pleadings are substantially sufficient, but contain a slight defect or omission, it will be presumed that the omission was supplied or the defect cured by the evidence.—Stockton v. Bishop, Pa., 4 How. 155, 11 L.Ed. 918.

(2) On review of an order or judgment dismissing a pleading on the ground of its insufficiency in law, it must be assumed that the allegations thereof are true.—U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrigation Co., 19 S. Ct. 770, 174 U.S. 690, 43 L.Ed. 1136, reversing 9 N.M. 292, 51 P. 674.

(3) On appeal from judgment granting a motion to dismiss the complaint in an action to enjoin enforcement of an order of the federal communications commission, allegations of complaint must be accepted as true.—Columbia Broadcasting System v. U. S., N.Y., 62 S Ct. 1194, 316 U.S. 407, 86 L.Ed. 1563

(4) Where a case was submitted and decided on the pleadings, every uncontradicted allegation of fact by the unsuccessful party must be taken as true.—Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. City of Newport, Ky., 38 S.Ct. 566, 247 U.S. 464, 62 L.Ed. 1215, reversing 169 S.W. 700, 160 Ky. 244.

(5) Averments of bill for injunction must be taken as true on appeal from decree granting permanent injunction after motion to dismiss bill was overruled.—Smith v. Illinois Bell Telephone Co., Ill., 46 S.Ct. 408, 270 U.S. 587, 70 L.Ed. 747.

(6) It will be presumed that a court rule concerning the time of filing a plea, but not set out in the record, sustains the refusal of the lower court to permit the filing of the plea.—Washington, Alexandria & Georgetown Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, D.C., 19 Wall. 611, 22 L.Ed. 203.

(7) In case it does not appear that there was any ruling or action of the lower court on a demurrer, and the case was otherwise disposed of, it will be presumed that the demurrer was waived or abandoned.—Basey v. Gallagher, Mont., 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. Ed. 452.

(8) The issues raised by a plea will be presumed to have been waived or abandoned at the trial, where, after a demurrer to such plea had been sustained without exception taken, defendant went to trial on the merits without objection, and introduced evidence on other issues, and no evidence was offered or introduced on either side relating to the matters set out in such plea.—German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Hale, Ala., 31 S.Ct. 246, 219 U.S. 307, 55 L.Ed. 229.

(9) If the record is complete, the existence of other grounds for striking out a plea or answer than those appearing therein will not be presumed.—Garnharts v. U. S., Ala., 16 Wall. 162, 21 L.Ed. 275.

Dismissal

If, in a suit to enjoin the enforcement of a state statute, the state was required to establish that an inspection fee was not excessive, the state will be deemed, on appeal from a decree dismissing the suit, to have sustained the burden.—Bourjois, Inc. v. Chapman, Me., 57 S.Ct. 691, 301 U.S. 183, 81 L.Ed. 1027.

Verdict and findings

(1) Verdict in action for injuries deemed to establish defendant's negligent failure to furnish safe appliance.—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. v. Smith, N.Y., 59 S.Ct. 262, 305 U.S. 424, 83 L.Ed. 265, affirming, C.C.A., Smith v. Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 96 F.2d 98, certiorari granted Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. v. Smith, 59 S.Ct. 81, 305 U.S. 586, 83 L.Ed. 370.

(2) Presumptions will not be indulged in favor of a general finding by the court where the findings are based on agreed or stipulated facts and it was not agreed that inferences might be drawn.—Burr v. Des Moines R. & Nav. Co., Iowa, 1 Wall. 99, 17 L. Ed. 561.

(3) The court will indulge in presumptions favorable to the report and findings of a master, referee, auditor, or commissioner.—Camden v. Stuart, W.Va., 12 S.Ct. 585, 144 U.S. 104, 36 L.Ed. 363—Kimberly v. Arms, Ohio, 9 S.Ct. 355, 129 U.S. 512, 32 L. Ed. 764.

(4) Where the evidence is conflicting, the presumption is in favor of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings or report of such officer.—Callaghan v. Myers, Ill. 9 S. Ct. 177, 128 U.S. 617, 32 L.Ed. 547.

New trial; rehearing

(1) Where the lower court overruled a motion for a new trial, it will be presumed that it considered all the grounds of the motion.—Haws v. Victoria Copper Mining Co., Utah, 16 S.Ct. 282, 160 U.S. 303, 40 L.Ed. 436.

(2) Where a transcript on appeal shows that on the entry of the decree a motion was made for a rehearing, but fails to show any disposition thereof at the same term, and shows that at the next term an order was made setting the cause for hearing, and that shortly afterward an order was entered nunc pro tunc granting the rehearing, it must be presumed that a rehearing was actually granted at the trial term.—Fowler v. Equitable Trust Co., Ill., 12 S.Ct. 1, 141 U.S. 384, 35 L.Ed. 786.

Judgment or decree

(1) In the absence of a contrary showing, it will be presumed that the judgment appealed from was authorized by the pleadings.—Morgan v. Eggers, Ind., 8 S.Ct. 1041, 127 U.S. 63, 32 L.Ed. 56.

(2) Where it does not appear that all the evidence is before the court, it will be presumed that the missing evidence, together with that in the record, would be sufficient to support the judgment.—Zimmerman v. Harding, Puerto Rico, 33 S.Ct. 387, 227 U. S. 489, 57 L.Ed. 608.

(3) Where the case was tried before the court without a jury, the judgment is presumed to have been based only on the competent evidence.—J. J. McCaskill Co. v. U. S., Fla., 30 S.Ct. 386, 216 U.S. 504, 54 L. Ed. 590.

(4) Where a decree recites that it is by consent, the requisite authority to consent will be presumed to have been found by the lower court on a due showing.—Pacific R. R. v. Ketchum, Mo., 101 U.S. 289, 25 L.Ed. 932.

Taking and perfecting appeal

(1) Presumption in favor of the

the party alleging it.[52] It has been held that every reasonable presumption should be indulged against waiver of a trial by jury,[53] and that the regularity of the transfer of a cause from a state to a federal court will be presumed.[54]

Discretion of lower court. The general principle that the supreme court will not review the actions or rulings of lower courts with respect to matters resting in their judicial discretion, unless an abuse of discretion is clearly shown, has been applied to matters pertaining to parties,[55] pleadings,[56] bail,[57] the grant or denial of a temporary, interlocutory, or preliminary injunction,[58] the appointment of a re-grant or allowance of the appeal.—Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Bradleys, D.C., 7 Wall. 575, 19 L.Ed. 274.

(2) Presumption in favor of the proper amount of the appeal bond or undertaking.—French v. Shoemaker, Va., 12 Wall. 86, 20 L.Ed. 270.

(3) Presumption that the dating of a writ of error, citation, and bond as of a day prior to the rendition of judgment was a clerical error.—Glenn v. Liggett, Mo., 10 S.Ct. 867, 135 U.S. 533, 34 L.Ed. 262.

(4) No presumption that there are other parties than those named in the writ of error.—Gumbel v. Pitkin, La., 5 S.Ct. 616, 113 U.S. 545, 28 L.Ed. 1128.

Bill of exceptions

(1) The court will presume, in the absence of a contrary showing, that the bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts contains everything necessary and material to a review of the points of error specified.—Arthurs v. Hart, La., 17 How. 6, 15 L.Ed. 30.

(2) Where it appears that the bill of exceptions, case, or statement of facts was settled, it will be presumed, in the absence of a contrary showing, that the settlement was regular.—U. S. v. Hodge, La., 6 How. 279, 12 L.Ed. 437.

(3) In these circumstances, it will also be presumed that the judge or other person who signed and approved the bill, case, or statement had the requisite authority to do so.—Cooke v. Avery, Tex., 13 S.Ct. 340, 147 U.S. 375, 37 L.Ed. 209.

(4) It will be presumed that a filing nunc pro tunc was not improper.—McGavock v. Woodlief, La., 20 How. 221, 15 L.Ed. 884.

(5) The court will not presume that all the evidence is in the bill of exceptions where to do so would necessitate a further presumption of a direct violation of a settled rule of practice that the bill of exceptions should contain only so much of the evidence as is necessary to explain the rulings of the court to which exceptions were taken.—Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, Mich., 12 S.Ct. 679, 144 U.S. 408, 36 L.Ed. 485, affirming, C.C., 35 F. 176.

Other matters

(1) Existence of certificate of attorney general presumed.—U. S. v. Winston, Wash., 18 S.Ct. 701, 170 U.S. 522, 42 L.Ed. 1130, affirming 73 F. 149, 19 C.C.A. 419.

(2) There being no evidence to the contrary, the supreme court, on appeal, will adopt the assumption that trustees for shareholder savings banks acted lawfully in making payments to receiver of insolvent national bank.—Korbly v. Springfield Inst. for Savings, Mass., 38 S.Ct. 88, 245 U.S. 330, 62 L.Ed. 326, affirming Pepper v. Springfield Inst. for Savings, 218 F. 814, 134 C.C.A. 502.

(3) On review of conviction for violation of interstate commerce commission's order prescribing preferences for shipments of coal, under statute, the supreme court must assume that an emergency contemplated by the statute existed as found by the Commission and alleged in the indictment.—Avent v. U. S., Ohio, 45 S.Ct. 34, 266 U.S. 127, 69 L.Ed. 202.

(4) Where record does not show that defendants delayed hearing of their motion to transfer equity suit to law side, presumption is that matter was referred to judge sitting in equity to be heard at court's convenience.—Schoenthal v. Irving Trust Co., N.Y., 53 S.Ct. 50, 827 U.S. 92, 77 L.Ed. 185, reversing, C.C.A., Irving Trust Co. v. Schoenthal, 54 F.2d 1079, certiorari granted 52 S.Ct. 459, 285 U.S. 536, 76 L.Ed. 929.

(5) On appeal from the court of claims, which had twice tried a breach of contract case against the post office department, it will be assumed that the court, in fixing damages, gave proper consideration to elements affecting the cost of performance and to the fact that plaintiff did not actually manufacture the goods covered by the contract.—U. S. v. Purcell Envelope Co., 39 S.Ct. 300, 249 U.S. 313, 63 L.Ed. 620, affirming Purcell Envelope Co. v. U. S., 51 Ct. Cl. 211.

(6) On appeal from decree of federal district court dismissing bill on the ground that the controversy was res judicata by reason of denial of petition to state supreme court under Cal. Pub. Utilities Act § 67, for writ of review to the commission, it may be presumed that the petition, not in the record, circumstantially exhibited and submitted to the court the questions it was authorized to entertain, including a determination of whether the commission's order violated any right under the federal constitution.—Napa Valley Electric Co. v. Railroad Commission of California, Cal., 40 S.Ct. 174, 251 U.S. 366, 64 L.Ed. 310, affirming D.C., 257 F. 197.

Instructions

Where matters of set-off are pleaded by defendant in a suit by the United States, the refusal of the trial court to direct the jury to certify the amount which they may find to be due defendant from plaintiff will not be reviewed in the United States supreme court.—Schaumburg v. Inadequate damages

Where jury awarded only nominal damages, although evidence showed substantial damages, refusal to grant new trial could not be held erroneous as matter of law, where trial court, so far as record shows, did not explain ruling or interpret verdict.—Fairmount Glass Works v. Cub Fork Coal Co., Ind., 53 S.Ct. 252, 287 U.S. 474, 77 L.Ed. 439, reversing, C. C.A., Cub Fork Coal Co. v. Fairmount Glass Works, 59 F.2d 539, certiorari granted Fairmount Glass Works v. Circumstances justifying review

Denial of new trial may be reviewed if trial court erroneously excluded from consideration matters appropriate to decision on motion therefor, or if trial court acted on mistaken view that there was no jurisdiction to grant motion, or that there was no authority to grant it on grounds advanced.—Fairmount Glass Works v. Cub Fork Coal Co., supra.

court does not extend to a refusal by it to apply well settled principles of law to a conceded state of facts.[74]

Questions of law or fact; verdicts; findings. As a general rule, the supreme court will confine itself to the determination of questions of law,[75] although it has been said that the court, in dealing with mixed questions of law and fact, may review the facts in order to apply the law correctly.[76] What is designated by the trial court as a conclusion of law will be treated on review as a finding of fact if essentially of that character.[77] So the decision of the trial court will be upheld where there is evidence to sustain its findings,[78] unless the trial court has palpably abused its discretion;[79] and the lower court's determination of preliminary questions of fact on which depends the admissibility of evidence[80] or the competency of a witness to testify as an expert[81] is generally held final.

Ordinarily the verdict or findings of a jury will be taken as conclusive and will not be disturbed,[82] as where the case was properly submitted to the jury and no errors were committed in the rulings or in the instructions of the trial court,[83] or where the evidence on which the verdict was founded was sufficient to warrant its submission to the jury[84] or to warrant the jury's finding;[85] and the verdict or findings of a jury will not be disturbed where the evidence is conflicting.[86] On the other hand, the verdict or finding may be disturbed if, under the testimony, no recovery could be had on the facts shown in any view which could properly be taken of them,[87] or if all reasonable men, exercising an unprejudiced judgment, would draw an opposite conclusion from the facts,[88] or if essential facts are left in the realm of conjecture and speculation;[89] and a judgment will be reversed if, on an examination of the record, it is found that as a matter of law the evidence is not sufficient to sustain the essential findings of fact,[90] or where it is found that the verdict was the result of appeals to passion and prejudice.[91]

It is the general rule that the fact findings of the trial court in a case tried without a jury are, on appeal, to be given the same effect or weight as jury verdicts,[92] that is, if they have proper evidentiary support and are free from legal error, the supreme court will regard the trial court's fact findings as conclusive and binding, and as establishing with finality that the facts are in truth as found;[93] but the question of whether or not the fact findings of the trial court are sufficiently sustained by the record evidence is one which will be passed on by the court.[94] Such findings of fact are to be regarded as adequately supported, and left undisturbed, if the record discloses that they are sustained by any competent evidence,[95] or by substantial evidence,[96] or if the evidence is conflicting;[97] and the mere fact that a finding may appear to be against the weight or preponderance of the evidence will not cause it to be disturbed unless it is clearly, manifestly, or palpably against the great weight of the evidence.[98] A trial court's refusal to make requested findings containing mixed questions of law and fact will not be reviewed;[99] but, where the facts as to which the request is made are established by admitted or undisputed proof, refusals to find present reviewable questions.[1]

challenging their correctness;[4] and where the courts below agree as to the material facts, the supreme court will consider them only as far as needful to pass on questions of law.[5]

The findings of a referee, master, commissioner, or auditor will not be disturbed when supported by sufficient evidence,[6] and will generally be upheld where the evidence is conflicting;[7] they are not to be disturbed merely because they appear to be against the weight of the evidence, but only if they are clearly and manifestly against such weight.[8] These rules apply particularly where such findings were approved by the trial court;[9] but even in that circumstance the reviewing court is not conclusively bound by them, but may, under certain circumstances, review the case and set aside the findings.[10]

The action of the trial court in refusing to direct a verdict will be upheld unless manifestly wrong.[11] A judgment entered on a verdict directed by the court after both parties had moved for such direction must stand unless the court's ruling is wrong as a matter of law;[12] and, where both parties request a peremptory instruction, a finding of fact by the trial court must stand if the record discloses substantial evidence to support it.[13]

Compensation of receiver

The fact that the supreme court if the question of the compensation of a receiver had been an original one, would have awarded a much smaller amount than that allowed by the auditor, with the approval of the courts below, will not justify it in setting aside the findings.—Cake v. Evidence and inferences therefrom

(1) In determining whether verdict should have been directed for defendant, "we assume as established all the facts that the evidence supporting . . . [plaintiff's] claims tends to prove, and that there should be drawn in his favor all the inferences fairly deducible from such facts."—Lumbra v. U. Technical or formal errors will be deemed harmless on appeal.—Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, Pa., 101 U.S. 557, 25 L.Ed. 892.

Cure of error by instructions

Error in denying a motion to strike is harmless where it is cured

dice, is not ground for reversal.[15] So, where the judgment is clearly correct on the merits, intervening errors will not operate to reverse it,[16] and appellant cannot complain of errors which were favorable to him.[17] Whether the case comes from a state court or a federal court, the supreme court will, for the purpose of determining whether the error found may have been prejudicial, examine the whole record.[18] It has been held, as in the case of the improper admission of evidence over objection,[19] and erroneous instructions to a jury,[20] that the harmlessness of an error must be made to appear affirmatively or beyond doubt.[21]

In the application of these rules, errors of lower courts which have been held harmless by the supreme court, in particular circumstances, include errors consisting of, or with respect to, misjoinder of parties,[22] the permitting of an intervention,[23] improper service of process,[24] rulings on demurrers,[25] the rejection of a juror challenged for cause,[26] the allowance to a party of more than the legal number of peremptory challenges,[27] premature trial,[28] and direction of verdict.[29]

On the other hand, errors which have been held prejudicial include misconduct of counsel in making by the instructions.—San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena, Puerto Rico, 32 S.Ct. 399, 224 U.S. 89, 56 L.Ed. 680.

Requiring election between several causes of action is not prejudicial error where appellant is not deprived of the benefit of any material fact.—Buckeye Powder Co. v. E. I. Dupont de Nemours Powder Co., N.J., 39 S.Ct. 38, 248 U.S. 55, 63 L.Ed. 123, affirming 223 F. 881, 139 C.C.A. 319.

Submission of issues to jury

(1) Where it appears that the objecting party was not injured, error in submitting issues of fact does not constitute ground for reversal.—Texas & P. R. Co. v. Howell, Tex., 32 S.Ct. 601, 224 U.S. 577, 56 L.Ed. 892.

(2) The erroneous submission of questions of law to the jury will not be ground for reversal where no prejudice resulted to appellant.—Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Deselms, 29 S. Ct. 270, 212 U.S. 159, 53 L.Ed. 453, affirming 89 P. 212, 18 Okl. 107.

(3) So, there is no prejudicial error where the jury correctly construe a written instrument.—Pence v. Langdon, Minn., 99 U.S. 578, 25 L.Ed. 420.

(4) In an action for personal injuries, defendant did not get less than it was entitled to when the trial court left to the jury the question whether the law of Panama, where the accident occurred, authorized recovery for negligence of employees selected with due care and allowed recovery for pain and suffering.—Panama R. Co. v. Pigott, Canal Zone, 41 S.Ct. 199, 254 U.S. 552, 65 L.Ed. 400, affirming 256 F. 837, 168 C.C.A. 183.

Verdict; judgment

(1) Error merely in the form, and not affecting the substance, of a verdict is not ground for reversal. —Parks v. Turner, La., 12 How. 39, 13 L.Ed. 883.

(2) Merely formal or trivial errors in the judgment are not ground for reversal.—Rice v. Edwards, Minn., 131 U.S. appendix clxxv, 25 L. Ed. 976—Kilbourn v. Sunderland, D. C., 9 S.Ct. 594, 130 U.S. 505, 32 L. Ed. 1005.

New trial

Errors of procedure in connection with a motion for new trial which was properly denied are not prejudicial or a ground for reversal.—Spreckels v. Brown, Hawaii, 29 S. Ct. 256, 212 U.S. 208, 53 L.Ed. 476.

Refusal to stay proceedings

Although suit by defendants, attacking validity of mortgage which plaintiffs sought to foreclose, was pending, refusal of court to stay foreclosure proceedings until determination of first suit was harmless as to defendants, mortgage being upheld in first suit.—Ibanez v. Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corp., Philippine, 38 S.Ct. 413, 246 U.S. 627, 62 L.Ed. 907.

inflammatory or unjustified remarks,[30] and the dismissal of a bill on the merits when it should have been dismissed for want of jurisdiction.[31]

Harmless error as to evidence. Error in the admission of evidence is not ground for a reversal where it was not prejudicial to the party complaining,[32] as where it was so utterly irrelevant, immaterial, or unimportant that it was obviously harmless,[33] or where it did not affect the result or could not have done so,[34] or where the fact sought to be shown by the improper evidence is fully and clearly established by other evidence which is competent.[35] So, error in admitting evidence without the necessary preliminary proof to render it competent is not ground for reversal where the complaining party was not prejudiced thereby.[36] Error in admitting evidence is harmless where the issue on which it is admitted is found in favor of the complaining party,[37] or is rendered immaterial by a verdict or finding on another issue or issues,[38] or where the court instructs the jury to the effect that the question on which such evidence was admitted is not in issue.[39]

It has been said to be the right and the duty of a court to correct an error arising from the erroneous admission of evidence when the error is discovered;[40] so, if evidence erroneously admitted is distinctly stricken out or withdrawn by the court, the error is cured,[41] except where it is manifest that the prejudicial effect of the evidence on the jury remained despite its exclusion and influenced their verdict.[42] Likewise, error in the admission of evidence may be cured by an instruction to disregard, or not to consider, the evidence improperly admitted,[43] the view being taken that such an instruction is equivalent to striking the improper evidence out of the case;[44] and such error may also be cured by the withdrawal or striking out of the evidence together with an instruction to disregard it,[45] unless it appears that the evidence admitted is so impressive that in the opinion of the supreme court its prejudicial effect was not removed from the minds

Misstating defense

Repeated statements of plaintiffs' counsel in his argument to the jury, in an action against a railroad for injuries resulting from negligent operation of its trains, that syphilis was the defense, after denial thereof by defendant, coupled with vituperative language and statements that defendant had charged plaintiff with indecency, was held so prejudicial as to require reversal of judgments for plaintiffs, in view of the trial judge's failure to sustain an objection or otherwise make certain that the jury would disregard such appeal to passion and prejudice.—New York Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, supra.

Damages

Admission of improper testimony on the question of damages is not cured by an instruction in general terms on the measure of damages.—Washington Gaslight Co. v. Lansden, D.C., 19 S.Ct. 296, 172 U.S. 534, 43 L.Ed. 543.

Where there is other evidence to support verdict, it will be presumed that the instruction was obeyed.—Turner v. American Security & Trust Co., 29 S.Ct. 420, 213 U.S. 257, 53 L.Ed. 788, affirming 29 App.D.C. 460—New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Madison, Ohio, 8 S.Ct. 246, 123 U.S. 524, 31 L.Ed. 258.

of the jury by such withdrawal and instruction.[46]

Error in the exclusion of evidence may be harmless, not prejudicing the complaining party,[47] as where it could not have affected the result;[48] and the exclusion of immaterial evidence is not ground for reversal.[49] In its instructions to the jury, the trial court may cure whatever error it may have committed in ruling out evidence,[50] as where it assumes the existence of proof of the fact sought to be established by the evidence in question and thus gives the party all the benefit which he could have derived from its admission.[51]

Harmless error as to instructions. The giving of an erroneous instruction will not constitute a ground for reversal where the complaining party has not been injured thereby,[52] and, a fortiori, when the erroneous instruction is in fact favorable to the complaining party;[53] and where no prejudice results, it is not reversible error to give an instruction which is informal, inaccurate, incomplete, or lacking in clearness or certainty,[54] or an instruction which is abstract or not authorized by, or applicable to, the pleadings and evidence.[55] On the other hand, when the case has been submitted on erroneous instructions which operate to the prejudice of the complaining party, the judgment will be reversed.[56] The mere repetition of instructions is not considered prejudicial error.[57]

Where it is apparent from the whole record that the verdict is correct on the merits, error in the giving of instructions is harmless.[58]

A party cannot complain of the failure or refusal to given an instruction where no prejudice resulted,[59] or where the instruction was unnecessary or

Proof by other evidence

The exclusion of documentary evidence is harmless error where the contents thereof, or the claim sought to be supported or defeated by such evidence, is clearly established by other evidence.—Drumm-Flato Commission Co. v. 4 C.J. p 1004 note 64.

Trial without jury

Where a case is tried by the court without a jury, error in excluding competent evidence will be regarded as harmless if it appears that no other or different judgment could have been rendered if the evidence had been admitted.—Will v. Tornabells, Puerto Rico, 30 S.Ct. 424, 217 U.S. 47, 54 L.Ed. 660—Reavis v. Fianza, Philippine, 30 S.Ct. 1, 215 U.S. 16, 54 L.Ed. 72.

In equity case, or where the verdict is only advisory, error in instructing the jury is not reversible. —McKinley Creek Min. Co. v. Alaska United Min. Co., Alaska, 22 S.Ct. 84, 183 U.S. 563, 46 L.Ed. 331.

Harmlessness shown by special findings

Where special findings by the jury show that the complaining party was not injured by an instruction, error therein will be deemed harmless.—Holloway v. Dunham, Okl., 18 S.Ct. 784, 170 U.S. 615, 42 L.Ed. 1165.

Damages

Error in an instruction as to the measure of damages is harmless where the amount awarded was smaller than the evidence showed, or tended to show, plaintiff was entitled to.—New York, P. & N. R. Co. v. Peninsula Produce Exch. of Maryland, Md., 36 S.Ct. 230, 240 U.S. 34, 60 L.Ed. 511, affirming 89 A. 433, 122 Md. 215.

Court's expression of opinion on facts has been held not prejudicial where such expression in no way invades the province of the jury. —Lawlor v. Loewe, Conn., 35 S.Ct. 170, 235 U.S. 522, 59 L.Ed. 341, affirming 209 F. 721, 126 C.C.A. 445.

Errors in particular classes of cases

Actions by servant for injuries.—New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. v. Scarlet, 39 S.Ct. 369, 249 U.S. 528, 63 L. Ed. 752, reversing 76 So. 265, 115 Miss. 285—Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Mullins, 39 S.Ct. 368, 249 U.S. 531, 63 L.Ed. 754, reversing 76 So. 147, 115 Miss. 343.

related to an immaterial issue.[60] Likewise, the judgment will not be reversed because of the erroneous modification of an instruction, where no prejudice could have resulted.[61]

Waiver of error on appeal. Questions assigned as error by appellant may be deemed to have been abandoned or waived where they are not urged or discussed on appeal,[62] as where they are not properly presented by brief[63] or argument[64] of counsel.

Decisions of intermediate courts. On appeal from the judgment of an intermediate court, the supreme court will not review errors that may have occurred in the trial court;[65] nor will errors be considered which were neither raised in the court of first instance nor assigned for error in the intermediate court,[66] or which could have been, but were not, properly raised and passed on in the intermediate court.[67]

Matters within the sound judicial discretion of an intermediate court will not be reviewed, except in case of manifest and gross abuse,[68] and the correctness of its proceeding and decision will be presumed, in the absence of a clear showing to the contrary.[69]

A judgment of reversal by the circuit court of appeals will be affirmed if any of the errors assigned were well taken.[70]

Subsequent appeals. The supreme court has, in U.S.—Conboy v. Jersey City First Nat. Bank, N.Y., 27 S.Ct. 50, 203 U.S. 141, 51 L.Ed. 128.

Affirmance without opinion
The mere fact that the intermediate court affirmed the judgment of the trial court without an opinion is no ground for reversing the trial court.—Texas & P. R. Co. v. Hill, Tex., 35 S.Ct. 575, 237 U.S. 208, 59 L.Ed. 918.

Preliminary injunction
Except for strong reasons, the supreme court will not interfere with the action of the circuit court of appeals on appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction.—Meccano, Limited v. 4 C.J. p 1082 note 21.

Presumption of reversal on law questions
Where appellate court reversed the judgment of trial court without making a finding of facts, it will be presumed that appellate court found the facts the same as the trial court, and that it reversed the case on questions of law.—West Chicago St. R. Co. v. People, 26 S.Ct. 518, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L.Ed. 845, affirming 73 N.E. 393, 214 Ill. 9, which affirmed 115 Ill.App. 172.

Sustaining conclusion on conflicting evidence
A decree of the circuit court of appeals will be affirmed where the essential question is one of fact and the evidence, although sharply conflicting, sustains the conclusion reached, despite the disclosure of substantial difficulties.—Varner v. New Hampshire Sav. Bank, Kan., 36 S.Ct. 409, 240 U.S. 617, 60 L.Ed. 828, affirming New Hampshire Savings Bank v. Varner, 216 F. 721, 132 C. C.A. 631.

70. U.S.—Frey & Son v. Cudahy Packing Co., Md., 41 S.Ct. 451, 256 U.S. 208, 65 L.Ed. 892, affirming Cudahy Packing Co. v. Frey & Son, 261 F. 65, 171 C.C.A. 661.

general, adhered to the rule that the decision of an appellate court is the law of the case, on the points presented, throughout all the subsequent proceedings, and that no question necessarily decided on that appeal will be considered on a second appeal in the same case, provided the facts and issues are substantially the same as those on which the first decision rested.[71] The court has been held to be bound by its prior decision only on the points distinctly made and determined, and not on points which might have been raised, but were not.[72]

In accordance with this general rule, where, after a definite determination, the court has remanded the cause for further action below, it will refuse to examine questions other than those arising subsequent to such determination and remand, or other than the propriety of the compliance with its mandate;[73] and if the court below has proceeded in substantial conformity to the directions of the supreme court, its action will not be questioned on a second appeal.[74]

n. Determination and Disposition of Cause

The supreme court generally has the power to affirm, modify, or reverse the judgment below, and to make such disposition of the case as justice requires, including the entry or direction of final judgment or a new trial or other proceedings, and its decision and mandate must be complied with in all further proceedings in the case.

In cases coming from inferior federal courts the supreme court has power not only to correct error in the judgment entered below, but also to make such disposition of the case as justice may require.[75] So the supreme court has full power to enter such judgment or order as the nature of the appeal or writ of error may require,[76] and such determination is to be made without regard to technical er-

4 C.J. p 1093 note 77, p 1096 note 91.

Reason for rule
It would be impossible for "an appellate court to perform its duties satisfactorily and efficiently if a question once considered and decided by it were to be litigated anew in the same case upon any and every subsequent appeal."—Great Western Tel. Co. Burnham, Wis., 16 S.Ct. 850, 852, 162 U.S. 339, 343, 40 L.Ed. 991.

Res adjudicata distinguished
"The prior ruling may have been followed as the law of the case, but there is a difference between such adherence and res adjudicata. One directs discretion; the other supersedes it and compels judgment. In other words, in one it is a question of power, in the other of submission."—Southern Ry. Co. v. Clift, 43 S.Ct. 126, 127, 260 U.S. 316, 67 L.Ed. 283, affirming 131 N.E. 4, 190 Ind. 536.

Records on former appeal may be looked into for the purpose of ascertaining what facts and questions were then before the court, so as to see the correct application of the rule.—Thompson v. Maxwell Land-Grant & R. Co., N.M., 18 S.Ct. 121, 168 U.S. 451, 42 L.Ed. 539.

Mere expressions of opinion respecting matters not actually involved in the decision have no binding force.—Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co., Minn., 6 S.Ct. 654, 117 U.S. 228, 29 L.Ed. 858.

Prior and subsequent rulings held not inconsistent
U.S.—Morgan v. U. S., Mo., 58 S.Ct. 999, 304 U.S. 1, 82 L.Ed. 1129, denying rehearing 58 S.Ct. 773, 304 U.S. 1, 82 L.Ed. 1129, reversing, D. C., 23 F.Supp. 380, mandate conformed to 24 F.Supp. 214, reversed on other grounds 59 S.Ct. 795, 307 U.S. 183, 83 L.Ed. 1211, mandate conformed to, D.C., Morgan v. U. S., 32 F.Supp. 546.

Particular questions held concluded by decision on former appeal:
(1) Grounds and right of action.—U. S. Trust Co. v. New Mexico, 22 S.Ct. 172, 183 U.S. 535, 46 L.Ed. 315, affirming 62 P. 987, 10 N.M. 416.
(2) Jurisdiction of supreme court.—Washington Bridge Co. v. Stewart, D.C., 3 How. 413, 11 L.Ed. 658.
(3) Jurisdiction of lower court.—Richardson v. Ainsa, 31 S.Ct. 23, 218 U.S. 289, 54 L.Ed. 1044, affirming 95 P. 103, 11 Ariz. 359—Skillern's Ex'rs v. May's Ex'rs., Ky., 6 Cranch 267, 3 L.Ed. 220.
(4) Sufficiency of pleading.—U. S. Trust Co. v. New Mexico, 22 S.Ct. 172, 183 U.S. 535, 46 L.Ed. 315, affirming 62 P. 987, 10 N.M. 416.

76. U.S.—Camp v. Gress, Va., 39 S. Ct. 478, 250 U.S. 308, 63 L.Ed. 997.
Cases coming from state courts see infra § 281.

Decision of federal question
The supreme court can, if it deems proper, decide the local questions only and omit to decide the federal questions which gave the lower court jurisdiction or decide them adversely to the party claiming their benefit.—Siler v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 29 S.Ct. 451, 213 U.S. 175, 53 L.Ed. 753—25 C.J. p 694 note 91.

Moot issue
(1) Where owing to the moot character of the issue involved the supreme court may not consider the merits, it is at liberty to make such order as is most consonant with justice, in view of the conditions and circumstances of the case.—Heitmuller v. Stokes, 41 S.Ct. 522, 256 U.S. 359, 65 L.Ed. 990, reversing 266 F. 1011, 49 App.D.C. 391.
(2) Dismissal of appeal see supra subdivision k of this section.

Remedies unprejudiced
The court may make its disposition without prejudice to any remedy which the party may be entitled to pursue.—Fidelity Ins. Trust & Safe-Deposit Co. v. McClain, 20 S.Ct. 774, 178 U.S. 113, 44 L.Ed. 998.

Time of decision
While a case before the supreme court should be disposed of without unnecessary delay, decision may be delayed for good cause.—Commonwealth of Virginia v. State of West Virginia, 32 S.Ct. 4, 222 U.S. 17, 56 L.Ed. 71—4 C.J. p 1121 note 20.

Entry of judgment may be made as of a prior date, at which time it might have been entered, when, for any cause, it would be improper to enter it as of the time of the actual entry, this power being commonly rors, defects, or exceptions which do not affect the substantial rights of the parties.[77] The supreme court will not grant relief to a party who has not appealed or complained in the mode provided by law, of the judgment or decree;[78] and the court may, without determining and disposing of a cause, remand it to the lower court for further proceedings, where the record is not in condition properly to decide the questions presented with justice to all parties concerned.[79] The court must generally decide and dispose of the case in accordance with the law existing at the time of its own decision,[80] and exercised where a party dies after the submission of the cause and before decision, in which case entry is made as of the day of submission or other day prior to his death.—Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, D.C., 20 S.Ct. 209, 175 U.S. 648, 44 L.Ed. 309, reversing 83 F. 898, 28 C.C.A. 229, reversing, C.C., 71 F. 835, and motion denied 18 S.Ct. 502, 169 U.S. 644, 42 L.Ed. 889—4 C.J. p 1207 note 49, p 1208 note 50.

Amendment or vacation of judgment

(1) At a time when the court still has jurisdiction for this purpose, it may amend or modify its judgment on a showing of clerical error.—Elizabeth v. American Nicholson Pavement Co., N.J., 131 U.S. appendix cxlviii, 24 L.Ed. 1059—Bank of Commonwealth of Kentucky v. Wistar, Price & Wistar, Ky., 3 Pet. 431, 7 L.Ed. 731.

(2) Judgment may be vacated at any time on a showing of matters which render it absolutely void.—Ex parte Crenshaw, Ala., 15 Pet. 119, 10 L.Ed. 682.

(3) However, the court will not, by amendment or vacation of its judgment, relieve a party from his own neglect.—Watterson v. Payne, La., 14 S.Ct. 1157, 1214, 154 U.S. 534, 15 L. Ed. 899—Dodge v. Knowles, D.C., 5 S.Ct. 1197, 114 U.S. 430, 29 L.Ed. 144.

78. U.S.—U. S. v. Blackfeather, Ct. Cl., 15 S.Ct. 64, 155 U.S. 180, 39 L. Ed. 114.
4 C.J. p 1113 note 25.

Proof of averments

While the text rule precludes appellee who has failed to make a cross appeal to assert in support of the judgment below appellant's failure to prove certain averments of his bill, the supreme court in reversing the judgment may grant appellee liberty to require appellant to prove such averments below.—Chittenden v. Brewster, Ill., 2 Wall. 191, 17 L.Ed. 839.

79. U.S.—Railroad Commission of Wisconsin v. Maxcy, Wis., 50 S.Ct. 228, 281 U.S. 82, 74 L.Ed. 717—Ballard v. Searls, Mich., 9 S.Ct. 418, 130 U.S. 50, 32 L.Ed. 846.

Insufficient findings of fact

(1) Where the record is in a state to justify such action, the court may remand the cause to the end that full, proper, and consistent findings of fact be made.—Railroad Commission of Wisconsin v. Maxcy, Wis., 50 S.Ct. 228, 281 U.S. 82, 74 L.Ed. 717—Gerdes v. Lustgarten, N.Y., 45 S.Ct. 107, 266 U.S. 321, 69 L.Ed. 309, reversing, C.C.A., In re Lustgarten, 289 F. 481—U. S. v. Adams, Ct.Cl., 6 Wall. 101, 18 L.Ed. 792.

(2) However the court may sometimes examine the record to supply or supplement necessary findings, in order to avoid prolonged litigation necessitated by a remand.—McCardle v. Indianapolis Water Co., Ind., 47 S.Ct. 144, 272 U.S. 400, 71 L.Ed. 316—Gerdes v. Lustgarten, N.Y., 45 S. Ct. 107, 266 U.S. 321, 69 L.Ed. 309, reversing, C.C.A., In re Lustgarten, 289 F. 481.

(3) The court will not remand a case for a finding of additional facts which would not change the legal result.—Sanford & Brooks Co. v. U. S., 45 S.Ct. 341, 267 U.S. 455, 69 L. Ed. 734, affirming 58 Ct.Cl. 158.

Reference

Where a case involving an accounting, or other matters of a detailed and complicated nature, is not in shape to be disposed of on appeal, the appellate court may remand for reference to an auditor, master, or referee.—Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, S.D., 20 S.Ct. 336, 176 U.S. 167, 44 L.Ed. 417.

Motion to remand for additional findings will be denied as a matter of discretion where due diligence has not been shown in making the motion.—Sanford & Brooks Co. v. U. S., 45 S.Ct. 341, 267 U.S. 455, 69 L.Ed. 734, affirming 58 Ct.Cl. 158.

Remand improper

(1) Affirmance of decree dismissing suit for want of jurisdiction cannot be avoided by motion to remand, for filing of supplemental bill because of matters arising after filing of record in supreme court.—Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Peoria & P. U. Ry. Co., Iowa, 46 S.Ct. 402, 270 U.S. 580, 70 L.Ed. 743.

(2) It was held that the supreme court has no power to remand an equity cause except to give effect to some judgment of its own and that a motion to remand in order to give opportunity to present new matter to the court below will be denied.—Roemer v. Simon, N.J., 91 U.S. 149, 23 L.Ed. 267.

Affirmance of erroneous judgment

Text rule applies, even though it leads to affirmance of judgment wherein there was error which has since been obviated by a change in the law.—Pugh v. McCormick, La., 14 Wall. 361, 20 L.Ed. 789.

80. U.S.—Hines Secretary of Labor & Industry of Pennsylvania v. Davidowitz, Pa., 61 S.Ct. 399, 312 U. S. 52, 85 L.Ed. 581—Carpenter v. Wabash Ry. Co., Mo., 60 S.Ct. 416, 309 U.S. 23, 84 L.Ed. 558, vacating, C.C.A., 103 F.2d 996, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 102, 308 U. S. 539, 84 L.Ed. 454, and rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 585, 309 U.S. 695, 84 L.Ed. 1035—Smallwood v. Gallardo, Puerto Rico, 48 S.Ct. 23, 275 U.S. 56, 72 L.Ed. 152, reversing, C.C.A., Porto Rico Tax Appeals, 16 F.2d 545, certiorari granted Smallwood v. Gallardo, 47 S.Ct. 659, 274 U.S. 732, 71 L.Ed. 1327 and Valdes v. Gallardo, 47 S.Ct. 659, 274 U.S. 732, 71 L.Ed. 1327, and followed in Gallardo v. La Plata Tobacco Co., C.C.A., 21 F.2d 1012, certiorari dismissed Fajardo Sugar Co. of Porto Rico v. Gallardo, 48 S.Ct. 527, 277 U.S. 611, 72 L.Ed. 1015—U. S. v. Preston, La., 3 Pet. 57, 7 L.Ed. 601—The Rachel, La., 6 Cranch 329, 3 L.Ed. 239.
4 C.J. p 1120 note 11.

Enactment or repeal of statute

(1) Where a statute on which the judgment rests has been repealed pending the appeal, the court will take judicial notice of the repeal, and conform its decision thereto.—Berry v. Davis, Iowa, 37 S.Ct. 208, 242 U.S. 468, 61 L.Ed. 441, reversing, D.C., Davis v. Berry, 216 F. 413—4 C.J. p 1119 note 9.

(2) A statute enacted after the decree was rendered below will be given effect in deciding an appeal, where the case involves only relief by injunction, which operates wholly in futuro.—Texas Co. v. Brown, Ga., 42 S.Ct. 375, 258 U.S. 466, 66 L.Ed. 721, affirming, D.C., 266 F. 577.

Vested rights

Generally, however, the court will not by its decision allow a change in the law during the pendency of an appeal to affect vested rights.—Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, Cal., 2 Wall. 450, 17 L.Ed. 805.

Where necessary to just disposition of case, the supreme court will consider the changes in fact and in law which have supervened since the decree was entered below, especially the state of facts existing at the time the judgment below was rendered.[81] Concurrence of a majority of the judges passing on the case is ordinarily necessary to a reversal.[82]

Affirmance or modification. In a proper case, the supreme court may affirm the judgment below, on motion of a party,[83] or after hearing, where the existence of reversible error does not appear,[84] or where, notwithstanding an irregularity in the proceedings in the lower court, the questions involved have become abstract, and a new trial would be of no advantage to appellant or plaintiff in error.[85]

81. U.S.—O'Hara v. MacConnell, Pa., 93 U.S. 150, 23 L.Ed. 840—The Vaughan and Telegraph, N.Y., 14 Wall. 258, 20 L.Ed. 807.

However, facts subsequently occurring may sometimes be considered.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Bogert, N.Y., 39 S.Ct. 533, 250 U.S. 483, 63 L.Ed. 1099, modifying Bogert v. Southern Pac. Co., 244 F. 61, 156 C.C.A. 489, affirming, D.C., 226 F. 500, leave to present petition for rehearing granted 39 S.Ct. 492—Watts, Watts & Co. v. Unione Austriaca di Navigazione, N.Y., 39 S.Ct. 1, 248 U.S. 9, 63 L. Ed. 100, 3 A.L.R. 323, reversing 229 F. 136, 143 C.C.A. 412.

Orders of commission

The fact that a state commission, more than seven months after the granting of a temporary injunction against the enforcement of telephone rates temporarily fixed by it, made orders allowing higher rates whose correctness may yet be questioned in appropriate proceedings for review, does not establish that the injunction was rightly granted under the conditions which then existed.—Prendergast v. New York Telephone Co., N.Y., 43 S.Ct. 466, 262 U. S. 43, 67 L.Ed. 853.

82. U.S.—Smith v. U. S., Mo., 5 Pet. 292, 8 L.Ed. 130.

Constitutional questions

The supreme court will not, except in cases of absolute necessity, deliver any judgment in cases where constitutional questions are involved, unless a majority of the whole court concurs.—Briscoe v. Commonwealth Bank of Kentucky, Ky., 8 Pet. 118, 8 L.Ed. 887.

Grounds of decision

Where a majority of the judges agree to reverse the judgment below, it is not material that their conclusions are based on different reasons.—Smith v. U. S., Mo., 5 Pet. 292, 8 L.Ed. 130.

Divided court

(1) Where the judges of the court are equally divided in opinion, the judgment, order, or decree appealed from stands affirmed.—Reeside v. U. S., Ct.Cl., 8 Wall. 38, 19 L.Ed. 391—Coleman v. Hudson River Bridge Co., N.Y., 2 Wall. 403, 17 L.Ed. 876.

(2) Where the court is equally divided on a jurisdictional question, it will remand the case to the lower court without instructions.—Silliman v. Hudson River Bridge Co., N.Y., 1 Black 582, 17 L.Ed. 81—4 C.J. p 1122 note 38.

83. U.S.—Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Phoenix Const. Co., 34 S.Ct. 701, 233 U.S. 593, 58 L.Ed. 1107, affirming Phenix Const. Co. v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 103 N.E. 891, 210 N.Y. 113.

Affirmance held proper

(1) Where the proposition on which the contention as to jurisdiction rests is entirely without foundation.—Cornell Steamboat Co. v. Phoenix Const. Co., supra.

(2) Where the appeal is merely frivolous.—Micas v. Williams, La., 104 U.S. 556, 26 L.Ed. 842.

(3) Where contention on appeal is clearly frivolous and is the sole error asserted.—Pennsylvania Co. v. Donat, Ind., 36 S.Ct. 4, 239 U.S. 50, 60 L.Ed. 139, affirming 224 F. 1021, 139 C.C.A. 665.

(4) In a case turning essentially on questions of fact, where the record shows no clear error in the concurring findings of the two lower courts, and does not contain all the evidence that was before those courts.—Bodkin v. Edwards, Cal., 41 S.Ct. 268, 255 U.S. 221, 65 L.Ed. 595, affirming, C.C.A., 265 F. 621, affirming, D.C., Edwards v. Bodkin, 267 F. 1004.

(5) Where courts of two circuits had reached same conclusion on questions of fact, and questions of law were settled, and rulings clearly right so that the appeal appears without reasonable justification and therefore taken for delay.—Eichel v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Pa., 38 S.Ct. 47, 245 U.S. 102, 62 L.Ed. 177, affirming U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Eichel, 241 F. 357, 154 C.C.A. 237.

(6) Where one of several joint appellants fails to perfect his appeal, the appellee may open the record and pray for an affirmance.—Newman v. Moyers, 40 S.Ct. 478, 253 U. S. 182, 64 L.Ed. 849, reversing 47 App. D.C. 102.

When motion denied

Unless the record is manifestly free from prejudicial error, the motion will be denied.—Guardian Assur. Co. v. Quintana, Puerto Rico, 33 S. Ct. 236, 227 U.S. 100, 57 L.Ed. 437—4 C.J. p 1129 note 50.

Joinder of motions

Under statute providing for joinder of motions to dismiss appeal and to affirm where it is manifest that appeal was taken for delay only, appellee may make motion to affirm only if he also makes a motion to dismiss and there is at least some color of right to the dismissal.—City of Chanute v. Trader, Kan., 10 S.Ct. 67, 132 U.S. 210, 33 L.Ed. 345—4 C.J. p 592 note 26, p 1126 note 2, p 1127 note 14.

Cases tried before jury

A judgment will be affirmed, in a case tried before a jury, when no error in rulings of law appears and the evidence is sufficient to sustain the verdict.—Sutton v. Bancroft, Ark., 23 How. 320, 16 L.Ed. 454—Guild v. Frontin, Cal., 18 How. 135, 15 L.Ed. 290.

Proof of unessential fact

However, the failure of plaintiff to prove a fact which a preliminary ruling of the court made it useless for him to prove is not ground for affirmance of a judgment for defendant.—Peck v. Heurich, D.C., 17 S. Ct. 927, 167 U.S. 624, 42 L.Ed. 302.

Affirmance in part

U.S.—J. M. Ceballos & Co. v. U. S., 29 S.Ct. 583, 214 U.S. 47, 53 L. Ed. 904, reversing 42 Ct.Cl. 318.

Court will not grant new trial on affirmance of judgment for defendant below, in absence of justification therefor.—Garrett v. Louisville & N. R. Co., Tenn., 35 S.Ct. 32, 235 U.S. 308, 59 L.Ed. 242, affirming 197 F. 715, 117 C.C.A. 109.

While an affirmance leaves the judgment of the lower court in full force and effect precisely the same as though no appeal had been taken,[86] it is not necessarily an adoption of the reasoning of the lower court.[87]

Under some circumstances, the supreme court will affirm the lower court's judgment conditionally, as on appellee's performance of some act directed by the court.[88] Where the error in the judgment below is one that can be cured by a modification of the judgment, the court may so act rather than reverse.[89]

Reversal. In a proper case, the supreme court will reverse the judgment below,[90] as where the record does not affirmatively show jurisdiction,[91] or where it appears that there is substantial error;[92]

Costs
Where controversy no longer exists, the merits will not generally be decided merely to determine a question of costs.—Glendale Elastic Fabric Co. v. Smith, supra.

86. U.S.—Steinbach v. Stewart, Cal., 11 Wall. 566, 20 L.Ed. 56.

87. U.S.—Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Cockrell, Ky., 34 S.Ct. 278, 232 U.S. 146, 58 L.Ed. 544.

88. U.S.—Hansen v. Boyd, Minn., 16 S.Ct. 571, 161 U.S. 397, 40 L.Ed. 746.

Excessive judgment
(1) Generally, where there is no reversible error in the record except that the judgment is for too much, and the amount of the excess is readily ascertainable, the supreme court need not reverse the judgment and remand the cause for a new trial, but may allow or conditionally require such excess to be remitted, and let the judgment stand for the correct amount.—Hansen v. Boyd, supra—4 C.J. p 1138 note 63, p 1139 note 78, p 1141 notes 86, 89, p 1143 note 10.

(2) Where the court arbitrarily reduces the amount of the judgment without giving the prevailing party any option in the matter, it does not conditionally affirm the judgment.—Kennon v. Gilmer, Mont., 9 S.Ct. 696, 131 U.S. 22, 33 L.Ed. 110.

89. U.S.—McCart v. Indianapolis Water Co., Ind., 58 S.Ct. 324, 302 U.S. 419, 82 L.Ed. 336, modifying, C.C.A., Indianapolis Water Co. v. McCart, 89 F.2d 522, reversing, D.C., 13 F.Supp. 110, certiorari granted McCart v. Indianapolis Water Co., 58 S.Ct. 14, 302 U.S. 665, 82 L.Ed. 513—Woodward v. Brown, D.C., 13 Pet. 1, 10 L.Ed. 31.

If the judgment does not conform to the pleadings, and the error is one which can be cured by a modification of the judgment, the appellate court will not order a new trial, but will itself correct the judgment.—Woodward v. Brown, supra.

Modification as to particular matters
(1) A judgment may be modified so as to change an absolute dismissal to a dismissal without prejudice.—Lacassagne v. Chapuis, La., 12 S.Ct. 659, 144 U.S. 119, 36 L.Ed. 268.

(2) A decree in favor of a person in one representative capacity may be changed so as to be in favor of him in another representative capacity.—Hayes v. Pratt, N.J., 13 S.Ct. 503, 147 U.S. 557, 37 L.Ed. 279.

Several parties
(1) Reversal of judgment as to corporate defendant for want of jurisdiction did not require reversal as to individual defendant.—James-Dickinson Farm Mortg. Co. v. Harry, Ill., 47 S.Ct. 308, 273 U.S. 119, 71 L.Ed. 569.

(2) However, where a judgment is entire and jointly binding on or in favor of several coparties, or the cause of action is of such a nature that the rights and issues are interdependent and injustice might result from a reversal as to less than all the parties, the supreme court will reverse the judgment as to all.—Washington Gaslight Co. v. Lansden, D.C., 19 S.Ct. 296, 172 U.S. 534, 43 L.Ed. 543—Elizabeth v. American Nicholson Pavement Co., N.J., 131 U.S. appendix cxlviii, 24 L.Ed. 1059.

Reversal not on merits
Where an intermediate appellate court denied a petition for leave to file a bill of review on the ground that its former decree of affirmance was final, the supreme court is authorized to reverse the judgment, without passing on the merits of the petition.—National Brake & Electric Co. v. Christensen, Wis., 41 S.Ct. 154, 254 U.S. 425, 65 L.Ed. 341, reversing 258 F. 880, 169 C.C.A. 600, certiorari granted 39 S.Ct. 495, 250 U.S. 638, 63 L.Ed. 1184, and prohibition denied 40 S.Ct. 54.

Vacating decision
Where the circuit court of appeals affirmed a decree of the district court which was open to review only by the supreme court, the decision of the circuit court of appeals must be vacated, and the case remanded to it, with direction to dismiss the appeal.—The Carlo Poma, N.Y., 41 S.Ct. 309, 255 U.S. 219, 65 L.Ed. 594, vacating, C.C.A., 259 F. 369, 170 C.C.A. 345, certiorari granted 40 S.Ct. 14, 250 U.S. 656, 64 L.Ed. 1192.

Effect of reversal
(1) Generally, a judgment of reversal is not necessarily an adjudication of any other than the questions in terms discussed and decided.—Chas. Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations of Kansas, 45 S.Ct. 441, 267 U.S. 552, 69 L.Ed. 785, reversing Court of Industrial Relations v. Charles Wolff Packing Co., 227 P. 249, 114 Kan. 487, modifying 219 P. 259, 114 Kan. 304.

(2) On the reversal of a judgment, order, or decree, a dependent order, judgment, or proceeding, ancillary and accessory thereto, shares its fate and falls with it.—Butler v. Eaton, Mass., 11 S.Ct. 985, 141 U.S. 240, 35 L.Ed. 713—Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. v. Fosdick, Ill., 1 S.Ct. 10, 106 U.S. 47, 27 L.Ed. 47.

(3) Rights acquired bona fide by a third person, under a judgment, order, or decree rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, are not affected by the subsequent reversal thereof.—Bank of U. S. v. Bank of Washington, D.C., 6 Pet. 8, 8 L.Ed. 299.

91. U.S.—Roberts v. Lewis, Neb., 12 S.Ct. 781, 144 U.S. 653, 36 L.Ed. 579—McCormick v. Sullivant, Ohio, 10 Wheat. 192, 6 L.Ed. 300.

Circuit court of appeals without jurisdiction
Appropriate action of supreme court, where circuit court of appeals was without jurisdiction, was to reverse decree and remand case, with directions to dismiss.—Stratton v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co., Ill., 51 S.Ct. 8, 282 U.S. 10, 75 L.Ed. 135, reversing, C.C.A., St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Emmerson, 30 F.2d 322, reversing, D.C., 27 F.2d 1005.

92. U.S.—McCandless v. U. S., Hawaii, 56 S.Ct. 764, 298 U.S. 342, 80 L.Ed. 1205, reversing, C.C.A., 74 F.2d 596, certiorari granted 56 S.Ct. 308, 296 U.S. 570, 80 L.Ed. 403—Newman v. Moyers, 40 S.Ct. 478, 253 U.S. 182, 64 L.Ed. 849, reversing 47 App.D.C. 102.
4 C.J. p 1169 note 14.

Particular errors
(1) Material error of the trial court in its rulings on the sufficiency of pleadings.—Mandelbaum v. People, Nev.Terr., 8 Wall. 310, 19 L.Ed. 479—Fowle v. Common Council of Alexandria, D.C., 11 Wheat. 320, 6 L.Ed. 484.

but a judgment need not be reversed for technical errors, defects, or exceptions which do not affect the substantial rights of the parties.[93] The court may direct restitution of property lost by means of the erroneous judgment.[94]

On reversing the judgment below, the supreme court may itself render or direct final judgment in the cause, if the circumstances warrant such action,[95] as where the facts of the case are undisputed,[96] or where the controversy has become moot.[97] On the other hand, the court may in its discretion order a new trial or further proceedings whenever it appears that the ends of justice will be best served by such a course,[98] as where it is desirable that the

(2) Error of the trial court in giving improper, or in refusing to give proper, instructions to the jury.—U. S. v. Tillotson, N.Y., 12 Wheat. 180, 6 L.Ed. 594.

Erroneous ruling which relates to substantial rights of a party is ground for reversal unless it affirmatively appears from the record that the ruling was not prejudicial.—McCandless v. U. S., Hawaii, 56 S.Ct. 764, 298 U.S. 342, 80 L.Ed. 1205, reversing, C.C.A., 74 F.2d 596, certiorari granted 56 S.Ct. 308, 296 U.S. 570, 80 L.Ed. 403—Williams v. Great Southern Lumber Co., La., 48 S.Ct. 417, 277 U.S. 19, 72 L.Ed. 761, affirming, C.C.A., Great Southern Lumber Co. v. Williams, 17 F.2d 468, reversing, D.C., Williams v. Great Southern Lumber Co., 13 F.2d 246, and certiorari granted 48 S.Ct. 19, 275 U.S. 511, 72 L.Ed. 399.

93. U.S.—Camp v. Gress, Va., 39 S. Ct. 478, 250 U.S. 308, 63 L.Ed. 997 —McLanahan v. Universal Ins. Co., Md., 1 Pet. 170, 7 L.Ed. 98.

Particulars errors

(2) Error in ruling on a motion for a rehearing.—U. S. v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrigation Co., 19 S.Ct. 770, 174 U.S. 690, 43 L.Ed. 1136, reversing 51 P. 674, 9 N.M. 292.

Omitting evidence from transcript

Failure to observe rule for including evidence in transcript was a substantial defect not within text rule.—Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Standard Asphalt & Rubber Co., Ill., 48 S.Ct. 183, 275 U.S. 372, 72 L.Ed. 318, reversing, C.C.A., 16 F.2d 751, certiorari granted 47 S.Ct. 576, 274 U.S. 728, 71 L.Ed. 1316.

94. U.S.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. U. S., Ill., 49 S.Ct. 492, 279 U.S. 781, 73 L.Ed. 954—Goltra v. Weeks, Mo., 46 S.Ct. 613, 271 U.S. 536, 70 L.Ed. 1074, affirming, C.C.A., Weeks v. Goltra, 7 F.2d 838, certiorari granted Goltra v. Weeks, 46 S.Ct. 102, 269 U.S. 545, 70 L.Ed. 404.

United States

It has been held that the United States government cannot be ordered to refund.—Ex parte Morris, Ala., 9 Wall. 605, 19 L.Ed. 799.

95. U.S.—Newman v. Moyers, 40 S. Ct. 478, 253 U.S. 182, 64 L.Ed. 849, reversing 47 App.D.C. 102—City and County of Denver v. Denver Union Water Co., Colo., 38 S.Ct. 278, 246 U.S. 178, 62 L.Ed. 649.

Particular circumstances

(1) Where the lower court erroneously dismissed the bill on the merits instead of dismissing it for want of jurisdiction, the supreme court may reverse the decree with directions that the suit be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.—Shawnee Severage & Drainage Co. v. Stearns, Okl., 31 S. Ct. 452, 220 U.S. 462, 55 L.Ed. 544 —McGilva v. Ross, Wash., 30 S.Ct. 27, 215 U.S. 70, 54 L.Ed. 95, reversing 164 F. 604, 90 C.C.A. 398.

(2) The court may reverse a decree, erroneous in that it dismisses a bill absolutely instead of dismissing it without prejudice, and render or direct a proper decree of dismissal without prejudice.—Rogers v. Durant, Ill., 1 S.Ct. 623, 106 U.S. 644, 27 L.Ed. 303.

(3) Where, on appeal from a judgment in favor of plaintiff below, the supreme court decides that plaintiff cannot recover in any event on another trial, on reversing the judgment, it will itself render the proper judgment or order it rendered by the lower court.—Baltimore & Carolina Line v. Redman, N.Y., 55 S.Ct. 890, 295 U.S. 654, 79 L.Ed. 1636, modifying, C.C.A., Redman v. Baltimore & Carolina Line, 70 F.2d 635, certiorari granted Baltimore & Carolina Line v. Redman, 55 S.Ct. 89, 293 U.S. 541, 79 L.Ed. 646, certiorari denied Redman v. Baltimore & Carolina Line, 55 S.Ct. 98, 293 U.S. 577, 79 L.Ed. 674—4 C.J. p 1189 note 4.

(4) But the court will not order a dismissal or nonsuit because of failure to state a cause of action where plaintiff could amend his petition to state a sufficient cause of action.—Mayo v. Lakeland Highlands Canning Co., Fla., 60 S.Ct. 517, 309 U.S. 310, 84 L.Ed. 774, reversing, D. C., Lakeland Highlands Canning Co. v. Mayo, 28 F.Supp. 44.

96. U.S.—Green County v. Thomas, Ky., 29 S.Ct. 168, 211 U.S. 598, 53 L.Ed. 343, affirming 159 F. 339, 89 C.C.A. 405—City of Ft. Scott v. Hickman, Kan., 5 S.Ct. 56, 112 U.S. 150, 28 L.Ed. 636.

Absence of defense

Where the facts are practically undisputed and the amount of recovery certain, plaintiff has made out a prima facie case, and defendant, although having full opportunity to do so, has established no defense sufficient to prevent or bar the right of recovery, the supreme court, on reversing a judgment in defendant's favor, will sometimes render the proper judgment for plaintiff, or direct the court below to do so.—Retzer v. Wood, N.Y., 3 S.Ct. 164, 109 U.S. 185, 27 L.Ed. 900.

Where wrong judgment is rendered on a proper verdict or findings of fact, the supreme court may reverse and render, or direct, the judgment which should have been given below.—Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. Boykin, S.C., 12 Wall. 433, 20 L.Ed. 442.

97. U.S.—Duke Power Co. v. Greenwood County, S.C., 57 S.Ct. 202, 299 U.S. 259, 81 L.Ed. 178, reversing, C.C.A., Greenwood County, S. C. v. Errors warranting new trial

(1) Amendable defects in pleadings.—Mandeville v. Burt, D.C., 8 Pet. 256, 8 L.Ed. 936.

(2) Defect of parties.—Caldwell v. Taggart, Va., 4 Pet. 190, 7 L.Ed. 828.

(3) Errors in admission or exclusion of material evidence.—Drummond's Adm'rs v. Magruder & Co.'s Trustees, Va., 9 Cranch 122, 3 L.Ed. 677.

Partial new trial

(1) Where the error in the trial relates only to a certain issue which is in no way dependent for its proper trial on certain other issues already satisfactorily tried and a partial new trial will not work injustice to any of the parties concerned, the cause may be remanded, on reversal, for the trial of the issue erroneously tried, and for that alone.—Willing v. Binenstock, Pa., 58 S. Ct. 175, 302 U.S. 272, 82 L.Ed. 248, reversing, C.C.A., 88 F.2d 474, affirming, D.C., Binenstock v. Willing, 18 F.Supp. 262, certiorari granted Willing v. C.A., 39 F.2d 521, certiorari granted 51 S.Ct. 76, 282 U.S. 824, 75 L.Ed. 735.

(2) There are, however, a number of cases in which it has been held that a partial, instead of an entire, new trial would be improper.—Gasoline Products Co. v. Champlin Refining Co., supra.

Erroneous proceedings after prior remand

Where, on appeal from decree enjoining performance of contract of Public Works Administration for loan to county for construction of hydroelectric plant, circuit court of appeals remanded case with intent that district court should be revested with jurisdiction of entire cause because of substitution of new agreement, but district court misunderstood order and its proceedings were not taken and its decision was not rendered with a consciousness of its power and its duty, and where, on certification of proceedings in district court, circuit court of appeals, notwithstanding such misunderstanding, proceeded to pass on validity of act of congress under which federal loan was to be made, supreme court reversed decree of circuit court of appeals and remanded cause, with directions that decrees of district court be vacated, that parties be permitted to amend pleadings, and that cause be retried on issues thus presented.—Duke Power Co. v. Greenwood County, S. C., 57 S.Ct. 202, 299 U.S. 259, 81 L.Ed. 178, reversing, C.C.A., Greenwood County, S. C. v. Duke Power Co., 81 F.2d 986, reversing, D.C., Duke Power Co. v. Greenwood County, S. C., 12 F.Supp. 70, remanded, C.C.A., Greenwood County v. Duke Power Co., 79 F.2d 995, reversing, D.C., Duke Power Co. v. Greenwood County, S. C., 10 F.Supp. 854, certiorari granted Duke Power Co. v. Greenwood County, 56 S.Ct. 941, 298 U.S. 651, 80 L.Ed. 1379.

Retention for state court proceedings

Where constitutional issues sought to be presented by appeal from decree of federal district court enjoining enforcement of an order of Texas railroad commission would not arise if there was no warrant in state law for the commission's assumption of authority, the decree should be reversed and cause remanded to district court with directions to retain the bill pending a determination of proceedings, to be brought with reasonable promptness, in state court for determination of the commission's authority.—Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pullman Co., Tex., 61 S. Ct. 643, 312 U. S. 496, 85 L.Ed. 971, reversing, D.C., Pullman Co. v. Railroad Commission of Texas, 33 F.Supp. 675.

pleadings,[7] unless the amendment desired would have the effect of making an entirely different case.[8] The court will refuse to order a new trial where it appears that it is unnecessary and would serve no useful purpose.[9]

Mandate and proceedings after remand. On determination of the controversy by the supreme court, it may issue its mandate as to the disposition of the cause to be made by the lower court, frequently the one in which the cause was originally tried.[10] It is a general rule that the decision of the supreme court is the law of the case in further proceedings in the cause in the trial court,[11] except as to matters not decided on the appeal.[12] Accordingly, it is the duty of the lower court, on the remand of the cause, to comply with the mandate of the supreme court and to obey the directions therein;[13] but the

Manner and terms of amendment

The supreme court will not give specific directions as to the amendment, but will leave the manner and terms of the amendment to the lower court.—Sheehy v. Mandeville, D.C., 6 Cranch 253, 3 L.Ed. 215.

8. U.S.—Warner v. Godfrey, 22 S.Ct. 852, 186 U.S. 365, 46 L.Ed. 1203, reversing 17 App.D.C. 102.

10. U.S.—Clerke v. Harwood, Md., 3 Dall. 342, 1 L.Ed. 628.

Payment of costs and fees

(1) The mandate may be withheld until all costs and fees in the case are paid.—Osborn v. U. S., Kan., 131 U.S. appendix cxxxvii, 23 L.Ed. 871.

(2) Mandate may be issued by the clerk on their payment.—Very v. Watkins, Ark., 23 How. 469, 16 L.Ed. 522.

Where application for issuance at unusual time is made notice must be given to the adverse party.—Means v. Dowd, N.C., 9 S.Ct. 793, 128 U.S. 583, 32 L.Ed. 578.

Construction

(1) Where the mandate of the supreme court is ambiguous, the lower court may construe it for the purpose of arriving at its true intent and meaning.—Federal Communications Commission v. Pottsville Broadcasting Co., 60 S.Ct. 437, 309 U.S. 134, 84 L.Ed. 656, reversing Pottsville Broadcasting Co. v. Federal Communications Commission, 105 F.2d 36, 70 App.D.C. 157, certiorari granted Federal Communications Commission v. Pottsville Broadcasting Co., 60 S.Ct. 107, 308 U.S. 535, 84 L.Ed. 451.

(2) In construing the mandate or in otherwise determining what was decided by the supreme court and what was ordered done, the opinion of the supreme court should be examined and consulted.—Gulf Refining Co. of Louisiana v. U. S., La., 46 S.Ct. 52, 269 U.S. 125, 70 L.Ed. 195, affirming in part and reversing in part, C.C.A., U. S. v. Norvell, 289 F. 281—Ohio Oil Co. v. Thompson, C. Jurisdiction

(1) Where the supreme court by its decision and directions puts an end to the litigation, the lower court is without jurisdiction except to comply with whatever directions are made.—Evens & Howard Fire Brick Co. v. U. S., 35 S.Ct. 115, 236 U.S. 210, 59 L.Ed. 542—U. S. v. New York Indians, Ct.Cl., 19 S.Ct. 487, 173 U.S. 464, 43 L.Ed. 769.

(2) After a case has been remanded to the trial court for further proceedings, when it is discovered that the trial court lacked jurisdiction the trial court cannot dismiss because of lack of jurisdiction but must comply with the mandate.—Skillern's Ex'rs. v. May's Ex'rs, Ky., 6 Cranch 267, 3 L.Ed. 920.

Vacation or modification of judgment

(1) Generally, after a cause has been determined on appeal and remanded, the lower court is without power to vacate or modify the judgment of the supreme court.—John Simmons Co. v. Grier Bros. Co., Pa., 42 S.Ct. 196, 258 U.S. 82, 66 L.Ed. 475, reversing, C.C.A., Grier Bros. Co. v. Baldwin, 265 F. 481, and motion denied 42 S.Ct. 585, 259 U.S. 576, 66 L.Ed. 1071—In re Sanford Fork & Tool Co., Ind., 16 S.Ct. 291, 160 U.S. 247, 40 L.Ed. 414.

(2) Also, except as directed by the supreme court, the lower court is generally without power to vacate, alter, or modify the judgment originally entered by it.—Gaines v. Caldtrial court may make any order or direction in the further progress of the cause that is not inconsistent with the decision and directions of the supreme court.[14] So the lower court may have limited powers, after remand of a cause without specific directions, to grant a new trial,[15] or to permit an amendment of pleadings,[16] or findings of fact;[17] and a new trial is proper and necessary where intended by the mandate.[18] On the filing of a mandate or remittitur of the supreme court directing a certain

Any matters left open by mandate of the supreme court may be passed on by trial court.—In re Potts, Ohio, 17 S.Ct. 520, 166 U.S. 263, 41 L.Ed. 994.

Discretion within limitations

Where the directions given on remand impose limitations either as to subject matter or relief, or both, the trial court has power and discretion only within the limitations imposed.—Latta v. Granger, Ark., 17 S.Ct. 746, 167 U.S. 81, 42 L.Ed. 85—Kneeland v. American L. & T. Co., Ind., 11 S.Ct. 426, 138 U.S. 509, 34 L.Ed. 1052.

Accounting

Lower court may reopen the question and state or restate an account between the parties, where the supreme court has expressly ordered an accounting.—Dunlop v. Hepburn, D. C., 3 Wheat. 231, 4 L.Ed. 377.

Effect of modification of decree

Where a decree dismissing a suit to restrain enforcement of an ordinance fixing a gas rate "with prejudice" provided that, after three years, application might be made for reinstatement, the supreme court's modification of the decree, by substituting "without prejudice" for "with prejudice," did not affect the provision regarding reinstatement, or deprive the district court of power to reinstate the suit.—City of Des Moines, Iowa, v. Des Moines Gas Co., C.C.A.Iowa, 264 F. 506.

When new trial granted

(1) Generally, a new trial cannot be granted by the lower court after remand of a cause to it.—Chaires v. U. S., Fla., 3 How. 611, 11 L.Ed. 749.

(2) But a new trial or rehearing may be granted where the opinion and mandate of the supreme court expressly or impliedly commits this matter to the discretion of the lower court.—Piza Hermanos v. Caldentey, Puerto Rico, 34 S.Ct. 253, 231 U.S. 690, 58 L.Ed. 439—Ex parte Medway, Ct.Cl., 23 Wall. 504, 23 L.Ed. 160.

16. U.S.—Rio Grande Dam & Irr. Co. v. U. S., 30 S.Ct. 97, 215 U.S. 266, 54 L.Ed. 190, affirming 85 P. 393, 13 N.M. 386.

No power to permit amendments

(1) Where the supreme court has determined the case on the merits.—Mackall v. Richards, D.C., 6 S.Ct. 234, 116 U.S. 45, 29 L.Ed. 558—Ex parte Story, La., 12 Pet. 339, 9 L.Ed. 1108—Peavy-Byrnes Lumber Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.La., 86 F.2d 234, certiorari denied 57 S.Ct. 612, 300 U.S. 674, 81 L. Ed. 879.

(2) Where supreme court has peremptorily ordered dismissal of the bill of complaint.—Ashwander v. Tennessee Valley Authority, D.C.Ala., 14 F.Supp. 11, conforming to mandate 56 S.Ct. 466, 297 U.S. 288, 80 L.Ed. 688, affirming, C.C.A., Tennessee Valley Authority v. Ashwander, 78 F.2d 578, reversing, D.C., Ashwander v. Tennessee Valley Authority, 9 F.Supp. 965 and certiorari granted 56 S.Ct. 145, two cases, 296 U.S. 562, 80 L.Ed. 396, rehearing denied 56 S.Ct. 588, two cases, 298 U. S. 728, 80 L.Ed. 1011.

Amendment permissible

(1) Where no leave or direction has been granted by the supreme court, whether an amendment of pleadings shall be allowed in a particular case is committed primarily to the discretion of the lower court.—In re Sanford Fork & Tool Co., Ind., 16 S.Ct. 291, 160 U.S. 247, 40 L. Ed. 414—4 C.J. p 1224 note 9, p 1225 note 12—25 C.J. p 780 note 19.

(2) Lower court may permit amendment when the supreme court has determined the case on a question of pleading rather than on the merits.—Alexandria Mar. Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, D.C., 6 Cranch 206, 3 L.Ed. 200.

(3) Trial court may allow amendments where, without any specific directions, the cause has been remanded for further proceedings.—City of Texarkana, Tex. v. Arkansas, Louisiana Gas Co., Tex., 59 S.Ct. 448, 306 U.S. 188, 620, 83 L.Ed. 598, reversing C.C.A., Arkansas, Louisiana Gas Co. v. City of Texarkana, Tex., 97 F.2d 5, certiorari granted City of Texarkana, Tex. v. Arkansas, Louisiana Gas Co., 59 S.Ct. 94, 305 U.S. 584, 83 L.Ed. 369.

Nature of amendments permitted

(1) Where lower court has power to grant leave to amend, it may permit an amendment which falls short of constituting a new cause of action.—Rio Grande Dam & Irr. Co. v. U. S., 30 S.Ct. 97, 215 U.S. 266, 54 L.Ed. 190, affirming 85 P. 393, 13 N.M. 386.

(2) The lower court may permit an amendment which supplies omissions and defects, especially where the defect is one on which the reversal was based wholly or in part.—Everhart v. Huntsville Female College, Ala., 7 S.Ct. 555, 120 U.S. 223, 30 L.Ed. 623.

(3) However, a party cannot be allowed so to plead as to open up matters already adjudicated by the supreme court.—Thompson v. Maxwell Land-Grant & R. Co., N.M., 18 S.Ct 121, 168 U.S. 451, 42 L.Ed. 539.

25 C.J. p 781 note 20.

17. Where cause is remanded with directions, the lower court cannot correct alleged errors in the findings of fact or amend by making additional findings.—Hickman v. Ft. Scott, Kan., 12 S.Ct. 9, 141 U.S. 415, 35 L.Ed. 775—Kneeland v. American L. & T. Co., Ind., 11 S.Ct. 426, 138 U.S. 509, 34 L.Ed. 1052.

18. U.S.—District of Columbia v. McBlair, D.C., 8 S.Ct. 547, 124 U.S. 320, 31 L.Ed. 449—E. G. Shinner & Co. v. Lauf, D.C.Wis., 36 F.Supp. 709.

When intended

(1) A new trial will be considered intended where the case has been reversed and remanded generally and the facts are disputed.—District of Columbia v. McBlair, D.C., 8 S.Ct. 547, 124 U.S. 320, 31 L.Ed. 449.

(2) Where a case has been remanded to the court of claims for further findings of fact, without an order directly setting aside the judgment or directing the court to set it aside, the order will not be construed as authorizing a new trial, but as limiting the remand to "further findings of fact."—Norris v. U. S., 55 Ct.Cl. 208, affirmed 42 S.Ct. 9, 257 U.S. 77, 66 L.Ed. 136.

Scope of new trial

(1) Where the case has been opened for retrial all pertinent issues left undetermined may be retried, including issues as to matters originally alleged but not tried on the first trial.—Davis v. O'Hara, 45 S.Ct.

judgment, the lower court has no discretion but must comply therewith by entering a judgment conforming to such directions.[19]

The reversal by the supreme court of a judgment or decree ordinarily necessitates restitution to a party who has suffered loss from the enforcement thereof,[20] and such restitution may be enforced by the lower court.[21] Various procedures or remedies are available to obtain enforcement of the supreme court's mandate.[22]

104, 266 U.S. 314, 69 L.Ed. 303, reversing O'Hara v. Davis, 192 N.W. 215, 109 Neb. 615.

(2) Where, however, on remanding a cause, the supreme court has expressly or in effect given directions as to the issues to be tried, the new trial may and should be confined to the issues designated.—New Orleans v. Gaines, La., 11 S.Ct. 428, 138 U.S. 595, 34 L.Ed. 1102—Kneeland v. American L. & T. Co., Ind., 11 S.Ct. 426, 138 U.S. 509, 34 L.Ed. 1052.

When motion considered
The lower court need not give immediate consideration to a motion for judgment in accordance with the mandate.—In re Hall, 17 S.Ct. 723, 167 U.S. 38, 42 L.Ed. 69.

Substitution on appeal is no bar to immediate execution in the lower court against the substituted party after affirmance.—Texas & P. R. Co. v. Anderson, Tex., 13 S.Ct. 843, 149 U.S. 237, 37 L.Ed. 717.

Interest and costs
(1) The lower court is without power to allow interest after affirmance of a judgment not allowing interest.—Ex parte Washington & G. R. Co., D.C., 11 S.Ct. 673, 140 U.S. 91, 35 L.Ed. 339—Boyce's Ex'rs. v. Grundy, Tenn., 9 Pet. 275, 9 L.Ed. 127.

(2) However, the lower court may compute the interest allowed in an affirmed judgment.—Brown v. Van Braam, R.I., 3 Dall. 344, 1 L.Ed. 629.

(3) Where the mandate is silent as to costs, the matter is left open for determination by the lower court, according to the general rule that costs follow the judgment.—McKnight v. Craig, D.C., 6 Cranch 183, 3 L.Ed. 193—Riddle & Co. v. Mandeville & Jamesson, 6 Cranch 86, 3 L. Ed. 161.

Brock, Iowa, 11 S.Ct. 523, 139 U.S. 216, 35 L.Ed. 151.
4 C.J. p 1235 note 27.

Discretion of court
Restitution of thing received under erroneous judgment is not of mere right, but is ex gratia, resting in exercise of sound discretion, and court will not order it where justice of case does not call therefor.—St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Lawrence, D.C.Okl., 30 F.2d 454—State of Florida v. U. S., D.C.Ga., 11 F.Supp. 36, reversed on other grounds Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State of Florida, 55 S.Ct. 713, 295 U.S. 301, 79 L.Ed. 1451, rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 918, 295 U.S. 769, 79 L.Ed. 1710, and State of Florida v. U. S., 55 S.Ct. 918, 295 U.S. 769, 79 L.Ed. 1710.

Restitution pending final determination
(1) Restitution may be denied pending final determination, after decision on appeal determined interlocutory injunction was unnecessary.—St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Lawrence, D.C.Okl., 30 F.2d 454.

(2) Railroad, removing shops pending appeal from interlocutory injunction restraining interference therewith, will not be required to restore shops before final determination.—St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Lawrence, supra.

Remedies
A party entitled to restoration has the remedy of bringing an action of assumpsit for money had and received or following a summary proceeding in the original suit, both remedies being cumulative.—Ex parte Morris & Johnson, Ala., 9 Wall. 605, 19 L.Ed. 799.

One who has received money in behalf of party to the judgment cannot, however, be compelled to restore it after reversal where he has already disbursed the money, in good faith and without notice of an appeal or certiorari.—Penhallow v. Doane, N.H., 3 Dall. 54, 1 L.Ed. 507.

Right to injunction
Failure of railroad, removing shops pending appeal from interlocutory injunction restraining interference therewith, to restore status quo after reversal, did not defeat right to permanent injunction.—Lawrence v. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co., Okl., 49 S.Ct. 106, 278 U.S. 228, 73 L.Ed. 282, affirming, D.C., St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Lawrence, 30 F.2d 458.

4 C.J. p 1236 note 32.

Persons not parties
(1) Strict restitution of thing taken under erroneous judgment is confined to parties to record, and is to be made although court is without jurisdiction over merits, the restitution then being mere change of possession with no adjudication on parties' rights.—State of Florida v. U. S., D. C.Ga., 11 F.Supp. 36, reversed on other grounds Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. State of Florida, 55 S.Ct. 713, 295 U.S. 301, 79 L.Ed. 1451, rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 918, 295 U.S. 769, 79 L. Ed. 1710, and State of Florida v. U. S., 55 S.Ct. 918, 295 U.S. 769, 79 L.Ed. 1710.

(2) Under a supersedeas bond, given by a gas and electric light company to continue in force a temporary injunction against the enforcement of a rate ordinance pending appeal from the decree dismissing the bill, the district court can require the repayment of the overcharges to the consumers, although they were not parties to the action.—Ex parte Lincoln Gas & Electric Light Co., Neb., 41 S.Ct. 558, 256 U.S. 512, 65 L.Ed. 1066, rehearing denied 42 S.Ct. 2, 257 U.S. 6, 66 L.Ed. 101.

Assessment of damages
District court requiring bond pending appeal from interlocutory injunction could, after reversal, refuse to assess damages in restitution until final hearing.—Lawrence v. St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co., Okl., 49 S.Ct. 106, 278 U.S. 228, 73 L.Ed. 282, affirming, D.C., St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co. v. Lawrence, 30 F.2d 458.

22. U.S.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. U. S., Ill., 49 S.Ct. 492, 279 U.S. 781, 73 L.Ed. 954.

Particular remedies
(1) Application may be made to the lower court by motion, petition, or bill of review for correction or amendment of the judgment or decree.—In re Royall, Va., 8 S.Ct. 1392, 125 U.S. 696, 31 L.Ed. 855.

(2) In some cases, where the lower court has refused to carry into effect the mandate, the supreme court has proceeded to enter final judgment and award execution.—Tyler v. Magwire, Mo., 17 Wall. 253, 21 L.Ed. 576—Martin v. Hunter, Va., 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L.Ed. 97.

The supreme court will not recall its mandate for the purpose of reëxamining the cause on the merits,[23] or for the purpose of granting supplemental relief;[24] but the court may recall its mandate where there are clerical errors, fraud, or imposition in the judgment.[25] After a case has been decided and remanded, the supreme court has no jurisdiction to grant a rehearing, at least unless it first recalls the mandate for the purpose of reinvesting itself with jurisdiction.[26] If the court still has jurisdiction, it may modify its judgment in order to correct a clerical misprision.[27]

§ 202. Certification of Questions

a. In general
b. Questions which may be certified
c. Mode and form of certification

a. In General

Before final determination of a case, the circuit court of appeals may in its discretion certify to the supreme court any questions of law concerning which it is in doubt and desires instruction, and the supreme court may either hand down binding instructions as to such questions or require that the whole record and cause be sent up to it for its consideration.

Under statutes so providing, the circuit court of appeals is authorized, in cases within its appellate jurisdiction, to certify to the supreme court any questions or propositions of law concerning which it desires the instruction of that court for its proper decision;[28] and it is provided that on such certification the supreme court may either give its instructions on the questions and propositions certified to it,[29] which shall be binding on the circuit court of appeals in such case,[30] or require that the whole record and cause be sent up to it for its consideration,[31] in which case the supreme court must decide the whole matter in controversy in the same manner as if it had been brought to that court for review by writ of error or appeal.[32] A question may be certified, although the case is not one in which the decision of the circuit court of appeals will be final.[33]

Certification is a matter of discretion with the circuit court of appeals, and cannot be demanded by a party as a matter of right.[34] It is not to be

(3) Supreme court may enforce compliance with its mandate by mandamus.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. U. S., Ill., 49 S.Ct. 492, 279 U.S. 781, 73 L.Ed. 954.

(4) Party may appeal from judgment of lower court to determine whether it complies with mandate of supreme court.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. U. S., supra—U. S. v. Terminal R. Ass'n of St. Louis, Mo., 35 S.Ct. 408, 236 U.S. 194, 59 L.Ed. 535.

(5) Where reversal would not benefit appellant, it will not be awarded on appeal from action taken under a mandate.—Campbell v. Pratt, D.C., 2 Pet. 354, 7 L.Ed. 449.

23. U.S.—Peck v. Sanderson, Pa., 18 How. 42, 15 L.Ed. 262—Browder v. McArthur, 7 Wheat. 58, 5 L.Ed. 397.

25. U.S.—Killian v. Ebbinghaus, D. C., 4 S.Ct. 698, 111 U.S. 798, 28 L. Ed. 593.

After expiration of term.

(1) It has been denied that the court has any power to recall its mandate after the expiration of the term at which the judgment was rendered and the mandate issued, in the absence of a special order continuing jurisdiction over the cause. —Le More v. U. S., Ill., 131 U.S. appendix lxxxv, 19 L.Ed. 201.

(2) However, clerk's error in directing payment of costs in mandate may be corrected after term.—St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Spiller, Mo., 48 S.Ct. 96, 275 U.S. 156, 72 L.Ed. 214, denying motion 47 S.Ct. 635, 274 U.S. 304, 71 L.Ed. 1060, affirming in part and reversing in part, C.C.A., Spiller v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 14 F.2d 284, reversing, D.C., North American Co. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co., 288 F. 612, and certiorari granted 47 S.Ct. 111, 273 U.S. 680, 71 L.Ed. 837.

Jurisdiction invoked

Certification by circuit court of appeals of question of law invokes supreme court's appellate jurisdiction.—Old Colony Trust Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Mass., 49 S.Ct. 499, 279 U.S. 716, 73 L.Ed. 918, answering questions, C.C.A., U. S. v. Boston & Maine R. R., 33 F.2d 889, question answered 49 S.Ct. 505, 279 U.S. 732, 73 L.Ed. 929, conformed to, C.C.A., 33 F.2d 890, reversing, D. C., Boston & Maine R. R. v. U. Reëxamination of facts

A circuit court of appeals which has stated facts to the supreme court as the basis for questions of law certified will not reëxamine such questions of fact on the same record after the instructions of the supreme court have been received.—A. B. Dick Co. v. Henry, N.Y., 198 F. 87, 117 C. C.A. 293—The Folmina, N.Y., 173 F. 615, 97 C.C.A. 557, reversing, D.C., 143 F. 636.

used as a substitute for an appeal,[35] and it should be employed only when the certifying court is in doubt about the specific question certified,[36] and the question is one of gravity and importance.[37] Thus a question of law already decided by the supreme court should not be certified to it for its opinion, notwithstanding the existence of a dissenting opinion to such decision;[38] but affirmances in the supreme court, on equal division of opinion, of rulings of the circuit courts of appeals on a question are not such authoritative determinations of the question as to preclude certification of such question to the supreme court for determination,[39] and where the decisions of several circuit courts of appeals on a particular question are conflicting, and the question has not been presented to the supreme court, the matter is one which may properly be certified to the supreme court for instructions.[40]

After a case has been decided by the circuit court of appeals it should not certify a question in relation thereto to the supreme court.[41] Where, however, the court grants a rehearing, thus vacating its decree, it has power to certify a question,[42] but the court will refuse to grant a rehearing for that purpose if convinced of the correctness of its decision.[43]

Certification by District of Columbia court of appeals. Prior to the enactment of the statute under which the court of appeals for the District of Columbia was authorized to certify questions to the supreme court in any case whatever within its appellate jurisdiction, it was held that such court could certify questions only in a case in which its judgment would be final and not susceptible to review in the supreme court on error or appeal.[44]

b. Questions Which May Be Certified

Certification to the supreme court may be had only of particular questions of law rather than of fact, which the lower court has the right to decide and which are directly involved in the controversy; and the whole case may not be sent up by certificate, for review.

Under the statute authorizing certification of questions of law, the whole case cannot be sent up by certificate,[45] even when its decision turns on a matter of law only,[46] for an attempt to send up the whole case before judgment or decree would be invoking the unlawful exercise of original jurisdiction by the supreme court and could not be sustained, even though congress should expressly authorize it.[47] However, no objection to the submission of a definite and clean cut question of law

Where record was short and questions raised as to jurisdiction of federal district court to compel action by national railroad adjustment board were as clear and explicit as they could have been presented, in form of questions certified to supreme court, circuit court of appeals refused to certify questions and left it to supreme court to determine whether certiorari should be granted.—Delaware & Hudson R. Jurisdiction

Under Jud.Code § 250, Comp.St. § 1227, providing, relative to writs of error to review judgments of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, that when the case is not otherwise reviewable the question of jurisdiction alone shall be certified to the supreme court for decision, where a plea to the jurisdiction clearly raises the question, a certificate would add nothing to what the record shows.—Marine Ry. & Coal Co. v. U. S., 42 S.Ct. 32, 257 U.S. 47, 66 L. Ed. 124, affirming 265 F. 437, 49 App. D.C. 285.

arises out of the fact that the answer may be decisive of the whole controversy.[48]

Only questions of law, and not questions of fact or questions of mixed law and fact, can be certified.[49] The question must be such that the answer will aid the court in the determination of the case,[50] and a proposition which is abstract or which may not arise in the controversy should not be certified.[51] The circuit court of appeals cannot ask for instructions on an issue which it has no right to decide.[52] Under a prior statute authorizing the certification of questions on which there was a division of opinion in the circuit court, the supreme court could not consider questions relating to matters of pure discretion in the trial court;[53] but where a motion resting in the discretion of the court presented for consideration a question going directly to the merits, the decision of which would determine the points in controversy, the reviewing court would nevertheless consider the question on a certificate of division.[54]

c. Mode and Form of Certification

Certification of questions should be made in the proper form and mode; questions of law must be clearly and distinctly set forth, together with the fundamental facts on which they depend, so that they can be definitely answered.

The proper mode and form of certification of questions to the supreme court must be followed in order to obtain consideration of such questions by that court;[55] but even though a certificate from the circuit court of appeals is deficient in specification and somewhat wanting in precision, it is the duty of the supreme court to answer the questions, where the matters not specified are not in dispute and the want of precision is not so fundamental as to mislead or confuse.[56] Questions which are themselves contingent on another question which the court declines to answer need not be answered.[57]

Rules under former statutes applicable

Certificates by the circuit court of appeals are governed by the same general rules as were formerly applied to certificates of division of opinion of the judges of the circuit court.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, Md., 30 S.Ct. 86, 215 U.S. 216, 54 L.Ed. 164—25 C.J. p 866 note 88—3 C.J. p 1000 note 14 [b].

Statement that instruction is desired

In order to invoke the exercise of the jurisdiction of the supreme court in the instruction of the circuit court of appeals as to the proper decision of questions or propositions of law, the certificate must show that the instruction of the supreme court as to the proper decision of such questions or propositions is desired.—Columbus Watch Co. v. The certificate should be carefully and precisely prepared,[58] and each question certified should be distinctly and separately stated.[59] The question certified must be a distinct point or proposition of law and must be stated clearly, so that it can be definitely answered.[60] The supreme court will not undertake to answer a question of objectionable generality,[61] and it will not review proceedings, facts, and circumstances for the purpose of deciding a variety of preliminary questions in order to reach and decide an ultimate question submitted.[62] The certificate should state the fundamental facts on which the question of law arises,[63] but not the evidential facts from which the fundamental facts are found.[64] Where questions certified are not apposite to the facts stated in the certificate, a dismissal is proper.[65]

2. Reveiw of Decisions of Circuit Court of Appeals

§ 203. By Appeal

Appeals to the supreme court from decisions of circuit courts of appeals lie only in a narrow class of cases defined by statute.

The jurisdiction of the supreme court to review by appeal judgments or decrees of the circuit courts of appeals has been materially changed by the Act of February 13, 1925, amending Judicial Code § 240, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347. Under that act appeals to the supreme court from decisions of the circuit courts of appeals lie only from final judgments or decrees of such courts[66] in cases where the validity

Categorical answer

The supreme court will not answer questions which are incapable of being categorically answered and which would require it to reframe the questions or give qualified answers to them.—Atlas Life Ins. Co. v. W. I. Southern, Inc., Okl., 59 S.Ct. 657, 306 U.S. 563, 83 L.Ed. 987, conformed to, C.C.A., 105 F.2d 668, modifying, D.C., 23 F.Supp. 334.

3 C.J. p 1002 note 31.

Different answers

Court is not required to answer questions which admit of one answer under one set of circumstances and a different answer under another, neither of which is stated to be the basis of the questions certified.—Atlas Life Ins. Co. v. W. I. Southern, Inc., Okl., 59 S.Ct. 657, 306 U.S. 563, 83 L.Ed. 987, conformed to, C.C.A., 105 F.2d 668, modifying, D.C., 23 F.Supp. 334—Lowden v. Northwestern Nat. Other statement of rule

The court will not answer certified questions covering unstated facts lurking in the record.—Atlas Life Ins. Co. v. W. I. Southern, Inc., Okl., 59 S.Ct. 657, 306 U.S. 563, 83 L.Ed. 987, conformed to, C.C.A., 105 F.2d 668, modifying, D.C., 23 F.Supp. 334—Triplett v. Lowell, 56 S.Ct. 142, 296 U.S. 621, 80 L.Ed. 441, vacated 56 S.Ct. 306, 296 U.S. 570, 80 L.Ed. 402, certiorari granted 56 S.Ct. 306, 296 U.S. 570, 80 L.Ed. 402, rehearing denied 56 S.Ct. 745, 298 U.S. 691, 80 L.Ed. 1409.

Construction of questions

Questions certified to supreme court must be read in light of preliminary statement certifying facts out of which questions have arisen.—Hill v. U. S. ex rel. Wampler, Pa., 56 S.Ct. 760, 298 U.S. 460, 80 L.Ed. 1283.

64. U.S.—Sigafus v. Porter, N.Y., 85 F. 689, 29 C.C.A. 391.

Statement must consist of ultimate facts, leaving nothing but a conclusion of law to be drawn.—Jewell v. Knight, Ind., 8 S.Ct. 193, 123 U.S. 426, 31 L.Ed. 190—Sigafus v. Porter, N.Y., 85 F. 689, 29 C.C.A. 391.

65. U.S.—Selm v. Hurd, Ind., 34 S.Ct. 406, 232 U.S. 420, 58 L.Ed. 667, certified questions answered 34 S.Ct. 409, 232 U.S. 428, 58 L.Ed. 670.

66. U.S.—Slaker v. O'Connor, Neb.,

of a state statute is drawn in question on the ground of repugnance to the constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is against its validity.[67] Further provision is also made under the Act of August 24, 1937, c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, for a direct appeal to the supreme court in any proceeding in any federal court to which the United States or its agency, officer, or employee, as such, is a party and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of an act of congress.[68] In all other cases review by the supreme court, if it be had, must be pursuant to a writ of certiorari duly applied for and granted, as appears infra § 204.

In cases where an appeal lies under the Act of February 13, 1925, a litigant may, at his election, either appeal or apply for a writ of certiorari;[69] but if he appeals in such a case a review on certiorari cannot be allowed at the instance of such party, see infra § 204 d, and the review on such appeal will be restricted to an examination and decision of the federal question presented in the case.[70]

Writ of error. While the Act of February 13, 1925, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, provided for review by the supreme court of decisions of the circuit court of appeals in the class of cases heretofore stated either by appeal or by writ of error, under the Act of January 31, 1928, c 14 § 1, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a, the writ of error has been abolished and all relief which formerly could be obtained by that writ is now obtainable by appeal.

Former practice. Prior to the Act of February 13, 1925, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, considered above, judgments and decrees of the circuit court of appeals were not reviewable by the supreme court on appeal or writ of error where the statutes made such judgments or decrees final.[71] Under the statutes, judgments and decrees of the circuit court of appeals were final, and hence not subject to review on appeal or writ of error, in all cases in which the jurisdiction was dependent entirely on the opposite parties to the suit or controversy being aliens and citizens of the United States[72] or citizens of different states,[73] and, according to the decisions

Appeals pending at time of enactment

The act of 1925 expressly left all appeals which were then pending in the supreme court to be disposed of under the old law.—Smith v. McCullough, Okl., 46 S.Ct. 338, 270 U. S. 456, 70 L.Ed. 682, reversing, C.C.A., 285 F. 698—Del Pozo v. Wilson Cypress Co., Fla., 46 S.Ct. 57, 269 U. S. 82, 70 L.Ed. 172, affirming, C.C.A., 299 F. 261, and petition denied 47 S.Ct. 235, 269 U.S. 82, 70 L.Ed. 172.

67. U.S.—Bradford Electric Light Co. v. O'Connor, Neb., 49 S.Ct. 158, 278 U.S. 188, 73 L.Ed. 258, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., O'Connor v. Slaker, 22 F.2d 147.

Decisions merely applying state law

(1) An appeal does not lie from a decision of the circuit court of appeals which merely applied state law.—Baxter v. Continental Casualty Co., Mo., 52 S.Ct. 2, 284 U.S. 578, 76 L. Ed. 502, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., 48 F.2d 467.

(2) Thus an appeal does not lie from a decision which merely applied state, and not federal, law in holding order of state public service commission invalid.—Public Service Commission of Indiana v. Batesville Telephone Co., Ind., 52 S.Ct. 1, 284 U.S. 6, 76 L.Ed. 135, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., Batesville Telephone Co. v. Decree adjudicating question of jurisdiction

Under Jud.Code §§ 128, 238, Comp. St. §§ 1120, 1215, where relator chose to go to the circuit court of appeals, where he presented only the question of jurisdiction, the judgment of that court was final, and an appeal could not be entertained by the supreme court.—State of Ohio ex rel. Seney v. Swift & Co., Ohio, 43 S.Ct. 22, 260 U.S. 146, 67 L.Ed. 176, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., 270 F. 141, certiorari denied 42 S.Ct. 47, 257 U.S. 633, 66 L.Ed. 407.

Limitations

(1) The text rule, however, was subject to the limitation that, where jurisdiction was originally invoked on the sole ground of diverse citizenship, the finality of the judgment of the circuit court of appeals was not affected by the fact that another ground of federal jurisdiction developed in the course of the proceedings.—Colorado Cent. Consolidated Mining Co. v. Turck, Colo., 14 S. Ct. 35, 150 U.S. 138, 37 L.Ed. 1030—25 C.J. p 868 note 9.

(2) And a similar limitation applied in cases of intervention, the governing status of the case being that existing when the action was brought.—Begg v. stantial and meritorious.[86] In order to be reviewable by the supreme court, however, the decision below was required to be of such final[87] character[88] as to be the subject of appeal or writ of error under the general rules governing such review.

Where the circuit court of appeals erroneously took jurisdiction and decided an appeal to it in a case which was directly reviewable by the supreme court, the latter court had jurisdiction to review the judgment of the circuit court of appeals to the extent of reversing it with directions to dismiss the appeal,[89] or the supreme court could treat the case as a direct appeal.[90]

Appellate procedure in general in the supreme court is considered supra § 201.

a. In General

By certiorari the supreme court may require any cause in the circuit court of appeals to be certified to it for determination.

Section 240 of the Judicial Code as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, provides that "in any case . . . in a circuit court of appeals . . . it shall be competent for the Supreme Court . . . upon the petition of any party thereto . . . to require by certiorari, either before or after a judgment or decree by such lower court, that the cause be certified to the Supreme Court for determination by it with the same power and authority, and with like effect, as if the cause had been brought there by unrestricted . . . appeal." Under this statute, which as amended eliminated certain former restrictions on certiorari powers of the supreme court,[91] extensive power is

25 C.J. p 868 note 11.

The mere assertion of a claim of right under federal law was insufficient to warrant a review by the supreme court by appeal or writ of error:

(1) Where the claim was of a frivolous character.—Weiland v. Pioneer Irr. Co., Colo., 42 S.Ct. 568, 259 U.S. 498, 66 L.Ed. 1027, affirming Pioneer Irr. Co. v. Board of Com'rs of Yuma County, Colo., 251 F. 264, 163 C.C.A. 420—G. & C. Merriam Co. v. Syndicate Publishing Co., N.Y., 35 S.Ct. 708, 237 U.S. 618, 59 L.Ed. 1148, dismissing appeal 207 F. 515, 125 C.C.A. 177.

(2) Where the right claimed had been denied by former adjudications of the supreme court.—G. & C. Merriam Co. v. Syndicate Publishing Co., supra—25 C.J. p 868 note 13.

25 C.J. p 869 note 14.

88. Discretionary orders or decrees not appealable in absence of abuse of discretion.—Conboy v. First Nat. Bank of Jersey City, N.Y., 27 S.Ct. 50, 203 U.S. 141, 51 L.Ed. 128—3 C.J. p 596 note 1 [a] (21).

89. U.S.—New York v. Consolidated Gas Co. of New York, N.Y., 40 S.Ct. 511, 253 U.S. 219, 64 L.Ed. 870.

90. Case treated as direct appeal
Where an appeal should have been taken to the supreme court, but was erroneously taken to the circuit court of appeals, from whose decision appeal was then taken to the supreme court, it was held that since, if the supreme court should reverse the decree of the circuit court of appeals, such reversal would necessarily be accompanied by a direction to that court to transfer the case to the supreme court under the act of Sept. 14, 1922, the supreme court, instead of remanding the case to have it transferred back, would treat the case as before it by appeal from the district court, and dispose of it as would have been done, had the circuit court of appeals formally transferred it to the supreme court.—Wagner Electric Mfg. Co. v. Lyndon, Mo., 43 S.Ct. 589, 262 U.S. 226, 67 L.Ed. 961, dismissing, C.C.A., 282 F. 219, certiorari denied 43 S.Ct. 361, 261 U.S. 614, 67 L.Ed. 827.

91. Former practice
(1) Jud.Code 1911 § 240 provided that "in any case, civil or criminal, in which the judgment or decree of the circuit court of appeals is made final by the provisions of this Title, it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require by certiorari or otherwise, upon the petition of any party thereto, any such case to be certified to the Supreme Court for its review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court."

(2) The same express power to review by certiorari was also given by the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, 39 U.S.St. at L. p 727 c 448 § 3, mentioned in 25 C.J. p 870 notes 31–38, wherein judgments and decrees in specified classes of cases were made final save for such review.

(3) The words "or otherwise" used in the statute first mentioned referred only to orders or writs ejusdem generis with a writ of certiorari, and did not include an appeal from a decision of the circuit court of appeals which had been made final by the statute.—Huguley Mfg. Co. v. Galeton Cotton Mills, Ga., 22 S.Ct. 452, 184 U.S. 290, 46 L.Ed. 546, dismissing appeal 94 F. 269, 36 C.C.A. 236.

(4) Under these statutes the certiorari power of the supreme court extended only to cases in which the judgment or decree of the circuit court of appeals was made final by conferred on the supreme court[92] not only to review by certiorari judgments or decrees of the circuit courts of appeals[93] but also to bring before it by certiorari for determination causes pending in the circuit courts of appeals before final decree is rendered by such lower appellate courts, see infra subdivision b (4) of this section. The purpose of this grant of power was to secure uniformity of decision and to bring up cases of importance which it is in the public interest to have decided by the court of last resort.[94]

Under general power to issue writs. In instances not covered by Judicial Code § 240 as amended, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, it is nevertheless competent for the supreme court to review on certiorari the action of circuit courts of appeals under its general statutory power to issue all writs necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction.[95]

Certiorari conventional mode of review. By reason of the Act of February 13, 1925, amending Judicial Code § 240, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, certiorari has become the conventional method for obtaining a review by the supreme court of judgments or decrees of the circuit courts of appeals, the right to review by appeal being now restricted to a very narrow class of cases, see supra § 203, and the writ of error having been abolished by statute, as appears supra § 203.

Nature of writ. The writ of certiorari is an extraordinary writ,[96] and under Judicial Code § 240 as amended, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, it is the equivalent statute.—Sperry Oil & Gas Co. v. Chisholm, Okl., 44 S.Ct. 372, 264 U.S. 488, 68 L.Ed. 803, affirming in part and reversing in part, C.C.A., 282 F. 93, affirming, D.C., Chisholm v. Creek & Indiana Development Co., 273 F. 589, and certiorari granted Sperry Oil & Gas Co. v. Chisholm, 43 S.Ct. 363, 261 U.S. 611, 67 L.Ed. 826—Barnett v. Kunkle, Okl., 44 S.Ct. 254, 264 U.S. 16, 68 L.Ed. 539, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., Barnett v. Kunkel, 283 F. 24, certiorari denied 43 S.Ct. 97, 260 U.S. 738, 67 L.Ed. 489.

25 C.J. p 871 notes 45, 46, 50 [b], p 878 note 16 [a].

(5) And hence the supreme court's certiorari power was, prior to Act Feb. 13, 1925, amending Jud.Code § 240, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, confined to those cases in which the judgment or decree of the circuit court of appeals was not reviewable by appeal or writ of error.—Sperry Oil & Gas Co. v. Chisholm, Okl., 44 S.Ct. 372, 264 U.S. 488, 68 L.Ed. 803, affirming in part and reversing in part, C.C.A., 282 F. 93, affirming, D.C., Chisholm v. Creek & Indiana Development Co., 273 F. 589, and certiorari granted Sperry Oil & Gas Co. v. Chisholm, 43 S.Ct. 363, 261 U.S. 611, 67 L.Ed. 826—25 C.J. p 872 note 54.

Particular judgments or decrees reviewable

(1) The supreme court has jurisdiction to review, on certiorari, judgment of circuit court of appeals, overruling judgment of supreme court of Puerto Rico holding tutor's sale void.—B. Fernandez & Bros. v. Ayllon, Puerto Rico, 45 S.Ct. 52, 266 U.S. 144, 69 L.Ed. 209, reversing, C.C.A., Ayllon v. Gonzalez, 288 F. 28.

(2) Where, during pendency of libel in admiralty by government for forfeiture of alcohol for violation of customs and navigation laws, alcohol was sold and proceeds deposited in court registry, and where proceeds were ordered to be paid to claimant or assigns, order of circuit court of appeals denying government's petition to have proceeds applied in satisfaction of lien for taxes due on alcohol was reviewable by supreme court on certiorari as against contention that such order merely carried out the other order not sought to be reviewed. Denying leave to appeal

(1) Action of circuit court of appeals in declining jurisdiction of appeal from order of district court may be reviewed by supreme court on writ of certiorari under general power conferred by Jud.Code § 262, 28 U.S.C.A. § 377, authorizing supreme court to issue writs not specifically provided for by statute which might be necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction.—In re 620 Church Street Bldg. Corporation, supra.

(2) Under this rule the action of the circuit court of appeals in denying leave to appeal to it in forma pauperis may likewise be reviewed by the supreme court on certiorari.—Holiday v. Johnston, Cal., 61 S.Ct. 1015, 313 U.S. 342, 85 L.Ed. 1392.

b. When Writ Lies

(1) In general
(2) Particular grounds for grant or refusal of writ
(3) In patent cases

(5) Successive writs

(1) In General

The issuance of certiorari is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the supreme court which ordinarily will not grant the writ except in cases of peculiar gravity or general importance, or in order to secure uniformity of decision.

The jurisdiction of the supreme court to review judgments or decrees of the circuit court of appeals by certiorari is a jurisdiction to be exercised entirely in the discretion of the court,[98] sparingly,[99] and only in extraordinary[1] cases of peculiar gravity and general importance,[2] or in order to secure uniformity of decision;[3] and in the application of these rules certiorari has been granted[4] or refused[5] in a variety of cases.

(2) Particular Grounds for Grant or Refusal of Writ

The supreme court by rule of court has indicated the character of the reasons which will be considered by it as grounds for granting certiorari. Ordinarily the writ will not issue to review the evidence or to bring up questions not of general importance.

Under Supreme Court Rules, rule 38(5), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 354, a writ of certiorari may be granted where a circuit court of appeals has rendered a decision in conflict with the decision of another circuit court of appeals on the same matter;[6]

Certiorari granted

(1) Because of the importance of the question presented in the administration of the National Labor Relations Act.—National Labor Relations Board v. Express Pub. Co., 61 S.Ct. 693, 312 U.S. 426, 85 L.Ed. 930, reversing, C.C.A., 111 F.2d 588, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 134, 311 U.S. 638, 85 L.Ed. 406—National Licorice Co. v. National Licorice Co., 104 F.2d 655, certiorari granted National Licorice Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 60 S.Ct. 108, 308 U.S. 535, 84 L.Ed. 451.

(2) Because an important question of judicial administration pertaining to the exercise of federal equity jurisdiction was raised.—Sprague v. Ticonic Nat. Bank, Me., 59 S.Ct. 777, 307 U.S. 161, 83 L.Ed. 1184, reversing, C.C.A., 99 F.2d 583, certiorari granted 59 S.Ct. 463, 306 U.S. 623, 83 L.Ed. 1028.

12. Judgment hindering administration of law

Probability that judgment and opinion below will seriously hinder future administration of law justifies issuance of writ of certiorari.—Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 47 S.Ct. 663, 274 U.S. 543, 71 L.Ed. 1193, affirming, C.C.A., American Tobacco Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 9 F.2d 570, certiorari granted Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 46 S.Ct. 349, 270 U.S. 638, 70 L.Ed. 774.

Before adoption of supreme court rule

In a number of cases heard on certiorari before the adoption of Supreme Court Rules, rule 38(5), 28 U. S.C.A. following § 354, the fact mentioned by the court may be inferred to have been influential in the granting of the writ, such as:

(1) That the jurisdiction of the courts below was in question.—Kingman & Co. v. Western Mfg. Co., Neb., 18 S.Ct. 786, 170 U.S. 675, 42 L.Ed. 1192—25 C.J. p 875 note 89.

(2) That the erroneous decision of the circuit court of appeals was made in deference to intimations of the supreme court concededly tending to support the ruling.—Grigsby v. Russell, Tenn., 32 S.Ct. 58, 222 U.S. 149, 56 L.Ed. 133, 36 L.R.A.,N.S., 642, Ann. Cas.1913B 863.

(3) That the decision of the supreme court cited by the circuit court of appeals in support of its judgment "is not entirely apposite."—U. S. v. Reynolds, Okl., 39 S.Ct. 409, 250 U.S. 104, 63 L.Ed. 873.

(4) That it was to be determined whether the circuit court of appeals correctly decided "a question left open" in a former decision of the supreme court.—Detroit Steel Cooperage Co. v. Sisterville Brewing Co., W. Va., 34 S.Ct. 753, 233 U.S. 712, 58 L. Ed. 1166, reversing 195 F. 447, 115 C. C.A. 349, rehearing denied 195 F. 1023, 115 C.C.A. 669.

(5) That decisions of federal courts in general are in conflict on the question involved.—McMullen v. Hoffman, Or., 19 S.Ct. 839, 174 U.S. 639, 645, 43 L.Ed. 1117, affirming 83 F. 372, 28 C.C.A. 178, reversing, C.C., 75 F. 547, reversing 69 F. 509, and certiorari granted 18 S.Ct. 950, 170 U.S. 705—28 C.J. p 875 note 97.

(6) That the decision of the circuit court of appeals in the instant case was rendered by a divided court.—Empire State Cattle Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Kan., 28 S.Ct. 607, 210 U.S. 1, 52 L.Ed. 931, 15 Ann.Cas. 70, affirming 147 F. 457, 77 C.C.A. 607, affirming 147 F. 457, 77 C.C.A. 601, affirming, C.C., 135 F. 135—25 C. J. p 875 note 1.

14. U.S.—General Talking Pictures Corporation v. Western Electric Co., N.Y., 58 S.Ct. 849, 304 U.S. 175, 546, 82 L.Ed. 1273, affirming, C.C. A., Western Electric Co. v. General Talking Pictures Corporation, 91 F.2d 922, affirming, D.C., 16 F.Supp. 293, certiorari granted General Talking Pictures Corporation v. Western Electric Co., 58 S.Ct. 49, 302 U.S. 674, 82 L.Ed. 520, rehearing granted 58 S.Ct. 1051, 304 U.S. 587, 82 L.Ed. 1548, affirmed 59 S.Ct. 116, 305 U.S. 124, 83 L.Ed. 81, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 355, 305 U.S. 675, 83 L.Ed. 437—U. S. v. Johnston, N.Y., 45 S.Ct. 496, 268 U. S. 220, 69 L.Ed. 925, reversing, C.C. A., Johnston v. U. S., 290 F. 120. 25 C.J. p 874 note 83 [f].

Certiorari will not be granted to review a decree on the ground that the evidence was not sufficient to establish actual dedication of petitioner's property to public use.—Southern Power Co. v. North Carolina Public Service Co., N.C., 44 S.Ct. 164, 263 U.S. 508, 68 L.Ed. 413, dismissing certiorari, C.C.A., North Carolina Public Service Co. v. Southern Power Co., 282 F. 837, certiorari granted Southern Power Co. v. North Carolina Public Service Co., 43 S.Ct. 94, 260 U.S. 716, 67 L.Ed. 478.

Certiorari granted

Where enforcement of order of the National Labor Relations Board was refused on ground that it was not supported by evidence, petition for writ of certiorari was granted because of the importance in an orderly administration of the National Labor Relations Act that the findings of the board as to the facts, if supported by evidence, be conclusive.—National Labor Relations Board v. Link-Belt Co., 61 S.Ct. 358, 311 U.S. 584, 85 L.Ed. 368, reversing, C.C.A., Link-Belt Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 110 F.2d 506, certiorari granted National Labor Relations Board v. Ct. 358, 311 U.S. 584, 85 L.Ed. 368, reversing, C.C.A., Independent Union of Craftsmen v. National Labor Relations Board, 110 F.2d 506, certiorari granted National Labor Relations Board v. Independent Union of Craftsmen, 61 S.Ct. 32, 311 U.S. 629, 85 L.Ed. 400—National Labor Relations Board v. Waterman S. S. Corporation, 60 S.Ct. 493, 309 U.S. 206, 84 L.Ed. 704, reversing, C.C.A., Wain the absence of general importance, move the court to grant the writ.[15] The writ may properly be refused where the error complained of does not affect the substantial rights of the parties,[16] where the supreme court has determined that the circuit court of appeals was without jurisdiction of the cause,[17] or where, subsequent to the application for the writ, all occasion for granting it was removed by the supreme court's decision in another case settling the question involved in the proposed certiorari.[18]

(3) In Patent Cases

Certiorari has been frequently granted in patent cases involving questions of general importance or presenting a conflict of decisions; and it has been denied in a number of cases not of this character.

Writs of certiorari have been frequently granted in patent cases,[19] for example, where it was apparent that the circuit court of appeals erroneously interpreted the opinion of the supreme court in a former case involving the same patent,[20] or where circuit courts of appeals were in conflict as to the validity[21] or construction[22] of the patent, or in conflict on the admissibility of evidence to prove liability for infringement by reason of privity with an infringer,[23] or in conflict on other questions in litigation arising out of the same patent,[24] or in conflict on questions of their own appellate jurisdiction and procedure;[25] where the construction of a federal statute giving the United States a license to use patent rights was in question,[26] or where the decision of the circuit court of appeals in the instant

Where conflict of decisions unlikely

The supreme court granted certiorari to review decision of circuit court of appeals holding claims of patent valid and infringed, notwithstanding there was no conflict of decisions with respect to claims involved, where the patent dominated a substantial portion of an industry so concentrated in one circuit that litigation in other circuits resulting in a conflict of decisions was unlikely.—Muncie Gear Works v. C.A. § 347, certiorari proceedings may be instituted by any party to a proceeding in the circuit court of appeals.[39]

d. Appeal and Certiorari in Same Case

While formerly it was a common practice to unite an application for certiorari with an appeal or writ of error, under the present statute an appeal properly taken will preclude a review on certiorari.

Under Judicial Code § 240 as amended, 28 U.S. C.A. § 347, if a party in a case in the circuit court of appeals takes an appeal from the decision of that court to the supreme court in a case in which an appeal will lie, a review on certiorari cannot be allowed at the instance of such party;[40] but an appeal improvidently taken by a party in a case where no appeal lies will not preclude him from thereafter applying for a writ of certiorari.[41]

Prior to the Act of February 13, 1925, 28 U.S. C.A. § 347, restricting review of decisions of the circuit courts of appeals by appeal or writ of error to a very narrow class of cases, see § 203 supra, and prior to the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a, abolishing the writ of error, it was a common practice, in seeking a review by the supreme court of a decision of the circuit court of appeals, to unite an application for certiorari with an appeal or a writ of error[42] as a jurisdictional precaution.[43] Under this practice, where there was both an appeal or a writ of error and a petition for a writ of certiorari, the court could, on dismissing the appeal or writ of error for lack of jurisdiction, grant the writ of certiorari and permit the record on the appeal or writ of error to stand as the return to the writ;[44] and in some cases where an application for a writ of certiorari was coincidental with an appeal or a writ of error the court allowed the certiorari in order to dispense with the necessity of deciding which was the proper proceeding.[45] So, where one party sued out a writ of error directly from the supreme court on the ground that a constitutional question was involved, and the other party took the case to the circuit court of appeals on another question, which question the circuit court of appeals certified to the supreme court, the latter court could treat the proceeding in the circuit court of appeals as pending in the supreme court on cross writ of certiorari.[46]

Election between certiorari and appeal is considered supra § 203.

e. Cross Writ of Certiorari

A writ and a cross writ of certiorari are often granted and the case is then heard on both writs.

A writ and a cross writ of certiorari are often granted and the case is then heard on both writs.[47]

f. Proceedings to Obtain Writ

Application for the writ of certiorari is made by petition, and proceedings in connection therewith are governed by statutes and rules of court.

Application for the writ of certiorari is made by petition[48] to the supreme court,[49] and the requirements in connection therewith are specified in the rules of the supreme court which must be complied with.[50]

Time for applying for writ. An application for a writ of certiorari must be made within the time prescribed by statute, the governing statute being 28 U.S.C.A. § 350.[51] Under this statute an application for certiorari to review a judgment or decree of the circuit court of appeals must be made within three months after the entry of such decision unless, for good cause shown, such period is extended by a justice of the supreme court;[52] and an application for certiorari to secure a removal of the case to the supreme court prior to final decree by the circuit court of appeals may be made at any time prior to the hearing and submission in the latter court.[53]

Stay pending application. Under 28 U.S.C.A. § 350 the execution and enforcement of a final judgment or decree of a circuit court of appeals may be stayed for a reasonable time to enable the aggrieved party to obtain a writ of certiorari.[54] The stay may be granted by a judge of the circuit court of appeals or by a justice of the supreme court.[55]

Supreme Court Rules, rule 38, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 354, provides that "a petition for review on writ of certiorari of a decision of . . . a circuit court of appeals . . . shall be accompanied by a certified transcript of the record in the case, including the proceedings in the court to which the writ is asked to be directed. . . . The petition shall contain a summary and short statement of the matter involved; a statement particularly disclosing the basis upon which it is contended that this court has jurisdiction to review the judgment or decree in question; the questions presented; and the reasons relied on for the allowance of the writ. A supporting brief may be annexed to the petition or presented separately, but it must be direct and concise." The rule also makes provision for notice of the filing of the petition, briefs in opposition, reply briefs, printing of the record, and other matters.

Complete disclosure as to controversy required

A petition for a writ of certiorari should make a clear, definite, and complete disclosure concerning the controversy, since it is impossible for the court critically to examine the record before ruling on the application, and it must rely largely on preliminary papers.—Southern Power Co. v. North Carolina Public Service Co., N.C., 44 S.Ct. 164, 263 U.S. 508, 68 L.Ed. 413, dismissing certiorari, C.C.A., North Carolina Public Service Co. v. Formerly it was necessary to make the application to the court while in session.—The Conqueror, N.Y., 17 S. Ct. 510, 166 U.S. 110, 41 L.Ed. 937.

52. Jurisdictional limitation

Where the supreme court denied a writ of certiorari to review the final decree in a patent infringement suit, it cannot consider the merits of such decree on a writ of certiorari applied for more than three months after final decree for review of a decree subsequently rendered on rule to show cause.—Toledo Scale Co. v. Computing Scale Co., 43 S.Ct. 458, 261 U.S. 399, 67 L.Ed. 719, affirming, C.C.A.Ill., 281 F. 488, certiorari granted 42 S.Ct. 585, 259 U.S. 579, 66 L. Ed. 1072, and Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Computing Scale Co., 42 S.Ct. 587, 259 U.S. 579, 66 L.Ed. 1073.

When period begins to run

(1) The statutory period begins with the date of the entry of the final judgment of the circuit court of appeals, and not with the date of the entry of the judgment in the district court under the mandate of the circuit court of appeals.—Boylan v. U. S., N.Y., 42 S.Ct. 113, 257 U.S. 614, 66 L.Ed. 397, dismissing error, C.C. A., 265 F. 165—Nelson v. Lewis, D.C. N.Y., 9 F.Supp. 406.

(2) Where circuit court of appeals, though dealing in opinion with matters affecting merits, reversed order granting temporary injunction and directed issuance of mandate in accordance with "this decree," and mandate directed further proceedings in accordance with "decision," such decree was not final; hence petition to supreme court for certiorari to review case on merits, filed within three months after circuit court of appeals affirmed dismissal on merits, was timely.—Rogers v. Hill, N.Y., 53 S.Ct. 731, 289 U.S. 582, 77 L.Ed. 1385, reversing, C.C.A., 62 F.2d 1079, following, C.C.A., 60 F.2d 109, and certiorari granted 53 S.Ct. 593, 289 U.S. 716, 77 L.Ed. 1469.

55. Procedure

(1) An application for a stay should be made in the first instance to the circuit court of appeals since it has complete knowledge of the case.—Magnum Import Co. v. Coty, 43 S.Ct. 531, 262 U.S. 159, 67 L.Ed. 922—Nelson v. Lewis, D.C.N.Y., 9 F. Supp. 406.

(2) The granting of the application in the circuit court of appeals is discretionary.—Magnum Import Co. v. Coty, supra.

g. Effect of Grant or Refusal of Writ

(1) Grant of writ
(2) Refusal of writ

(1) Grant of Writ

A writ of certiorari, when granted, operates as a stay of further proceedings in the courts below.

The primary effect of the grant of a writ of certiorari is, of course, to bring the cause before the supreme court for review and determination.

As stay of proceedings. The effect of a certiorari, when awarded by the supreme court in a cause decided by the circuit court of appeals, is to suspend any action that might be taken by that court, or by the trial court in obedience to its mandate;[56] but it does not restore jurisdiction to the trial court, or give such court authority to set aside orders legally and properly made, in obedience to the mandate of the circuit court of appeals, before the writ of certiorari was awarded.[57]

(2) Refusal of Writ

A refusal to issue certiorari does not affect the district court's jurisdiction nor does it ordinarily indicate an approval by the supreme court of the decision in question.

A refusal by the supreme court to issue a writ of certiorari to review a determination of the circuit court of appeals does not affect the jurisdiction of the district court.[58] While inferences may be drawn in a proper case from such a refusal,[59] it does not ordinarily indicate an approval by the supreme court of the decision of the circuit court of appeals;[60] and even though an interlocutory decision, for review of which a writ of certiorari was refused, may have been treated as settling the law of the case, the supreme court, in reviewing the final

(3) If the stay is refused in that court, it requires an extraordinary showing before it will be granted in the supreme court.—Magnum Import Co. v. Coty, supra.

Stay in district court

(1) Prior to the act of Febr. 13, 1925, 28 U.S.C.A. § 350, the stay should have been applied for in the circuit court of appeals, as was decided in Magnum Import Company v. Coty, 43 S.Ct. 531, 262 U.S. 159, 67 L.Ed. 922, but the act of 1925 changed the procedure and application for a stay may be made in the district court, although under unusual conditions the district court may refuse to grant the stay and compel the party to apply to the circuit court of appeals or to a justice of the supreme court.—Keyes v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., D.C.Fla., 44 F.Supp. 723.

(2) Under statute, whether district judge shall grant stay pending application to the United States supreme court for certiorari is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the judge.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Davis, C.C.A.Va., 127 F. 2d 780.

(3) The district judge in granting stay of proceedings for collection of judgment in automobile accident case, pending application to supreme court for certiorari, was authorized in exercise of discretion, to require, as a condition of the stay, the giving of a bond to secure payment of the judgment, where no supersedeas bond had been given and judgment was not otherwise secured.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Davis, supra.

(4) Where no supersedeas bond was given to stay proceeding for collection of judgment in automobile accident case, pending appeal, and on filing of suit to collect judgment defendant applied for order staying proceedings pending application to supreme court for certiorari, statutory bond given as condition to granting of stay embraced payment of the judgment which was not otherwise secured, and specific language in bond providing for payment of judgment merely made explicit that which would have been implicit under circumstances.—Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Davis, supra.

57. U.S.—Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., supra.

58. Jurisdiction not terminated

The supreme court's denial of certiorari to review order of circuit court of appeals affirming district court's dismissal of proceedings for an agricultural composition or extension of debts did not terminate district court's jurisdiction, but the proceeding was still pending until the subsequent filing of mandate from the circuit court of appeals to the district court.—In re Shyvers, D.C.Cal., 33 F. Supp. 643.

Jurisdiction not enlarged

The supreme court by its denial of certiorari when a case was before it for the first time could not confer on the federal district court jurisdiction which congress has denied where there is no diversity of citizenship.—City of Indianapolis v. Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York, Ind., 62 S.Ct. 15, 314 U.S. 63, 86 L.Ed. 47, reversing, C.C.A., Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York v. h. Dismissal of Writ

The writ of certiorari will be dismissed where the circumstances in the particular case require such action, as where it was improvidently granted.

The writ of certiorari will be dismissed where the circumstances in the particular case so require,[62] as where the writ was improvidently granted[63] or where the court was without jurisdiction to issue the writ.[64]

i. Review on Certiorari

On certiorari the supreme court has the same power and authority, and will apply much the same rules, as though the case had been brought before it by unrestricted appeal.

Under Judicial Code § 240 as amended, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, the supreme court on certiorari has the same power and authority as though the case had been brought before it by unrestricted appeal or, under the former practice, writ of error.[65]

In construing the opinion of the court below the supreme court on certiorari will apply general rules of construction[66] and on questions of local law it will look to the trial court for aid.[67]

Scope of review in general. While the entire case may be open for examination by the supreme court on certiorari[68] and it may in a proper case 61. U.S.—Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Wolf Bros. & Co., Mo., 36 S.Ct. 269, 240 U.S. 251, 60 L.Ed. 629, affirming 206 F. 611, 124 C.C.A. 409, reversing, C.C., 192 F. 930.

62. Moot question
Where, since the issue of the writ, the question presented became moot, the writ was dismissed.—Texas Consol. Theatres v. Pittman, Tex., 59 S.Ct. 40, 305 U.S. 3, 83 L.Ed. 5, dismissing certiorari 94 F.2d 203, denying rehearing 93 F.2d 21, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 1046, 304 U.S. 556, 82 L.Ed. 1524.

63. U.S.—Moor v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., Tex., 56 S.Ct. 372, 297 U.S. 101, 80 L.Ed. 509, dismissing appeal, C.C.A., 75 F.2d 386, certiorari granted 55 S.Ct. 836, 295 U.S. 728, 79 L.Ed. 1678—Keller v. Adams-Campbell Co., Cal., 44 S.Ct. 356, 264 U.S. 314, 68 L.Ed. 705, dismissing certiorari, C.C.A., 287 F. 838, certiorari granted 43 S.Ct. 702, 262 U.S. 741, 67 L.Ed. 1209—Southern Power Co. v. North Carolina Public Service Co., N.C., 44 S.Ct. 164, 263 U.S. 508, 68 L.Ed. 413, dismissing certiorari, C.C.A., North Carolina Public Service Co. v. Layne & Bowler Corporation, 276 F. 465, certiorari granted 42 S.Ct. 315, 258 U.S. 615, 66 L.Ed. 792.
25 C.J. p 874 note 77.
In an early case, however, it was said that it may be that the question of propriety in granting a writ of certiorari should be considered as foreclosed by the action of the court in granting the writ.—Forsyth v. Hammond, Ind., 17 S.Ct. 665, 166 U.S. 506, 41 L.Ed. 1095, reversing 71 F. 443, 18 C.C.A. 175.
Remand rather than dismissal
Instead of dismissing the writ as improvidently granted the supreme court may remand the cause for further proceedings where the interest of justice so requires.—Ruhlin v. New York Life Ins. Co., Pa., 58 S.Ct. 860, 304 U.S. 202, 82 L.Ed. 1290, vacating, C.C.A., 93 F.2d 416, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 408, 302 U.S. 681, 82 L.Ed. 526, mandate conformed to, D. C., New York Life Ins. Co. v. Ruhlin, 25 F.Supp. 65.

64. Question of power always open
The question of power to issue the writ, being one of jurisdiction, is always open and must be considered and determined whenever presented.—Forsyth v. Hammond, Ind., 17 S.Ct. 665, 166 U.S. 506, 41 L.Ed. 1095, reversing 71 F. 443, 18 C.C.A. 175—25 C.J. p 874 note 78.

70. In cases tried without jury

Under Rev.St. §§ 649, 700, 28 U.S. C.A. § 773, 875, supreme court's review, in case jury is waived in writing, is limited to sufficiency of facts specially found to support judgment, and to rulings excepted to and presented by bill of exceptions.—Lewellyn v. Electric Reduction Co., Pa., 48 S.Ct. 63, 275 U.S. 243, 72 L.Ed. 262, reversing, C.C.A., Electric Reduction Co. v. Lewellyn, 11 F.2d 493, reversing, D.C., 8 F.2d 91, and certiorari granted Lewellyn v. Electric Reduction Co., 47 S.Ct. 92, 273 U.S. 696, 71 L.Ed. 834.

Matters not argued

Supreme court will not consider validity of separate provisions of statute defended as whole in trial court.—Farrington v. T. Tokushige, Hawaii, 47 S.Ct. 406, 273 U.S. 284, 71 L.Ed. 646, affirming, C.C.A., 11 F. 2d 710, certiorari granted 47 S.Ct. 99, 273 U.S. 677, 71 L.Ed. 835.

Scope of review in particular cases held limited

(1) To questions of law.—In re 620 Church Street Bldg. Corporation, Ill., 57 S.Ct. 88, 299 U.S. 24, 81 L.Ed. 16, rehearing denied 57 S.Ct. 229, 299 U. S. 623, 81 L.Ed. 458.

(2) To whether the quantum of proof produced formed an adequate basis for a reasoned judgment.—Palmer v. Questions presented by briefs

(1) The supporting brief on petition for certiorari, whether included in the petition or separately presented, is not a part of the petition, at least for the purpose of stating the questions on which review is sought, and the specifications of error therein do not expand or add to the questions stated in the petition, but merely identify and challenge rulings on which is grounded ultimate decision of the matter involved.—General Talking Pictures Corporation v. Western Electric Co., N.Y., 58 S.Ct. 849, 301 U.S. 175, 546, 82 L.Ed. 1273, affirming, C.C.A., Western Electric Co. v. Particular question not considered

On review of judgment denying owner of wrecked steamship compensation for transporting its destitute seamen, supreme court would not consider to what extent rights of seamen to wages payable from freight earned on voyage or to wages or salvage from vessel they had helped to save survived statutes regulating duties of owner toward seamen where there was no evidence or finding that wrecked vessel had earned freight on her voyage, or had been salvaged with or without aid of her seamen.—Alaska S. Matters not considered by court of appeals

(1) Generally rulings not assigned as error in the circuit court of appeals and not considered by it will not be considered by the supreme court.—Ana Maria Sugar Co. v. Quinones, Puerto Rico, 41 S.Ct. 110, 254 U.S. 245, 65 L.Ed. 246, affirming, C.C.A., 251 F. 499, 163 C.C.A. 493, certiorari granted 39 S.Ct. 11, 248 U.S. 555, 63 L.Ed. 419.

(2) It is within the power of the supreme court, however, to consider and decide an issue which the circuit court of appeals erroneously refused to consider.—Liberty Oil Co. v. Condon Nat. Bank, Kan., 43 S.Ct. 118, 260 U.S. 235, 67 L.Ed. 232, reversing, C. C.A., 271 F. 928, certiorari dismissed 42 S.Ct. 53, 257 U.S. 651, 66 L.Ed. 417, rehearing granted 42 S.Ct. 92, 257 U.S. 628, 66 L.Ed. 405, and certiorari granted 42 S.Ct. 93, 257 U.S. 630, 66 L.Ed. 406.

Matters not considered by trial court

Questions passed on by the circuit court of appeals are open for consideration, although not raised in, or considered by, the trial court.—Friend v. Talcott, Ill., 33 S.Ct. 505, 228 U.S. 27, 57 L.Ed. 718, affirming 179 F. 676, 103 C.C.A. 80, 43 L.R.A., N.S., 649.

Questions obscurely presented in courts below

The supreme court was not foreclosed from basing decision regarding validity of patent on statute, which renders a patent invalid in case of public use or sale of device embodying asserted invention more than two years before it was first presented to patent office, because of the obscurity of the presentation of that question in courts below, where the question was fully presented by petition for writ of certiorari and in briefs and argument, and there was no indication that owner of patent had been prejudiced by the obscurity.—Muncie Gear Works v. Outboard, Marine & Manufacturing Co., Ill., 62 S.Ct. 865, 315 U.S. 759, 86 L.Ed. 1171, reversing, C.C.A., Outboard Marine & Mfg. Co. v. Muncie Gear Works, 119 F.2d 404, certiorari granted 62 S.Ct. 100, 314 U.S. 594, 86 L.Ed. 479.

Particular question not considered

On petition by federal power commission to review a judgment reversing an order of the commission relating to reduction of rates of natural gas companies, and on cross petition by companies assailing constitutionality of Natural Gas Act and the authority of commission to make the order, the question of the disposition of excess charges made pending review of the judgment was not before the supreme court for determination.—Federal Power Commission v. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, 62 S.Ct. 736, 315 U.S. 575, 86 L. Ed. 1037, reversing, C.C.A., Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America v. Federal Power Commission, 120 F.2d 625.

74. When power exercised

The supreme court may notice plain error, although not presented by petition for certiorari, but power will be exercised only in clear cases and in exceptional circumstances.—Kessler v. Strecker, La., 59 S.Ct. 694, 307 U.S. 22, 83 L.Ed. 1082, modifying, C. C.A., Strecker v. Kessler, 95 F.2d 976, rehearing denied 96 F.2d 1020, certiorari granted Kessler v. Strecker, 59 S.Ct. 102, 305 U.S. 587, 83 L.Ed. 371.

Error held fundamental Under civil procedure rule exempting from punishment as for contempt the refusal to obey court order that party submit to a physical or mental examination, district court's treating refusal to comply with such an order as a contempt and committing party therefor was "fundamental error" which would be reviewed by supreme court, notwithstanding district court's action was not assigned as error either in the circuit court of appeals or the supreme court.—Sibbach v. Wilson & Co., Ill., 61 S.Ct. 422, 312 U.S. 1, 85 L.Ed. 479, reversing 108 F.2d 415, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 809, 309 U.S. 650, 84 L.Ed. 1001.

Questions not considered

(1) Where case turns on questions decided favorably to petitioners by supreme court, other questions determined adversely to them by court below will not be noticed.—Sun Ins. Office v. Scott, Ohio, 52 S.Ct. 72, 284 U.S. 177, 76 L.Ed. 229, reversing, C. C.A., Home Ins. Co. of New York v.

which is, or has become, an abstract or moot question will not be reviewed.[76]

As a general rule the supreme court will not interfere where conclusions of the circuit court of appeals depend on appreciation of circumstances which admit of different interpretations;[77] and ordinarily concurrent findings of fact of the district court and the circuit court of appeals which are not plainly erroneous or unsupported by the evidence will be accepted by the supreme court and will not be disturbed or reviewed by it.[78]

Where the writ is granted on the petition of one

Scott, 46 F.2d 10, certiorari granted Sun Insurance Office v. Scott, 51 S. Ct. 487, 283 U.S. 814, 75 L.Ed. 1431.

(2) Supreme court need not examine grounds on which circuit court of appeals put correct decision.—Alpha S. S. Corporation v. Cain, N.Y., 50 S.Ct. 443, 281 U.S. 642, 74 L.Ed. 1086, affirming, C.C.A., Cain v. Alpha S. S. Corporation, 35 F.2d 717, certiorari granted Alpha S. S. Corporation v. Cain, 50 S.Ct. 86, 280 U. S. 549, 74 L.Ed. 607.

Constitutional question

Generally the constitutionality of a statute will not be considered on certiorari unless this is necessary to the final determination of the cause. —Lane v. Wilson, Okl., 59 S.Ct. 872, 307 U.S. 268, 83 L.Ed. 1281, reversing, C.C.A., 98 F.2d 980, certiorari granted 59 S.Ct. 249, 305 U.S. 591, 83 L.Ed. 374.

76. Particular matters

(1) In oil producers' injunction suit attacking National Industrial Recovery Act and provision of petroleum code limiting production, such provision which, without knowledge of parties or courts below, was eliminated by executive order antedating suit, would not be passed on by supreme court, even though such provision was reinstated by executive order pending appeal; but injunction suits attacking regulations of secretary of the interior designed to enforce executive order prohibiting transportation of excess petroleum in interstate and foreign commerce were not moot as to such regulations merely because of amendment thereof subsequent to institution of suits, where amended regulations continued substantially earlier requirements and expanded them and presented same constitutional questions.—Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan, Tex., 55 S. Ct. 241, 293 U.S. 388, 79 L.Ed. 446, reversing, C.C.A., Ryan v. Amazon Petroleum Corporation, 71 F.2d 1, reversing, D.C., Amazon Petroleum Corporation v. Railroad Commission of Texas, 5 F.Supp. 639, and certiorari granted Amazon Petroleum Corporation v. Ryan, 55 S.Ct. 102, 293 U.S. 539, 79 L.Ed. 645, followed in, C.C.A., Ryan v. Panama Refining Co., 71 F.2d 8, certiorari granted Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan, 55 S.Ct. 83, 293 U.S. 539, 79 L.Ed. 645, reversed on other grounds 55 S.Ct. 241, 293 U.S. 388, 79 L.Ed. 446.

(2) In action by United States to enjoin construction of dam without federal license, supreme court would determine the validity of only the challenged license provisions and could not predetermine issues involving mere possibilities of future coercive uses of license power or of future conflicts between the federal government and states in the field of water power rights.—U. S. v. Appalachian Electric Power Co., Va., 61 S. Ct. 291, 311 U.S. 377, 85 L.Ed. 243, reversing, C.C.A., 107 F.2d 769, affirming, D.C., 23 F.Supp. 83, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 608, 309 U.S. 646, 84 L.Ed. 999, rehearing denied 61 S.Ct. 548, 312 U.S. 712, 85 L.Ed. 1143.

Discretionary action of court below

Discretion of trial court in granting interlocutory injunction against infringement of letters patent will not be disturbed on certiorari to the circuit court of appeals which affirmed the injunction order where questions of fact were disputed.—Fireball Gas Tank & Illuminating Co. v. Commercial Acetylene Co., Mo., 36 S.Ct. 86, 239 U.S. 156, 60 L.Ed. 191, affirming 198 F. 650, 117 C.C.A. 354.

Findings as to negligence

Where the district court and the circuit court of appeals agree on a question of negligence, the supreme court will not make a minute analysis of the evidence.—Boehmer v. Pennsylvania R. Co., N.Y., 40 S.Ct. 409, party alone, only so much of the judgment below as decided in favor of the other party is brought before the court for review,[79] and hence, as discussed infra notes 83–91, matters urged in opposition to the judgment by respondent will not generally be considered.

Questions of jurisdiction. Before considering the questions raised by the petition for certiorari, the court, in cases of doubt, should first determine its own jurisdiction[80] and then that of the court from which the record comes,[81] even though these jurisdictional questions have not been raised by the parties in either court.[82]

Matters urged by respondent. While the supreme court on certiorari has power to review objections to the judgment under review urged by a respondent who has not applied for certiorari,[83] it is not bound to do so[84] and, as a matter of practice, it generally will refuse to consider such objections,[85] respondent not being entitled as a matter of right to urge them[86] even though they were raised in the court below.[87] A respondent who has not applied for certiorari, however, may urge any matter appearing in the record in support of the judgment under review[88] and he is free to sustain it on any legal ground which will support it.[89] Thus he may

When facts considered

In cases involving issues such as the navigability of water courses, facts and their constitutional significance are too closely connected to make the two-court rule a serviceable guide, and the supreme court may consider the facts found by the two courts and determine for itself whether the proper legal tests have been applied to the facts.—U. S. v. Appalachian Electric Power Co., Va., 61 S.Ct. 291, 311 U.S. 377, 85 L. Ed. 243, reversing, C.C.A., 107 F.2d 769, affirming, D.C., 23 F.Supp. 83, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 608, 309 U.S. 646, 84 L.Ed. 999, rehearing denied 61 S.Ct. 548, 312 U.S. 712, 85 L.Ed. 1143.

urge in support of the judgment grounds rejected by the court below;[90] and where the judgment below was rested on an erroneous ground he may justify it in the supreme court on a valid ground.[91]

Presumptions. The supreme court may indulge all natural presumptions and proper conclusions arising from the record;[92] and it may assume that rulings of the court below not specified as error in the petition for the writ are correct.[93] Where an order dismissing a complaint on the pleadings is affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, the supreme court, on certiorari, will assume the truth of the allegations of the complaint[94] in the absence of countervailing facts or explanations.[95]

Burden of showing error. The burden of showing in what respect the judgment under review is erroneous rests on the party bringing it to the supreme court for review.[96]

92. Particular presumptions or conclusions

(1) Where opinion of circuit court of appeals holding patent valid in infringement suits, in enumerating combination of elements which allegedly constituted invention, included an element described in amendment of the patent application, supreme court would assume, in disposing of the case on certiorari, that circuit court of appeals considered such element essential.—Schriber-Schroth Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., Chrysler Corporation, Ohio, 59 S.Ct. 8, 305 U.S. 47, 573, 83 L.Ed. 34, reversing, C.C.A., Cleveland Trust Co. v. Schriber-Schroth Co., 92 F.2d 330, certiorari denied Schriber-Schroth Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., 58 S.Ct. 609, 303 U.S. 639, 82 L.Ed. 1099, rehearing denied Schriber-Schroth Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., Chrysler Corporation, 58 S.Ct. 748, 303 U.S. 667, 82 L.Ed. 1124, certiorari granted, 58 S.Ct. 1052, 304 U.S. 587, 82 L.Ed. 1548, mandate conformed to, C.C.A., Cleveland Trust Co. v. Schriber-Schroth Co., 108 F.2d 109—Aberdeen Motor Supply Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., Chrysler Corporation, Ohio, 59 S.Ct. 8, 305 U.S. 17, 573, 83 L.Ed. 34, reversing, C.C.A., Cleveland Trust Co. v. Aberdeen Motor Supply Co., 92 F.2d 330, certiorari denied Aberdeen Motor Supply Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., 58 S.Ct. 609, 303 U.S. 639, 82 L.Ed. 1100, rehearing denied Aberdeen Motor Supply Co. v. Schriber-Schroth Co., 108 F.2d 109.

(2) In determining whether wartime shipbuilding contracts between government and shipbuilder were obtained by duress, the supreme court could not assume, in absence of evidence, that if negotiations failed to produce contracts acceptable to both sides, shipbuilder would have refused to contribute to the war effort except under legal compulsion. U. S. v. Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Pa., 62 S.Ct. 581, 315 U.S. 289, 86 L.Ed. 855, affirming, C.C.A., 113 F.2d 301, affirming, D.C., 23 F.2d 676.

cuit court of appeals should have rendered,[98] and to dispose of all questions arising on the record.[99] Accordingly it may affirm,[1] reverse,[2] vacate,[3] or modify[4] the judgment under review, as the interest of justice may require in the particular case.[5]

Dismissal of suit for want of jurisdiction. Dismissal of the suit will be directed where it appears that the trial court was without jurisdiction.[6]

Disposition more favorable to respondent. On the theory, which has been noted above in subdivision i of this section, that a respondent who has sought no cross writ is entitled to be heard only in support of the decree rendered below, the supreme court generally will decline to render or direct a decree more favorable to such party.[7]

Effect of changes pending review. In the determination and disposition of a cause on certiorari the supreme court must consider material changes Corporation in Nebraska, 108 F.2d 897, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 8, 311 U.S. 623, 85 L.Ed. 396.

When reversal proper

(1) The supreme court, on certiorari to review judgment of circuit court of appeals reversing judgment of supreme court of Puerto Rico on a question of local law, will not reverse the decision, unless considered wrong, or there was such plausible ground for the judgment reversed by it that the local decision ought not to be disturbed.—Cami v. Central Victoria, Puerto Rico, 45 S.Ct. 570, 268 U.S. 469, 69 L.Ed. 1056, affirming, C.C.A., Central Victoria v. Cami, 295 F. 809.

(2) Accordingly the supreme court will reverse a judgment of the circuit court of appeals reversing a judgment of the supreme court of Puerto Rico on a question of local law where it becomes impossible for the supreme court to entertain a sense of clear error committed by the supreme court of Puerto Rico, in view of the deference due to the understanding of local courts in matters of purely local concern.—People of Puerto Rico v. Rubert Hermanos, Inc., 62 S.Ct. 771, 315 U.S. 637, 86 L.Ed. 1081—Sancho v. Yabucoa Sugar Co., Puerto Rico, 59 S.Ct. 626, 306 U. 6. Rule held inapplicable

Rule that federal appellate court must, of its own motion, dismiss suit if it appears that trial court was without jurisdiction, was inapplicable, where objection went, not to trial court's jurisdiction, but to legal capacity of plaintiff as ancillary receiver.—McCandless v. Furlaud, N. Y., 55 S.Ct. 42, 293 U.S. 67, 79 L.Ed. 202, reversing, C.C.A., 68 F.2d 925, certiorari granted 54 S.Ct. 716, 292 U.S. 617, 78 L.Ed. 1475, rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 211, 293 U.S. 632, 79 L. Ed. 717.

7. Erroneous judgment affirmed

(1) A judgment denying separate gift tax exemption claimed by petitioners for each trust beneficiary, but allowing a single exemption for each trust, would be affirmed by the supreme court on certiorari, although no exemption should have been allowed because the gifts were of future interests, in absence of cross petition by the government attacking the judgment.—Ryerson v. U. S., Ill., 61 S.Ct. 656, 312 U.S. 405, 85 L.Ed. 917, affirming, C.C.A., U. S. v. Ryerson, 114 F.2d 150, reversing, D.C., 28 F.Supp. 265, certiorari granted Ryerson v. U. S., 61 S.Ct. 142, 311 U.S. 640, 85 L.Ed. 408.

(2) Where collector of internal revenue on certiorari by taxpayer did not draw into question so much of judgment as exempted from taxation gain to transferor corporation arising from transfer of its assets and part of liquidating dividend attributable thereto, the supreme court could not afford collector relief from that portion of judgment which was adverse to him.—Le Tulle v. Scofield, Tex., 60 S.Ct. 313, 308 U.S. 415, 84 L. Ed. 355, affirming, C.C.A., Scofield v. Le Tulle, 103 F.2d 20, certiorari granted Le Tulle v. Scofield, 60 S. Ct. 75, 308 U.S. 531, 84 L.Ed. 447, rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 465, 309 U.S. 694, 84 L.Ed. 1035.

in fact[8] and in law[9] which have supervened since the judgment or decree was entered below, especially in an admiralty case.[10]

(2) Remand

The cause may be remanded to the district court or circuit court of appeals for further proceedings in accordance with directions or instructions given.

The supreme court, in a proper case, may remand the cause to the district court[11] or circuit court of appeals[12] for further proceedings in accordance with directions or instructions given.[13] Thus the cause may be remanded to the proper court for further proceedings where the determination of the court below was based on a wrong theory as to the law applicable,[14] where the circuit court of appeals left undetermined a question material to a proper disposition of the cause,[15] where there has been no

8. Declaration of war by the United States considered in suit between alien belligerents.—Watts, Watts & Co. v. Unione Austriaca di Navigazione, N.Y., 39 S.Ct. 1, 248 U.S. 9, 63 L.Ed. 100, 3 A.L.R. 323, reversing, C.C.A., 229 F. 136, 143 C.C.A. 412.

9. U.S.—Watts, Watts & Co. v. Unione Austriaca di Navigazione, supra—Dinsmore v. Southern Express Co., N.D., 22 S.Ct. 45, 183 U.S. 115, 46 L.Ed. 111, affirming 102 F. 794, 42 C.C.A. 623, reversing, C.C., 92 F. 714.

Changes in bankruptcy statute

Where bankruptcy statute invoked in railway receivership proceeding was amended so as to apply to such receiverships, after petition had been filed for certiorari to review a judgment holding that such statute was inapplicable, the supreme court was required to decide the question in harmony with statute as amended, even assuming that the judgment was correct under the law in effect at time of its rendition.—Carpenter v. Wabash Ry. Co., Mo., 60 S.Ct. 416, 309 U.S. 23, 84 L.Ed. 558, vacating, C.C.A., 103 F.2d 996, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 102, 308 U.S. 539, 84 L.Ed. 454, rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 585, 309 U.S. 695, 84 L.Ed. 1035.

10. U.S.—Watts, Watts & Co. v. Unione Austriaca di Navigazione, N. Y., 39 S.Ct. 1, 248 U.S. 9, 63 L.Ed. 100, 3 A.L.R. 323, reversing, C.C.A., 229 F. 136, 143 C.C.A. 412.

13. Particular causes remanded with directions

(1) Where bankruptcy statute requiring giving of priority to employees' claims for personal injuries in railroad reorganizations was amended so as to be applicable to receiverships, after petition had been filed for certiorari to review judgment denying priority in equity receivership of railroad, supreme court would not remand the case for district court to determine whether the claim could be entertained under the amendment, but would remand the cause to district court with directions to allow the claim, in view of mandatory effect of the statute.—Carpenter v. Wabash Ry. Co., Mo., 60 S Ct. 416, 309 U.S. 23, 84 L.Ed. 558, vacating, C.C.A., 103 F.2d 996, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 102, 308 U.S. 539, 84 L.Ed. 454, rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 585, 309 U.S. 695, 84 L.Ed. 1035.

(2) Other causes.—Beal v. Missouri Pac. R. R. Corporation, Neb., 61 S.Ct. 418, 312 U.S. 45, 85 L.Ed. 577, reversing, C.C.A., Beal v. Missouri Pac. R. Jackson, Ill., 58 S.Ct. 871, 304 U.S. 261, 82 L.Ed. 1329, vacating, C.C.A., 94 F.2d 288, mandate conformed to 98 F.2d 950, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 108, 305 U.S. 640, 83 L.Ed. 413.

State or federal law

Where, after the grant of certiorari to review a decision of the circuit court of appeals, the supreme court announced a decision under which the question involved is governed by the decisions of the appropriate state court, the supreme court will decline to decide the issue of state law, but will vacate the judgment and remand the cause for enforcement of the applicable principles of state law, when the question was regarded below both by courts and by counsel as one of general or federal law. Ruhlin v. New York Life Ins. Co., Pa. 58 S.Ct. 860, 304 U.S. 202, 82 L.Ed. 1290, vacating, C.C.A., 93 F.2d 416, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 408, 302 U.S. 681, 82 L.Ed. 526, mandate conformed to, D.C., New York Life Ins. Co. v. determination on the merits by the circuit court of appeals,[16] where issues of fact remain for solution by the district court,[17] or where the record does not warrant a final disposition of the cause by the supreme court.[18]

It is the duty of the lower court, on remand, to comply with the mandate of the supreme court and to obey the directions therein.[19] As to matters within its compass, the mandate is controlling,[20] but as to other matters it does not deprive the lower court of its freedom of action.[21]

(3) Effect of Judgment

Rules governing the conclusiveness and effect of judgments generally apply to decisions of the supreme court on certiorari.

Rules governing the conclusiveness and effect of judgments generally apply to decisions of the supreme court on certiorari.[22]

k. Costs

Costs may be imposed on petitioner where the writ is dismissed as improvidently granted. In a proper case a litigant may be granted leave to proceed in forma pauperis.

mandate conformed to, C.C.A., Cleveland Trust Co. v. Schriber-Schroth Co., 108 F.2d 109—F. E. Rowe Sales Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., Chrysler Corporation, Ohio, 59 S.Ct. 8, 305 U.S. 47, 573, 83 L.Ed. 34, reversing, C.C.A., Cleveland Trust Co. v. F. E. Rowe Sales Co., 92 F.2d 330, certiorari denied F. E. Cleveland Trust Co., Chrysler Corporation, 58 S.Ct. 749, 303 U.S. 667, 82 L.Ed. 1124, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 1053, 304 U.S. 587, 82 L.Ed. 1548, mandate conformed to, C.C.A., Cleveland Trust Co. v. Schriber-Schroth Co., 108 F.2d 109.

Sufficiency of evidence

Where circuit court of appeals, on ground that statute of limitations did not run against foreign sovereign, reversed judgment of district court denying recovery on claim for bank deposit assigned by Soviet government to United States, but did not determine whether evidence was sufficient to support district court's finding that bank unqualifiedly repudiated liability, the supreme court would remand cause to circuit court of appeals for determination of sufficiency of evidence to warrant dismissal of complaint on motion, in reversing judgment on certiorari.—Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. U. S., N.Y., 58 S.Ct. 785, 304 U.S. 126, 82 L.Ed. 1224, reversing, C.C.A., U. S. v. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, 91 F.2d 898, certiorari granted Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. U. S., 58 S.Ct. 363, 302 U.S. 681, 82 L.Ed. 525, mandate conformed to, C.C.A., U. S. v. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, 100 F.2d 369.

Question of marketable title

Where the circuit court of appeals erroneously refused to pass on the issue of marketable title, and where the writ of certiorari would not have been granted on that issue alone, the case would be remanded to the circuit court of appeals for consideration and decision.—Liberty Oil Co. v. Condon Nat. Bank, Kan., 43 S.Ct. 118, 260 U.S. 235, 67 L.Ed. 232, reversing, C.C.A., 271 F. 928, certiorari dismissed 42 S.Ct. 53, 257 U.S. 651, 66 L.Ed. 417, rehearing granted 42 S.Ct. 92, 257 U.S. 628, 66 L.Ed. 405, and certiorari granted 42 S.Ct. 93, 257 U.S. 630, 66 L.Ed. 406.

16. Decision on jurisdictional grounds

The supreme court will not decide a case on the merits on a writ of certiorari to a circuit court of appeals after finding that the latter court erred when it reversed for lack of jurisdiction a decree of the trial court, but will remand the case to the circuit court of appeals to decide the case on the merits.—Brown v. Fletcher, N.Y., 35 S.Ct. 750, 237 U.S. 583, 59 L.Ed. 1128, reversing 206 F. 461, 124 C.C.A. 367.

18. Lack of fact findings

Cause remanded to district court for further proceedings where findings of fact were essential to proper determination of questions presented on certiorari and no specific findings of fact had been made by the lower courts.—Panama Mail S. S. Co. v. Vargas, Cal., 50 S.Ct. 448, 281 U.S. 670, 74 L.Ed. 1105, reversing, C.C.A., 33 F.2d 894, certiorari granted 50 S. Ct. 40, 280 U.S. 546, 74 L.Ed. 606—City of Hammond v. 21. Claim for costs as between solicitor and client

The lower court was free to act on a claim for costs as between solicitor and client where the mandate neither directly nor by implication covered that matter.—Sprague v. Ticonic Nat. Bank, supra.

22. Decision on certiorari held not conclusive as to particular issues

(1) Where supreme court determined on certiorari that findings and proof were insufficient to justify enforcement of cease and desist order of federal trade commission, such reasons were not controlling in subsequent proceeding between same parties presenting different facts and different record for consideration.—Federal Trade Commission v. Raladam Co., 62 S.Ct. 966, 316 U.S. 149, 86 L.Ed. 1336, reversing, C.C.A., Raladam Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 123 F.2d 34, certiorari granted 62 S.Ct. 631, 315 U.S. 790, 86 L.Ed. 1194.

providently granted, costs may be imposed on petitioner.[23]

Proceedings in forma pauperis. Where because of poverty a litigant is unable to pay the costs of proceedings on certiorari he may apply to the court for an order to proceed in forma pauperis.[24]

3. REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF DISTRICT COURTS

§ 205. In General

Direct review by the supreme court of decisions of the district court may be had only as authorized by statute. When an appeal is improperly taken to the supreme court, the latter may save appellants their proper remedies by appropriate order.

A direct review by the supreme court of an interlocutory or final judgment or decree of a district court may be had in the cases specified in the controlling statutes,[25] and only in such cases.[26] A jurisdictional barrier to an attempted appeal binds the supreme court, even though not invoked by appellees.[27] If a party takes an appeal or writ of error to the circuit court of appeals, he cannot subsequently take a direct appeal or writ of error to the supreme court in the same case.[28]

Only final and complete judgments of the district courts are subject to direct review by the supreme court,[29] except in a limited class of cases.[30]

An indirect review of a judgment of a circuit court of appeals cannot be had on appeal from a judgment entered by a district court pursuant to a mandate of the circuit court of appeals.[31]

Even though the supreme court cannot under a statutory provision for direct appeal hear the merits of a case, it will, where the question of jurisdiction was not obviously settled by prior decisions, enforce the limitations of the statute by an order framed to save appellants their proper remedies,[32]

24. Leave granted to proceed in forma pauperis.—Holiday v. Johnston, Cal., 61 S.Ct. 1015, 313 U.S. 342, 85 L.Ed. 1392.

Showing required

Applicant for copies of records to be prepared without payment of costs for use in applying to supreme court in forma pauperis for certiorari to review decision denying leave to file petition for writ of mandamus must show merit in proposed proceeding, and in absence of such showing, application would be denied. —Stewart v. as by vacating the decree and remanding the cause to the court which heard it, so that it might enter a fresh decree from which appellants might, if they wished, perfect a timely appeal to the circuit court of appeals.[33] Where, however, appellants had also appealed from the decree to the circuit court of appeals, their remedy will be preserved by dismissing the appeal in the supreme court without more.[34]

§ 206. Where Jurisdiction in Issue

Provision was made by former § 238 of the Judicial Code, derived from the Act of March 3, 1891 § 5, as amended in 1915, for a direct appeal to the supreme court from the district courts in any case in which the jurisdiction of the court was in issue, but this provision was abrogated by the amendment of February 13, 1925, and a direct appeal can be had only in the instances provided by Judicial Code § 238 as it has been amended, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345. For a discussion of the practice under the superseded provisions of the Judicial Code, reference is made to 25 C.J. p 880 note 44–p 911 note 99 and also to the cases arising under such provisions, since the publication of that treatise, which are cited for their historical importance, see infra §§ 208–218.

§ 207. —— Statutory Provisions

As noted supra, § 206, provision was formerly made by the federal statutes for a direct appeal to the supreme court from the district courts in any case in which the jurisdiction of the district court was in issue.

§ 208. —— General Conditions to Appellate Jurisdiction

Other conditions to appellate jurisdiction must have been present to warrant a direct appeal on a jurisdictional question.

Under the prior practice, see supra § 206, there could be no appeal because of the fact that jurisdiction was in issue unless other conditions to appellate jurisdiction were met.[35]

§ 209. —— Respective Jurisdiction of Supreme Court and Circuit Court of Appeals

The supreme court had exclusive jurisdiction where the sole question involved was a directly reviewable question of jurisdiction.

Under the prior practice, see supra § 206, the jurisdiction of the supreme court was exclusive where the sole question decided by the trial court was a directly reviewable question of jurisdiction, but, under some circumstances where the case was decided on the merits, the appeal could be taken to the circuit court of appeals.[36]

§ 210. —— What Are Questions of Jurisdiction in General

Questions of jurisdiction were limited to questions of federal jurisdiction.

Under the former practice here under consideration, see supra § 206, jurisdiction was limited to questions of jurisdiction as a federal court and did not include questions dependent on principles of general law.[37]

§ 211. —— Particular Classes of Cases Involving Jurisdiction

Direct appeal was permitted in cases of many different classes.

Under the prior practice of direct appeal from the district court, see supra § 206, jurisdiction was invoked in a wide variety of cases including cases removed from state courts.[38]

§ 212. —— Particular Issues Involving Jurisdiction

Any issue involving federal jurisdiction permitted an appeal to the supreme court.

The rules permitting review on direct appeal from the district court on a question of jurisdiction, see supra § 206, were applied generally to all issues involving a question of jurisdiction.[39]

§ 213. —— Judgment or Decree on Mandate of Circuit Court of Appeals

A judgment on a mandate from the circuit court of appeals was not as a rule reviewable.

The supreme court could not review the judgment or decree of a district court entered in compliance with the mandate of the circuit court of appeals to which the case had been previously taken, unless the decision of the circuit court of appeals was absolutely void for want of jurisdiction.[40]

§ 214. —— Decision on Jurisdictional Question by District Court

A jurisdictional question must have been actually decided by the district court.

There could be no direct appeal from the district courts to the supreme court on questions involving the jurisdiction of the lower court under the old practice unless a reviewable question of jurisdiction was regarded as in issue and was actually decided by the trial court; and, if the trial court did no more than pass on the merits of the controversy the appeal was dismissed.[41]

§ 215. —— Certification of Jurisdictional Question or Substitute Therefor

There must have been a certification by the trial court of the question of jurisdiction.

site to the exercise of jurisdiction by the supreme court was a valid, sufficient, and timely certificate by the trial court of the question of jurisdiction or the equivalent of such certificate.[42]

§ 216. —— Record and Proceedings Not in Record Respecting Jurisdiction

Under the former practice of direct appeal from the district court on a question of jurisdiction, see supra § 206, the right of the supreme court to review could not rest on matters outside the record, as shown in 25 C.J. p 907 notes 18–36.

§ 217. —— Advancement of Cause on Docket

A case in which jurisdiction was the only question in issue might be advanced on the docket.

Provision was made for the advancement of cases brought to the supreme court on the docket where the question of the jurisdiction of the court below was the only question in issue.[43]

§ 218. —— Determination and Disposition of Jurisdictional Questions

The case was disposed of on the question of jurisdiction of the court below as shown by the entire record.

Under the practice outlined supra § 206, in the case of a direct appeal on a question involving jurisdiction, determination of the case by the supreme court was made on examination of the entire record, and the supreme court would consider only the question of jurisdiction of the court below. In passing on the question, the court would consider whether the conclusion on that question was warranted by the evidence before the court below and disclosed in the record. A case not within the appellate jurisdiction of the court would be dismissed; and the decision of the district court could be affirmed, reversed, or modified, or the case could be remanded with directions, as the circumstances might require.[44]

§ 219. —— Second Appeal

A second appeal could be had under certain conditions.

Under the former practice there might be a second appeal under some circumstances where a directly reviewable question of jurisdiction was involved.[45]

§ 220. Where Constitutional Questions Involved

a. Suit to restrain enforcement of state statute or administrative order
b. Suit to restrain enforcement of federal statute
c. Suits involving United States and federal statute
d. Earlier statutes

a. Suit to Restrain Enforcement of State Statute or Administrative Order

The federal statute authorizing an appeal to the supreme court from an order of a district court of three judges granting or denying an injunction restraining a state officer from enforcing an unconstitutional state statute or order of an administrative board is a technical enactment which will be applied only to cases coming within its terms.

In a case coming within the statute, the supreme court will take jurisdiction of a direct appeal from the district court under Judicial Code § 266, 28 U.S.C.A. § 380, which provides that an appeal may be taken direct to the supreme court from an order of a district court of three judges granting or denying an interlocutory injunction restraining a state officer from enforcing an unconstitutional state statute or order of an administrative board or from a final decree granting or denying a permanent injunction in such suit.[46] This statute is not a measure of

Final portion of decree
The supreme court had jurisdiction of direct appeal from portion of decree denying permanent injunction restraining public service commission of Missouri from prosecuting suits in enforcing Missouri statute governing motor carriers, and court would not dismiss appeal from decree, notwithstanding it was not a broad social policy to be construed with great liberality, but is an enactment technical in the strict sense of the term, and is to be applied as such.[47] It was intended by congress as a procedural protection against an improvident state-wide doom by a federal court of a state's legislative policy,[48] and its purpose was to minimize, in an important class of cases, the delay incident to a review of a decree granting or denying an interlocutory injunction.[49]

The statute applies only where there is a substantial claim of invalidity under the federal constitution and where an application for an interlocutory injunction, for the purposes contemplated by the statute, is made and pressed.[50] So a direct appea to the supreme court will lie only if the suit is one to restrain the action of state officers,[51] and the supreme court is without jurisdiction where it appears that a suit to enjoin an alleged unconstitutional order of a state commission directing a gas company to supply a consumer with gas at the prescribed rate was in reality not one to enjoin the action of the state officers, but to enjoin a consumer from prosecuting a suit to recover alleged excess payments for gas.[52]

An attack on lawless exercise of authority in a particular case is not, within the statute, an attack on the constitutionality of a statute conferring the authority, even though a misreading of the statute is invoked as justification;[53] and the enforcement of a statute is not sought to be enjoined merely because a state official seeks shelter under it by way of defense against a charge of lawlessness.[54] On its face the statute precludes a reading which would bring within its scope every suit to restrain the conduct of a state official whenever some enactment may be said to authorize the questioned conduct.[55]

This statute has no application unless there is a proper appeal from a decree granting or denying an interlocutory or permanent injunction,[56] and, so, where no appeal was taken to review a decree denying an injunction, the supreme court had no jurisdiction of an appeal seeking to review a paragraph of the decree dismissing defendant's counterclaim,[57] or of a direct appeal from a judgment dismissing a motion for assessment of damages and costs against plaintiffs and their injunction bond sureties.[58]

A direct appeal can be taken under the statute only if the suit requires the convening of a district court of three judges,[59] and there is no such suit final one in so far as it authorized recovery on a counterclaim and appointed special master to take necessary accounting.—Eichholz v. Public Service Commission of State of Missouri, Mo., 59 S.Ct. 532, 306 U.S. 268, 622, 83 L.Ed. 641, affirming, D.C., Eichholz v. Hargus, 23 F.Supp. 587.

Merger of appeals

An appeal from an order denying a temporary injunction was merged in appeal from final decree of dismissal, and therefore should be dismissed.—Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Kuykendall, Wash., 44 S.Ct. 553, 265 U.S. 196, 68 L.Ed. 975.

Scope of review

On appeal to supreme court on ground of alleged unconstitutionality of state law, it is not desirable that courts should go beyond necessity to instruct officials of state as to meaning of state law.—Palmetto Fire Ins. Co. v. Conn, 47 S.Ct. 88, 272 U.S. 295, 71 L.Ed. 243, affirming, D.C.Ohio, 9 F.2d 202, D.C.Wis., Chrysler Sales Corporation v. Smith, 9 F.2d 666 and D.C.Me., Chrysler Sales Corporation v. Ground of allowing or denying injunction

Where three-judge court rightly acquired and proceeded to exercise jurisdiction, appeal would be to supreme court on whatever ground injunction was allowed or denied, provided constitutional question was substantial and not frivolous.—Brucker v. where the state statutes from which relief was sought do not constitute legislation of general application,[60] or where no preliminary injunction was sought.[61] No appeal lies to the supreme court from an order of a single judge acting without jurisdiction in granting an interlocutory injunction or final decree in such a cause.[62]

In determining the validity of the state statute, the supreme court will accord great weight to the district court's view of the state law.[63] In reviewing the lower court's determination that state statutory regulations were unreasonable, the supreme court will examine the record, not to see whether the findings of the court below are supported by evidence, but to ascertain on the whole record whether it is possible to say that the legislative choice is without rational basis.[64] In reviewing the district court's action in assuming jurisdiction, the supreme court will not consider affidavits filed with the supreme court for the purpose of supplementing the record by showing the amount in controversy as to one of the plaintiffs;[65] although the supreme court may receive affidavits establishing its own appellate jurisdiction under a statute prescribing that a specified amount in controversy is prerequisite to appeal, review of the action of the district court in assuming jurisdiction is confined to the record before the district court.[66] Where the allegations of the bill were sufficient to state a cause of action, but the bill had been dismissed without hearing evidence and without findings of fact on which the validity of the legislative classification could be determined, the decree will be reversed and the cause remanded with directions for a final hearing, on pleadings and proofs, and to make findings of fact and conclusions of law.[67] The supreme court's decree on appeal from a decree of the district court restricting findings of confiscatory and reasonable gas rates to a valuation of the gas company's properties as of a certain date must be similarly restricted.[68]

b. Suit to Restrain Enforcement of Federal Statute

The federal statute providing for a three-judge district court and direct appeal to the supreme court in injunction suits involving the constitutionality of a federal statute applies only to the particular class of cases therein described, and is inapplicable unless the questions of constitutionality raised are substantial.

The federal statute, Act of August 24, 1937, 28 U.S.C.A. § 380a, providing for a three-judge district court and direct appeal to the supreme court in injunction suits involving the constitutionality of a federal statute, provides for a procedure analogous to that under Judicial Code § 266, considered supra in subdivision a of this section,[69] but creates a controlling distinction in that § 380a is inapplicable to attacks on administrative regulations or orders.[70] The statute is limited to the particular class of cases there described.[71] It does not provide for a case where the validity of an act of congress is merely drawn in question, although that question be decided, but only for a case where there is an application for an interlocutory or permanent injunction to restrain the enforcement of an act of congress.[72] The statute is inapplicable unless the questions of constitutionality raised are substantial.[73]

c. Suits Involving United States and Federal Statute

The federal statute providing for direct appeal to the supreme court in any suit in a federal court to which the United States or its agent is a party in which any federal statute is held unconstitutional applies, however the question of constitutionality may arise, and does not require a three-judge court.

Act of August 24, 1937, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, providing that in any suit in any federal court to which the United States, or its agency, officer, or employee, as such, is a party, or in which the United States has intervened, and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress, an appeal may be taken directly to the supreme court, applies, however the question of constitutionality may arise, provided the United States is or has become a party and the decision is against the validity of the act. The statute does not require a court of three judges, and no provision is made for a direct appeal to the supreme court if the decision is in favor of the constitutionality of the act.[74]

d. Earlier Statutes

Under the provisions of Judicial Code § 238, prior to its amendment by the Act of February 13, 1925, a direct appeal to the supreme court was permitted in cases involving the construction or application of the constitution of the United States, the constitutionality of federal statutes, or the validity of the constitution or laws of a state, as against a claim of violation of the federal Constitution.

Under Judicial Code § 238, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345, prior to its amendment by the Act of February 13, 1925, a direct appeal could be taken to the supreme court from the district courts in any case that involved the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States; in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States was drawn in question; and in any case in which the constitution or law of a state was claimed to be in contravention of the constitution of the United States.[75] The amending act made no broad provision for direct appeal in such cases, however, and specifically provided that appeal could be taken as provided therein, and not otherwise; hence direct appeals do not lie from the district court on constitutional questions except such as are considered supra § 220a–c.

§ 221. Where Validity or Construction of Treaties Involved

Under Judicial Code § 238, prior to its amendment in 1925, a direct appeal to the supreme court would lie in a case in which the validity or construction of a treaty of the United States was involved.

Under Judicial Code § 238, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345, prior to its amendment by the Act of February 13, 1925, an appeal or writ of error could be taken direct to the supreme court in any case in which the validity or construction of any treaty made under the authority of the United States was drawn in question.[76] The amending act made no provision for direct appeal in such cases, however, and specifically provided that appeal could be taken as provided therein, and not otherwise.

§ 222. Prize Cases

The Judicial Code formerly made provision for direct appeals from the district court to the supreme court in prize cases.

Prior to its amendment by the Act of February 13, 1925, Judicial Code § 238, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345, provided that appeals and writs of error could be taken from the district courts, direct to the supreme court from the final sentences and decrees in prize causes.[77] The amending act made no provision for direct appeal in such cases, however, and specifically provided that appeal could be taken as provided therein, and not otherwise; hence direct appeals from the district court in prize cases were abolished.

§ 223. Criminal Cases

Direct review by the supreme court of the judgment of district courts in criminal cases may be had only as authorized by the Criminal Appeals Act, which provides for review, in certain specified instances, of decisions adverse to the United States, and which, being an innovation in criminal jurisdiction, cannot be extended beyond its terms.

Under the express provision of the Criminal Appeals Act, 18 U.S.C.A. § 682, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345, for an appeal by or on behalf of the United States from the district courts to the supreme court in the instances specified in the statute, the supreme court will directly review a decision of the district court adverse to the United States where the trial court has quashed, set aside, or sustained a demurrer to, an indictment or any count thereof, and its decision was based on the invalidity or construction of the statute on which the indictment was founded,[78] or where the trial court has sustained a special plea in bar, and defendant has not been put in jeopardy.[79] The statute authorizing such appeals is constitutional,[80] but as far as it is an innovation in criminal jurisdiction in the classes of cases specified, it cannot be extended beyond its terms,[81] although its remedial character is entitled to due weight.[82] Thus, appeal does not lie from a judgment which rests on the mere deficiencies of the indictment as a pleading, as distinguished from a construction of the statute which underlies the indictment;[83] nor will an appeal lie in a case where the district court has considered the construction of the statute but has also rested its decision on the independent ground of a defect in pleading.[84] When the district court holds that the indictment, not merely because of some deficiency in pleading but with respect to the substance of the charge, does not allege a violation of the statute on which the indictment is founded, that is necessarily a construction of the statute.[85] A decision that facts alleged in the indictment were immaterial because of

Whether judgment dismissing information as barred by limitations was judgment sustaining special plea in bar must be determined by substance, not form. the unconstitutionality of the statute was not a construction of the indictment, but a ruling that it failed to state an offense in view of the act's invalidity.[86] A decision that the false claims statute does not apply to false representations made to obtain benefits under an invalid act was based on a construction of the false claims statute, so that the supreme court had jurisdiction of the appeal.[87]

The whole case is not open to review, but the review must be confined to the decisions enumerated in the statute.[88] The supreme court will not pass on the sufficiency and construction of the indictment,[89] but will accept the district court's interpretation of the indictment and confine its decision to the validity and construction of the statute on which the indictment was founded.[90] A point not specially considered or decided by the district court and not assigned as error by the government, but apparently raised and discussed for the first time on appeal, will not be discussed by the supreme court.[91]

In reversing the lower court's decision on the construction of the statute on which the indictment was based, the supreme court may leave it open to the trial court to pass on such of the grounds of demurrer as were not considered in the former ruling.[92] Where the district court sustained a demurrer to an indictment on the ground that a federal statute was inapplicable to the facts alleged in the indictment, but did not consider the applicability of another federal statute, the supreme court may remand the case for consideration by the court below of the applicability of such other statute.[93]

The Criminal Appeals Act is inapplicable to criminal cases tried in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, notwithstanding such court is designated as a court of the United States and invested with the same power and jurisdiction as federal district courts, such statute not impliedly repealing the appellate system created for the District of Columbia by the code thereof.[94]

Earlier statutes. Judicial Code § 238, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345, providing for direct review by the supreme court of judgments of district courts, excludes direct appeals except as therein provided, and hence the early statutes providing for such appeals in criminal cases are superseded as well as the practice provided for therein.[95]

§ 224. Judgments on Claims against United States

Judgments of the district courts in the exercise of the power conferred on them by the Tucker Act were formerly reviewable exclusively by the supreme court.

Judicial Code § 238, 28 U.S.C.A. § 345, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925, providing that a direct review by the supreme court of a judgment or decree of a district court may be had as therein provided and not otherwise, makes no provision with respect to judgments on claims against the United States. It was formerly held, however, that judgments of the district courts in the exercise of the power conferred on them by the Tucker Act, Judicial Code § 24 (20), 28 U.S.C.A. § 41 (20), to decide claims against the United States were reviewable directly and exclusively by the supreme court.[96]

4. REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF COURTS OF TERRITORIES AND OUTLYING POSSESSIONS

§ 225. In General

As a general rule the United States supreme court pays deference to the understanding of territorial courts on matters of local concern. Where a territory is admitted as a state while appellate proceedings from the territorial court are pending, the supreme court on reversal will remand the case to the state court rather than to the territorial court.

As a general rule the United States supreme court pays deference to the understanding of territorial courts on matters of local concern,[97] and it will not ordinarily review questions of practice in such courts where the practice followed was based on local procedure.[98] Where a territory is admitted as a state pending an appeal from the territorial court to the United States supreme court under a statute permitting a direct appeal, the latter court, on reversing, will remand the cause to the supreme court of the new state.[99] A judgment of a state court in a case transferred to it from a territorial court is not subject to review by the United States supreme court merely because the action was begun in a territorial court.[1] The majority of the decisions rendered by the United States supreme court on appeal from courts of territories which have since become states are no longer of such importance as to require extended consideration, and, therefore, they are merely cited or referred to in the footnote without further discussion.[2]

Direct appellate jurisdiction of decisions of the district court for the District of Alaska is vested in the circuit court of appeals rather than the United States supreme court under 28 U.S.C.A. § 225, but under 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a a direct appeal to the United States supreme court is permitted under certain circumstances where the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress.

Under 28 U.S.C.A. § 225, appellate jurisdiction of decisions of the district court for the District of Alaska, or any division thereof, in all cases, is vested in the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit, but under the Act of August 24, 1937 c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, an appeal may be taken directly to the United States supreme court in any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party, and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress, and, under c 754 § 5 of the Act, 50 U.S.St. at L. p 753, the term "court of the United States" is defined as including the courts of record of Alaska. Under early statutes no longer in force a direct review by the United States supreme court was permitted under certain prescribed circumstances.[3] Review by the supreme court of decisions of the circuit court of appeals generally is considered supra §§ 203, 204. Appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals, and the procedure therein, is considered infra §§ 287–301.

§ 227. Canal Zone

Under the federal statutes direct appellate jurisdiction of judgments and decrees of the United States district court for the District of the Canal Zone is vested in the circuit court of appeals rather than in the supreme court of the United States.

Appellate jurisdiction of the judgments and decrees of the United States district court for the District of the Canal Zone is vested in the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit under Judicial Code § 128, as amended, 28 U.S.C.A. § 225 and 48 U.S. C.A. § 1356, and such appellate jurisdiction, under the express provisions of the Act of September 21, 1922, c 370 § 3, 48 U.S.C.A. § 1356, is subject to the right of review by the supreme court of the United States as in other cases authorized by law. Under Judicial Code § 238, as amended January 28, 1915, a question of jurisdiction was appealable direct to the United States supreme court, but the Act of September 21, 1922 c 370 § 3, 48 U.S.C.A. § 1356, rendered Judicial Code § 238 inapplicable in this respect.[4]

Review by the supreme court of decisions of the circuit court of appeals generally is considered supra §§ 203, 204.

Appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals, and the procedure therein, is considered infra §§ 287–301.

§ 228. Hawaii and Puerto Rico

Under 28 U.S.C.A. § 225 the United States supreme court has no direct appellate jurisdiction of decisions of the supreme courts or district courts of Puerto Rico and Hawaii, but under 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, a direct appeal to the United States supreme court from courts of record of Puerto Rico and Hawaii is permitted under certain circumstances where the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress. In reviewing a case which has originated in the local courts the federal supreme court will, as a general rule, accept their construction of local statutes or their understanding on matters of local concern.

Under former statutes the United States supreme court had direct appellate jurisdiction of decisions rendered by the supreme courts of Puerto Rico and Hawaii.[5] The Act of February 13, 1925 c 229 § 13 abolished this direct appellate jurisdiction, and under other provisions of the Act of February 13, 1925 c 229, 28 U.S.C.A. § 225, the circuit court of appeals has been given jurisdiction of a direct review of the decisions of these courts under certain prescribed circumstances, and of the United States district courts for Hawaii and for Puerto Rico, but, as stated supra §§ 203, 204, the supreme court may in some cases review decisions of the circuit court of appeals. Under the Act of August 24, 1937 c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, an appeal may be taken directly to the United States supreme court in any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress, and, under c 754 § 5 of the Act, 50 U.S.St. at L. p 753, the term "court of the United States" is defined as including the courts of record of Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Review of decisions of district courts by the United States supreme court is considered in detail supra §§ 205–224. Appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals, and the procedure therein, is considered infra §§ 287–301.

The supreme court in reviewing a case which has originated in the courts of Puerto Rico or Hawaii is unwilling to overrule the local tribunals on matters of purely local concern unless the decisions are shown to be clearly wrong, and therefore, as a general rule, it will accept the construction of local statutes or the understanding on matters of local concern by the Puerto Rican[6] or Hawaiian[7] supreme court.

Taxing acts of Puerto Rico are purely "local" as respects disposition of federal supreme court to accept construction placed by local court on local statutes and to sustain such construction in the absence of clear and manifest error.—Sancho v. Yabucoa Sugar Co., Puerto Rico, 59 S.Ct. 626, 306 U.S. 505, 307 U.S. 613, 83 L.Ed. 946, reversing, C.C.A., Porto Rico Fertilizer Co. v. Sancho, 98 F.2d 398, certiorari granted Sancho v. Interpretation accepted by practice of community

Where the interpretation of Puerto Rican statutes by the Puerto Rican courts as permitting a judge other than the one specially designated by statute, but having jurisdiction of the class of cases, to take jurisdiction on submission of the particular case to him, has been accepted by the practice of the community, it should not be disturbed, except on an inescapable conclusion that it is wrong.—Diaz v. § 229. Philippine Islands

The United States supreme court has jurisdiction to review by certiorari under prescribed circumstances decisions of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands. As a general rule it will not overrule the local court's decisions on questions of local law, but under particular circumstances it will exercise its own independent judgment.

Under the Act of February 13, 1925 c 229 § 7, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349, and substantially identical provisions of earlier statutes,[8] the United States supreme court has been given appellate jurisdiction in any case in the supreme court of the Philippine Islands wherein the constitution or any statute or treaty of the United States is involved,[9] or wherein the value in controversy exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars,[10] or wherein the title or possession of real estate exceeding in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars is involved or brought in question,[11] on the petition of a party aggrieved by the final judgment or decree.[12] The reviewing power was formerly exercised through an appeal or writ of error,[13] but a review by writ of error or appeal is now prohibited, and the supreme court is authorized to require, by certiorari, that the cause be certified to it for review and determination with the same power and authority, and with like effect, as though brought up by writ of error or appeal.[14] The supreme court will not review a question which has become moot.[15]

12. Finality of judgment

A judgment of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands which directs the entry of judgment for plaintiff below, in accordance with its decision, but leaves to the lower court the judicial determination of the exact amount for which the judgment shall be entered, is not final for the purpose of seeking a review by the United States supreme court.—Martinez v. Suspension of Philippine senator

A question as to whether a Philippine senator was properly suspended and the jurisdiction of the Philippine supreme court to require the senate to rescind its resolution suspending the senator became moot where the period of suspension expired before the hearing in the United States supreme court.—Alejandrino v. Quezon, supra.

Incidental feature in case

Where an incidental feature of a case in which the main features have become moot does not present a proper subject for determination, or is except for cogent reasons, to overrule the decision of the Philippine supreme court on questions involving the interpretation of the local law and its application to particular facts,[16] but it is free to exercise its independent judgment, and it need not accept the local court's interpretation of the local law.[17] The supreme court will not show the same deference to the local court's interpretation of a local statute involving delicate international relations as to its judgment on purely local matters.[18]

§ 230. Virgin Islands

The United States supreme court has no direct appellate jurisdiction of decisions by the district court of the Virgin Islands.

Under 28 U.S.C.A. § 225, appellate jurisdiction of decisions by the district court of the Virgin Islands is vested in all cases in the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, and no direct appellate jurisdiction is vested in the United States supreme court. Review by the United States supreme court of decisions of the circuit court of appeals generally is considered supra §§ 203, 204. Appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals, and the procedure therein, is considered infra §§ 287–301.

5. Review of Decisions of Courts of District of Columbia

§ 231. Court of Appeals

Review by the United States supreme court of decisions of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia is considered infra §§ 232, 233. Certification of questions to the United States supreme court is considered generally supra § 202.

§ 232. —— By Appeal

Under specific provisions of the federal statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, the United States supreme court may review decisions of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia only by certiorari, but under 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, an appeal is permitted under certain circumstances where the decision is against the constitutionality of an act of congress.

The provisions of the Act of February 13, 1925 c 229 § 1, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, which relate specifically to review by the United States supreme court of decisions of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia, permit only a review by certiorari and they abolish all other methods of review not provided for therein. Under the former statute, Judicial Code § 250, a review by appeal or writ of error was permissible under certain prescribed circumstances which are considered in 25 Corpus Juris page 922 note 32–page 923 note 41,[19]

Local practice

On the question whether the original judgment creditors alone can sue on a judgment in favor of a trustee and the beneficiary, where a new trustee has been appointed and the judgment has been assigned to him, the supreme court will not go behind the local practice.—Kalanianaole v. Smithies, Hawaii, 33 S.Ct. 169, 226 U.S. 462, 57 L.Ed. 303.

Analogy as to construction by state court

"The suggestion has been made in argument that we should accept the construction put upon a statute of the Philippine Islands by their Supreme Court as we would the construction of a state court in passing upon the federal constitutionality of a state statute. The analogy is not complete. The Philippines are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States government, with complete power of legislation in Congress over them, and when the interpretation of a Philippine statute comes before us for review, we may, if there be need therefor, re-examine it for ourselves as the court of last resort on such a question."—Yu Cong Eng v. Trinidad, supra.

(2) On appeal or writ of error the supreme court may determine all questions presented by the record.—McGowan v. Parish, 35 S.Ct. 543, 237 U.S. 285, 59 L.Ed. 955, reversing 39 App.D.C. 184—Magruder v. Drury, 35 S.Ct. 77, 235 U.S. 106, 59 L.Ed. 151 reversing 37 App.D.C. 519.

(3) The supreme court may enter the judgment which should have been rendered by the court below.—Baker v. Warner, 34 S.Ct. 175, 231 U.S. 588, 58 L.Ed. 384, reversing 36 App.D.C. 493.

(4) Errors not of a fundamental character, which were not presented to the lower court for consideration, and which were waived, will not be considered on an appeal.—Magruder v. Drury, supra.

(5) A review can be had only in the case of a judgment or a decree which is final in its nature.—Baldwin Co. v. R. S. Howard Co., 41 S.Ct. 405, 256 U.S. 35, 65 L.Ed. 816, dismissing appeal and denying certiorari Howard Co. v. Baldwin Co., 48 App.D.C. 437—25 C.J. p 924 note 49.

and, under the limitations of the statute, a review by appeal or writ of error was not available in a case arising under the patent laws,[20] the copyright

(7) A decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, affirming and remanding a decree directing that two parcels of land separately covered by trust deeds be sold as an entirety or in parts, in the discretion of the trustees, is not final for the purpose of an appeal to the supreme court of the United States.—Warner v. Grayson, 26 S.Ct. 240, 200 U.S. 257, 50 L.Ed. 470, modifying 24 App.D.C. 55.

(8) Judgment of court of appeals, refusing jurisdiction of appeal from commissioner of patents, is not a "judicial judgment," reviewable by supreme court.—Postum Cereal Co. v. California Fig Nut Co., 47 S.Ct. 284, 272 U.S. 693, 71 L.Ed. 478, dismissing appeal 297 F. 544, 54 App.D.C. 285—48 C.J. p 162 note 64.

(9) An appeal will lie to the supreme court of the United States from a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia reserving a decree of the supreme court of the District for dissolution of a preliminary injunction and remanding the cause for entry of a permanent injunction.—Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. v. Manning, 22 S.Ct. 881, 186 U.S. 238, 46 L.Ed. 1144, reversing 18 App.D.C. 191.

(10) A writ of error, instead of an appeal, is the proper method to review a decision in a proceeding in substance an action at law.—Metropolitan R. Co. v. McFarland, 25 S. Ct. 28, 195 U.S. 322, 49 L.Ed. 219, affirming 20 App.D.C. 421.

(11) Writ of error is properly taken from decree of court of appeals of District of Columbia involving construction of federal statute.—U. S. ex rel. Norwegian Nitrogen Products Co. v. U. S. Tariff Commission, 47 S. Ct. 499, 274 U.S. 106, 71 L.Ed. 949, vacating 6 F.2d 491, 55 App.D.C. 366.

(12) Decree of court of appeals of District of Columbia, in action to enjoin the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office from issuing a patent to a certain person, on the ground that their determination to issue such patent was in violation of the Act of May 14, 1880, is appealable to the supreme court, under Judicial Code § 250 par 6.—Brady v. Work, 44 S.Ct. 168, 263 U.S. 435, 68 L.Ed. 375, affirming Brady v. Fall, 280 F. 1017, 52 App.D.C. 43.

(13) A writ of error to review a judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in proceeding involving the construction of the general statutes of the United States, applicable to the Naval Reserve Force and the retirement of its officers, is within the jurisdiction of the United States supreme court, under Judicial Code § 250 par 6.—Denby v. Berry, 44 S.Ct. 74, 263 U.S. 29, 68 L. Ed. 148, reversing 279 F. 317, 51 App. D.C. 335.

(14) Under Judicial Code § 250 subd. 6 the supreme court has appellate jurisdiction of suit against secretary of the interior, to enjoin him from canceling certain selection of lieu lands by railroad, involving construction of the Act of June 22, 1874.—Santa Fé Pac. R. Co. v. Work, 45 S.Ct. 400, 267 U.S. 511, 69 L.Ed. 764, affirming 295 F. 982, 54 App.D.C. 161.

(15) Mere assertion that construction or application of Constitution or federal laws is involved does not authorize supreme court to entertain appeal, it being court's duty to decline jurisdiction if record does not present substantial constitutional or statutory question, properly raised below.—Corrigan v. Buckley, 46 S.Ct. 521, 271 U.S. 323, 70 L.Ed. 969, dismissing appeal 299 F. 899, 55 App. D.C. 30.

(16) The constitutional validity of the building regulations of the District of Columbia, which by the Act of June 14, 1878 are given the effect of congressional legislation, was seasonably raised by request for charge at the trial in the supreme court of the District, and by proper assignment of error in the proceedings for review, so that the question can be reviewed by the United States supreme court under Judicial Code § 250.—Walker v. Gish, 43 S.Ct. 174, 260 U.S. 447, 67 L.Ed. 344, affirming 273 F. 366, 51 App.D.C. 4.

(17) Where court of appeals of the District of Columbia based dismissal of a bill for lack of jurisdiction on the construction of Trade-Mark Act § 9 and Rev.St. § 4915, under Judicial Code § 250 an appeal to United States supreme court was the proper remedy and petition for certiorari should be denied.—U. S. ex rel. Baldwin Co. v. Robertson, 44 S.Ct. 508, 265 U.S. 168, 68 L.Ed. 962, reversing Robertson v. U. S. ex rel. Baldwin Co., 287 F. 942, 52 App.D.C. 368.

(18) Judicial Code § 250, authorizing a review of final judgments of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in cases in which the jurisdiction of the trial court is in issue, is not limited to the jurisdiction of the trial court as a court of the United States, but embraces a suit by the United States to recover filled-in land on the Virginia side of the Potomac River claimed by defendant, by a plea to the jurisdiction, to be in the state of Virginia.—Marine Ry. & Coal Co. v. U. S., 42 S. Ct. 32, 257 U.S. 47, 66 L.Ed. 124, affirming 265 F. 437, 49 App.D.C. 285.

(19) An appeal in equity brings up the whole record.—Keller v. Potomac Electric Power Co., 43 S.Ct. 445, 261 U.S. 428, 67 L.Ed. 731, dismissing appeal Potomac Electric Power Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of District of Columbia, 276 F. 327, 51 App. D.C. 77.

(20) The statutes and rule requiring an assignment of errors to be filed with the transcript of record in the supreme court of the United States apply on appeal from the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.—Briscoe v. Rudolph, 31 S. Ct. 679, 221 U.S. 547, 55 L.Ed. 848, affirming Briscoe v. MacFarland, 32 App.D.C. 167—Columbia Heights Realty Co. v. Rudolph, 30 S.Ct. 581, 217 U.S. 547, 54 L.Ed. 877, 19 Ann. Cas. 854, affirming Columbia Heights Realty Co. v. MacFarland, 31 App.D. C. 112.

(21) Mandamus will not lie to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia to compel the settling and signing of a bill of exceptions that has not been prepared and presented within the time required by statute or rule of court.—Gordon v. Randle. D.C., 23 S.Ct. 635, 189 U.S. 417, 47 L.Ed. 875.

(22) In suit to restrain enforcement of order of rent commission of District of Columbia, cutting down apartment rents under the Act of Oct. 22, 1919 tit 2, continued in force by the Act of Aug. 24, 1921, reënacted by the Act of May 22, 1922, in which it was claimed that the emergency which justified enactment of statutes authorizing the commission to cut down rents had ceased to exist, the United States supreme court, on appeal from judgment of court of appeals of District of Columbia, affirming district supreme court's decree of dismissal, will reverse the judgment, to enable the supreme court of the District to ascertain the facts as to whether the emergency had ceased to exist, and the law had become inoperative by reason thereof, at time order was made, although the United States supreme court judicially knows that conditions are such that the law has ceased to operate at time of appeal.—Chastleton Corporation v. Sinclair, 44 S.Ct. 405, 264 U.S. 543, 68 L.Ed. 841, reversing 290 F. 348, 53 App.D.C. 373.

laws,[21] or the criminal laws.[22] Under the Act of August 24, 1937 c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, an appeal may be taken directly to the United States supreme court in any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress, and, under c 754 § 5 of the Act, 50 U.S.St. at L. p 753, the statute is expressly stated to include the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia.

§ 233. —— By Certiorari

The United States supreme court may review by certiorari judicial decisions of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia. It will not ordinarily review decisions which are based on statutes limited to the District or which declare the common law of the District, but it will grant the writ where the decision presents a question national in scope.

Under the Act of February 13, 1925 c 229 § 1, 28 U.S.C.A. § 347, jurisdiction is expressly conferred on the United States supreme court to review by certiorari cases from the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia. The United States supreme court will not ordinarily review on certiorari decisions of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia which are based on statutes limited in their operation to the District of Columbia or which declare the common law of the District,[23] but it will grant the writ where the decision presents a question national in scope.[24] A decision of the court of appeals which is administrative or advisory in nature rather than judicial, rendered on an appeal from an administrative body in accordance with a statute vesting the court of appeals with such jurisdiction, is not reviewable by the supreme court.[25] The supreme court will dispose of the case presented to it as warranted by the circumstances,[26] and it need not consider any question not raised by the petition for

Effect of denying writ
Supreme court's denial of writ of certiorari imports no expression of opinion on merits of case.—W. P. Brown & Sons Lumber Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., C.C.A.Ky., 82 F.2d 94, affirming, D.C., 7 F.Supp. 593, certiorari granted 57 S.Ct. 14, 299 U.S. 524, 81 L.Ed. 385, affirmed 57 S.Ct. 265, 299 U.S. 393, 81 L.Ed. 301.

26. Affirmance of decree
Decree, reversing order denying motions to dismiss bill for restoration of amounts of deposits, paid to defendants by bank receiver, as to one defendant, and affirming it as to other defendants, without prejudice to trial court's right to arrange order of trial of such suit and receiver's suit against latter defendants to recover assets alleged to have been illegally pledged or resulting preferential payments, will be affirmed, course of procedure being left for determination by trial court in exercise of sound discretion.—U. S. Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation v. Rhodes, 56 S.Ct. 517, 297 U.S. 383, 80 L.Ed. 733, affirming O'Connor v. Rhodes, 79 F.2d 146, 65 App.D.C. 21, certiorari granted 56 S.Ct. 249, 296 U.S. 568, 80 L.Ed. 401 and U. S. Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation v. Rhodes, 56 S.Ct. 249, 296 U.S. 568, 80 L.Ed. 401.

Remand for further proceedings
Supreme court, determining that district court abused its discretion in staying suits to enjoin enforcement of alleged unconstitutional Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 until determination of suit instituted in another district to test constitutionality of act and until supreme court's determination of any appeal therefrom, would not determine whether a stay to continue until decision by district court and then ending automatically would be moderate, in view of fact that, following stay order, facts in test case had been settled by stipulation, briefs had been prepared, and case had been argued on merits justifying expectation of decision within reasonable time, but would remand case to district court for reappraisal of facts and new exercise of discretion.—Landis v. North American Co., 57 S.Ct. 163, 299 U.S. 248, 81 L.Ed. 153, reversing North American Co. v. Landis, 85 F.2d 398, 66 App.D.C. 141, certiorari granted Landis v. North American Co., 57 S.Ct. 30, 299 U.S. 530, 81 L.Ed. 390—Landis v. American Water Works & Electric Co., 57 S.Ct. 163, 299 U.S. 248, 81 L.Ed. 153, reversing 85 F.2d 398, 66 App.D.C. 141, certiorari granted Landis v. American Water Works & Electric Co., 57 S.Ct. 30, 299 U.S. 530, 81 L.Ed. 390.

Conclusion of fact by court of appeals
The supreme court would not disturb conclusion of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia that federal communications commission's disavowal of alleged fact that commission used as evidence certain data and reports in commission's files, without permitting intervenor before the commission opportunity of inspecting them, was veracious and sufficient.—Federal Communications Commission v. Sanders Bros. Radio Station, 60 S.Ct. 693, 309 U.S. 470, 642, 84 L.Ed. 869, 1037, reversing Sanders Bros. Radio Station v. Federal Communications Commission, 106 F.2d 321, 70 App.D.C. 297, certiorari granted Federal Communications Commission v. Sanders Bros. Radio Station, 60 S.Ct. 294, 308 U.S. 546, 84 L.Ed. 460.

Presumption in favor of trial court's jurisdiction
On certiorari to review judgment affirming decree denying motion to dismiss suit, supreme court would be required to presume in favor of jurisdiction of trial court that plaintiffs might be able to prove allegations in support of right to maintain suit without joinder of United States as party defendant.—Ickes v. Fox, 57 S.Ct. 412, 300 U.S. 82, 81 L.Ed. 525, affirming 85 F.2d 294, 66 App.D.C. 128, certiorari granted 57 S.Ct. 36, 299 U.S. 528, 81 L.Ed. 388, and rehearing denied 57 S.Ct. 504, 300 U.S. 640, 81 L.Ed. 888—Ickes v. Parks, 57 S.Ct. 412, 300 U.S. 82, 81 L.Ed. 525, affirming 85 F.2d 294, 66 App.D.C. 128, certiorari granted 57 S.Ct. 36, 299 U.S. 528, 81 L.Ed. 388, and rehearing decertiorari.[27] Where the supreme court on certiorari has held contrary to the opinion of the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia and has remanded the case directly to the district court of the United States for the District of Columbia, the district court in subsequent proceedings must conform to the rulings of the supreme court.[28]

Former statute. A writ of certiorari was also provided for under the former statute, Judicial Code § 251.[29]

§ 234. District Court of United States

An appeal directly to the supreme court of the United States from the district court of the United States for the District of Columbia, formerly called supreme court of the District of Columbia, is permitted under circumstances in which a direct appeal from a district court of the United States is authorized by statute.

As stated infra § 325, the name of the supreme court of the District of Columbia has been changed to the district court of the United States for the District of Columbia under the Act of June 25, 1936, 49 U.S.St. at L. 1921 c 804. In a proceeding in which this District of Columbia court exercises the jurisdiction of a district court of the United States, an appeal directly to the supreme court of the United States may be had under circumstances in which a direct appeal from a district court of the United States is authorized by statute.[30] Thus an appeal must be taken directly to the United States supreme court in cases where an appeal under the Expediting Act of February 11, 1903, 15 U.S.C.A. § 29, would lie directly to the supreme court from a federal district court.[31] Under the provisions of 18 U.S.C.A. § 682 which permit an appeal directly to the United States supreme court under particular circumstances if the construction or validity of a federal statute is involved, an appeal cannot be so taken where the validity or construction of a federal statute is not involved,[32] or where the construction or validity of the statute involved has been adjudicated and upheld.[33] Under statutes no longer in force the United States supreme court had jurisdiction to review in direct appellate proceedings a decision of the supreme court of the District of Columbia if it involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, or if the amount in controversy exceeded the sum of five thousand dollars.[34]

Allowance of writ as establishing jurisdiction

The supreme court's inadvertent allowance of a writ of certiorari in a proceeding in which no question of jurisdiction was considered does not establish the jurisdiction of the court.—Baldwin Co. v. R. S. Howard Co., 41 S.Ct. 405, 256 U.S. 35, 65 L.Ed. 816, dismissing appeal and denying certiorari Howard Co. v. Baldwin Co., 48 App.D.C. 437.

Character of power to review by certiorari

"The words 'with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by writ of error or appeal to said Supreme Court' express the character of the power, not its conditions, as the power is granted only when a writ of error or appeal does not lie."—George A. Fuller Co. v. Otis El. Co., 38 S.Ct. 180, 181, 245 U.S. 489, 62 L.Ed. 422, reversing, 44 App.D.C. 287.

Finality of judgment

(1) To be reviewed by certiorari the judgment must be final.—Baldwin Co. v. R. S. Howard Co., 41 S. Ct. 405, 256 U.S. 35, 65 L.Ed. 816, dismissing appeal and denying certiorari Howard Co. v. Baldwin Co., 48 App.D.C. 437.

(2) The writ when issued to the court of appeals is not limited to cases in which final judgment has been entered, but only to cases in which the judgment when entered is final.—George A. Fuller Co. v. Otis El. Co., 38 S.Ct. 180, 245 U.S. 489, 62 L.Ed. 422, reversing 44 App.D.C. 287.

Necessity for exception

A writ of certiorari will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction where it appears that the question on which the certiorari was prayed was not before the court below, and is not open for consideration, because no exception concerning the ruling of the trial court on the subject was taken so as to preserve the right of review concerning it.—Tyrrell v. District of Columbia, 37 S.Ct. 361, 243 U.S. 1, 61 L.Ed. 557, dismissing certiorari 41 App.D.C. 463.

Order to appear as citation

An order to appellee to appear and argue the cause was held to be the legal equivalent of a citation for all the purposes of an appeal to the United States supreme court from the supreme court of the District of Columbia.—Dodge v. Knowles, D.C., 5 S.Ct. 1108, 114 U.S. 436, 29 L.Ed. 144, denying motions 5 S.Ct. 1197, 114 U.S. 430, 29 L.Ed. 296.

6. Review of Decisions of Other Federal and Military Courts

§ 235. Court of Claims

The general statute, Act of February 12, 1925, c 229 § 3, as amended by the Act of May 22, 1939 c 140, 28 U.S.C.A. § 288(b), provides for a review of a judgment or decree of the court of claims by certiorari, but there may be a right to a review by appeal under the Act of August 24, 1937, c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, or under private acts expressly granting the right. Findings of fact by the court of claims are held to be conclusive on the supreme court.

The United States supreme court's power to review decisions by the court of claims is subject to restrictions imposed by congress, and a party has no right to a review other than that which is granted by congress.[35] Under the Act of February 13, 1925 c 229 § 3, and the amendment thereto by the Act of May 22, 1939 c 140, 28 U.S.C.A. § 288(b), the United States supreme court may review the judgment or decree of the court of claims by certiorari on the petition of either party, with the same power and authority, and with like effect, as if the cause had been brought there by appeal. An earlier statute on the subject, Judicial Code §§ 242, 243, which was repealed by the Act of February 13, 1925, provided for an appeal under certain prescribed circumstances.[36] A judgment of the court of claims rendered before the statute abolishing appeals became effective was held not appealable where a motion for new trial was made subsequent to the time the statute took effect.[37] On certiorari from the supreme court to the court of claims the record must include the pleadings, findings, and judgment, to-

Fraud on United States

There is no right to have reviewed a decision of the court of claims as to whether a new trial shall be granted on the motion of the United States under Judicial Code § 175, 28 U.S.C.A. § 282, on the grounds that a fraud, wrong, or injustice has been done the United States, since no such right is granted.—Pocono Pines Assembly Hotels Co. v. Decisions as to particular matters under earlier statute

(1) The statute authorizing appeals from court of claims does not extend to interlocutory orders.—Standard Steel Car Co. v. U. S., 61 Ct.Cl. 391.

(2) An order of the United States court of claims, on motion of claimant for substitution of attorneys, allowing such a substitution but imposing conditions, is not a final judgment from which claimant can appeal to the supreme court.—Ex parte Desmare, 9 Ct.Cl. 1.

(3) Order of court of claims, refusing a new trial and request for amended findings, is not appealable.—Luckenbach S. S. Co. v. U. S., 47 S.Ct. 186, 272 U.S. 533, 71 L.Ed. 394, affirming 59 Ct.Cl. 628.

(4) An appeal which is filed pending disposition of a motion for a new trial and amended findings is not a nullity because of prematurity.—Luckenbach S. S. Co. v. U. S., supra.

(5) The rules of the supreme court relating to appeals from court of claims provide what shall be incorporated in the record on appeal: "A finding of the Court of Claims of the facts in the case established by the evidence, in the nature of a special verdict, but not the evidence establishing them"—and they do not contemplate the inclusion therein of "exceptions" filed to such findings.—Gulf Refining Co. v. U. S., 59 Ct.Cl. 104.

(6) The rules of the supreme court require the court of claims to make findings of fact from the evidence submitted, which must be sent up as part of the record on appeal, but there is no rule requiring exceptions to such evidence to be made a part of such record on appeal.—Gulf Refining Co. v. U. S., 58 Ct.Cl. 559.

(7) The supreme court will not consider questions not raised in the court below.—Hathaway v. U. S., 39 S.Ct. 346, 249 U.S. 460, 63 L.Ed. 707, affirming 52 Ct.Cl. 267.

(8) Claimant may not press findings requested in court of claims, without showing that tender was in conformity with rules.—Luckenbach S. S. Co. v. U. S., 47 S.Ct. 186, 272 U.S. 533, 71 L.Ed. 394, affirming 59 Ct.Cl. 628.

(9) In action on canceled government contract, attack on validity of accepted award would not be considered on appeal, in absence of proof of loss or findings justifying petitioner's recovery.—Towar Cotton Mills v. U. S., 46 S.Ct. 211, 270 U.S. 375, 70 L.Ed. 639, affirming 59 Ct.Cl. 841.

(10) Where, in suit by executors to recover legacy taxes paid, no objection was made in court of claims to order restricting scope of the evidence or to the findings made, there may be no complaint in supreme court.—Woerishoffer v. U. S., 46 S.Ct. 33, 269 U.S. 102, 70 L.Ed. 180, affirming 58 Ct.Cl. 410.

(11) The amount claimed in the amended petition rather than that claimed in the original petition determines the amount in controversy for the purpose of conferring appellate jurisdiction on the supreme court.—Journal & Tribune Co. v. U. S., 41 S.Ct. 202, 254 U.S. 581, 65 L.Ed. 415, affirming 53 Ct.Cl. 612.

(12) An appeal under Judicial Code § 242 will be dismissed by reason of Judicial Code § 154, 28 U.S.C.A. § 260, where, pending the appeal, claimant brings suit in the district court on the same cause of action, even though the action in the other court would otherwise be barred by the statute of limitations. Corona Coal Co. v. U. S., 44 S.Ct. 156, 263 U.S. 537, 68 L.Ed. 431, dismissing appeals 57 Ct.Cl. 607, and 56 Ct.Cl. 390.

(13) Motions for leave to file motions for new trial and to amend findings after one motion for a new trial has been denied does not extend the time for appealing.—Morse v. U. S., 46 S.Ct. 241, 270 U.S. 151, 70 L.Ed. 518, dismissing appeal 59 Ct.Cl. 139, and rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 828, 295 U.S. 768, 79 L.Ed. 1709.

gether with the opinion, if any.[38] The findings to be included in the record must be in the nature of a special verdict and they must specifically set forth the ultimate facts.[39] An amended petition which has been filed in the court of claims after the expiration of the period of limitation and hence too late to bring in any additional cause of action or to change the grounds on which plaintiff rested its suit may nevertheless be considered on review to the extent that it gives plaintiff's statement of details of causes of action alleged in the original petition and for comparison with the court's special fact findings,[40] but items of claims in the amended petition which are outside the period covered by the allegations of the original petition and which are not shown by the findings to be within the period are required to be deducted from the judgment.[41] The time within which an application may be made for review in the supreme court under 28 U.S.C.A. § 350 which prescribes the period of limitation does not begin to run until after disposition of a motion for new trial seasonably filed and entertained.[42] Want of jurisdiction of the subject matter may be considered, and appropriate judgment given, at any stage of the proceedings.[43]

Under the Act of August 24, 1937 c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, an appeal may be taken directly to the United States supreme court in any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress, and, under c 754 § 5 of the Act, 50 U.S.St. at L. p 753, the term "court of the United States" is defined as including the court of claims.

Nature of review under special acts. A special act of congress which gives a right of appeal from the court of claims as in other cases gives a right of review only by certiorari and not by the technical appeal since the general statute provides only for review by certiorari.[44] A private jurisdictional act providing that either party may appeal from the court of claims to the supreme court "as of right" authorizes either party to take a technical appeal to the supreme court.[45] The determination of a claim by the court of claims under a special act providing for no mode of review is final and no appeal will lie therefrom.[46]

Findings of fact. In the review of cases brought in the court of claims under both general and private or special acts it has been held that the supreme court cannot reëxamine questions of fact decided by the court of claims and that such findings are conclusive,[47] although the supreme court may inquire whether subordinate or circumstantial findings made by the court of claims override its ultimate findings and show that the judgment in point of law is not sustainable.[48] It has likewise been held that the supreme court may not refer to the evidence[49] or to the opinion of the court of claims[50] for the purpose of eking out, controlling, or modifying the scope of findings which are unambiguous and leave no room for construction, but reference to the opinion of the court of claims[51] and to the pleadings[52] may be made to clarify the meaning of a finding otherwise in doubt. The Act of May 22, 1939 c 140, 28 U.S.C.A. § 288(b), specifically provides that the supreme court shall have authority to review, in addition to other questions of law, errors assigned to the effect that there is a lack of substantial evidence to sustain a finding of fact; that an ultimate finding or findings are not sustained by the findings of evidentiary or primary facts; or that there is a failure to make any finding of fact on a material issue. A complaint on appeal under a private act regarding the failure of the court of claims to make certain findings cannot be sustained where there is no indication that the court of claims did not consider facts which were embodied in the proposed findings.[53] The principle that judgment on a special verdict cannot be sustained unless the findings extend to all material issues governs in cases brought to the supreme court from the court of claims.[54]

It is not the function of the supreme court in reviewing judgments of the court of claims to make basic findings of fact,[55] and, when the court of claims fails to make findings on a material issue, it is proper to remand the case for such findings.[56] However, the absence of finding of ultimate facts by the court of claims does not require reversal or

Limitation to questions of law
Review by the supreme court of judgments of the court of claims is limited to questions of law.—U. S. v. Esnault-Pelterie, 58 S.Ct. 412, 303 U. S. 26, 82 L.Ed. 625, affirming Esnault-Pelterie v. U. Mixed question of law and fact
A finding of the court of claims is conclusive, notwithstanding it determines a mixed question of law and fact, unless the supreme court is able so to separate the question as to see clearly what and where the mistake of law is.—U. S. v. Esnault-Pelterie, 58 S.Ct. 412, 303 U.S. 26, 82 L.Ed. 625, affirming Esnault-Pelterie v. U. S., 84 Ct.Cl. 625, certiorari granted U. S. v. Fraud or mistake
The question of fraud or mistake in the execution of a contract on behalf of the United States, differing from proposals between the parties, is one of fact; a negative finding of the court is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed in the supreme court.—Clark v. U. S., 7 Ct.Cl. 32.

Validity and infringement of patent
In suit in court of claims for compensation for patent infringement, questions of validity and infringement are questions of fact.—U. S. v. Esnault-Pelterie, 58 S.Ct. 412, 303 U. remand of the cause if circumstantial facts as found are such that the ultimate fact follows as a necessary inference.[57] A motion to remand for amended findings will not be allowed where the findings are unambiguous and responsive to the issues.[58]

§ 236. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals

The United States supreme court has jurisdiction to review judgments of the court of customs and patent appeals as provided in the applicable statutes.

In accordance with the provisions of the federal statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 308, the United States supreme court has jurisdiction to review by certiorari judgments of the court of customs and patent appeals involving constitutional and other questions when properly presented.[59] Under the Act of August 24, 1937 c 754 § 2, 28 U.S.C.A. § 349a, an appeal may be taken directly to the United States supreme court in any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of congress, and, under c 754 § 5 of the Act, 50 U.S.St. at L. p 753, the term "court of the United States" is defined as including the court of customs and patent appeals.

§ 237. Military Tribunals

Proceedings of military tribunals are not subject to a direct review by certiorari by the United States supreme court.

The proceedings of military tribunals cannot be reviewed by the supreme court of the United States by certiorari;[60] but it has been held that a contention that accused was twice punished for the same offense by the sentence of any army court-martial, when raised in a trial court on an application for habeas corpus, may authorize an appeal to the supreme court of the United States.[61]

7. Review of Decisions of State Courts

§ 238. In General

Within the limits prescribed by acts of congress, the United States supreme court has appellate jurisdiction to review decisions of state courts.

As shown supra § 199, the appellate jurisdiction of the United States supreme court is derived from the federal Constitution, and such jurisdiction may be limited and regulated by acts of congress. As early as 1789, Act of September 24, 1789, 1 U.S.St. at L. c 20 § 25, the supreme court was given, by act of congress, authority to review decisions of the state courts of last resort in certain specified cases,[62] and this authority with various changes has been continued by congressional enactments[63] and is presently governed by the Act of February 13, 1925, Judicial Code § 237 as amended, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344.[64] The appellate power so conferred is supported by both the letter and the spirit of the Constitution.[65]

The statutory grant of appellate jurisdiction to the United States supreme court will be strictly construed.[66] The supreme court has no appellate jurisdiction whatever over the state courts with respect to matters not within the scope of the statutory grant,[67] even though by reason of the character or citizenship of the parties the action might have been brought in a federal court.[68] The fact that a state court in deciding a federal question erroneously declares that no federal question exists does not, however, preclude a review of its decision by the supreme court.[69]

"Federal question." A question the decision of which by the state court is reviewable on appeal, or by certiorari, is usually termed a "federal question,"[70] notwithstanding some hesitancy in one of the earlier cases as to this comprehensive use of the term.[71]

§ 239. Status of Court Rendering Judgment

The appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court of the United States over the decisions of state courts is limited to a review of the judgments of the highest court of the state in which a decision may be had.

Under the statute, now 28 U.S.C.A. § 344, the appellate jurisdiction of the United States supreme court over decisions of state courts is limited to a review of the judgments of the highest court of the state in which a decision could be had.[72] This does not, however, confine a review to the decisions of the highest court of a state, for if under the state law the decisions of a lower court are final in a particular class of cases the supreme court of the United States may review the judgments of that court in such cases.[73] Where the highest court of the state refuses to review the decision of an in-

What constitutes "court" of state

(1) Whether the decision was rendered by a "court" of the state depends on the status of the tribunal under state law.—Betts v. Brady, Md., 62 S.Ct. 1252, 316 U.S. 455, 86 L.Ed. 1595.

(2) An order of a state judge at chambers in a habeas corpus proceeding is not an order of a "court." —McKnight v. James, Ohio, 15 S.Ct. 248, 155 U.S. 685, 39 L.Ed. 310.

(3) Where chief judge of court of appeals of Maryland, who was the judge of that court from city of Baltimore, had authority to grant writ of habeas corpus, and petition for writ of habeas corpus was presented to him when he was not sitting in term time as member of court, his decision denying the relief sought constituted a judgment of a "court." —Betts v. Brady, supra.

Discretionary power of review in highest state court

If a discretionary power to review exists in the highest court of a state, the exercise of such discretion must be first invoked and refused, before the judgment of the lower court is final so as to be subject to review by the supreme court of the United States.—Matthews v. Huwe, Ohio, 46 S.Ct. 108, 269 U.S. 262, 70 L.Ed. 266—Stratton v. Stratton, Ohio, 36 S.Ct. 26, 239 U.S. 55, 60 L.Ed. 142.

Judgment by division of court reviewable by court en banc

A judgment rendered by division one of supreme court of Missouri affirming a decree which enjoined collection of taxes on Washington University's property, on ground that Missouri constitution and statutes as applied violated university's charter provisions for tax exemption and infringed contract clause of federal Constitution, was not that of the "highest court of a state in which a decision could be had" within Judicial Code restricting United States supreme court's authority to review decisions of state courts to those causes wherein such a judgment has been rendered, in view of provision of Missouri constitution and rule of supreme court of Missouri, providing for review by the court en banc of a decision by a division where a federal question is involved.—Gorman v. Washington University, 62 S.Ct. 962, 316 U.S. 98, 86 L.Ed. 1300, dismissing certiorari Washington University v. Gorman, 153 S.W.2d 35, 318 Mo. 310, certiorari granted Gorman v. Washington University, 62 S.Ct. 301, 314 U.S. 604, 86 L.Ed. 486.

Judgment of lower court cannot be reviewed, although it is in accordance with a decision of the highest court of the state on a former appeal and will necessarily be affirmed by the latter court.—Seagraves v. Wallace, C.C.A.Tex., 69 F.2d 163, certiorari denied Wallace v. Seagraves, 55 S.Ct. 80, 293 U.S. 569, 79 L.Ed. 668, rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 138, 293 U.S. 630, 79 L.Ed. 716—25 C.J. p 926 note 73 [b].

Or.—City of Portland v. McSparran, 129 P.2d 65.

25 C.J. p 926 notes 73 [b] (2), 74.

Last state tribunal to which cause could be brought for review constitutes the "highest court of a state in which a decision could be had" re-

ferior or intermediate court, the United States supreme court may review its judgment where a federal question is involved.[74] However, there has been no decision of the federal question in the highest court of the state in which a decision in the suit can be had, where the highest state court has dismissed an appeal in the suit because of a defect in the parties to such appeal,[75] or because the appeal to the highest court was taken without leave first obtained.[76]

§ 240. Final Character of Judgment

A judgment or decree of a state court which is not final is not reviewable by the United States supreme court.

Under the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344, authorizing and regulating reviews by the United States supreme court of decisions of state courts, the judgment or decree of the state court must be a final one.[77] However, a judgment rendered by the highest court in the state in which a decision could Finality of determination generally see supra § 201.

Finality as affected by state court rendering judgment see supra § 239.

Dependent on state law

Whether decision was a final judgment is to be determined in the light of applicable law of state.—Betts v. Brady, Md., 62 S.Ct. 1252, 316 U.S. 455, 86 L.Ed. 1595.

Tests of finality

(1) To give the United States supreme court appellate jurisdiction, the judgment or decree of a state court must terminate the litigation between the parties on the merits, so that, if there should be an affirmance, the court below would have nothing to do but execute the judgment or decree it has rendered.—Georgia Ry. & Power Co. v. Town of Decatur, 43 S.Ct. 613, 262 U.S. 432, 67 L.Ed. 1065, reversing 111 S.E. 911, 153 Ga. 329—3 C.J. p 586 note 29.

(2) The finality of a judgment of the highest court of the state is to be tested by the form of the judgment, and the federal supreme court cannot in determining its jurisdiction convert the judgment not on its face final to one final in character.—Bruce v. Tobin, 38 S.Ct. 7, 245 U.S. 18, 62 L.Ed. 123, denying certiorari 162 N.W. 933, 39 S.D. 64—Louisiana Nav. Co. v. be had is not deprived of its final character because it was rendered on an equal division of opinion among the judges;[78] and if the validity of a judgment of an inferior court is either affirmed or denied by the highest court in the state, by any form of decision, such decision will, if it involves a federal question, be subject to review by the supreme court.[79] The proceeding for a writ of prohibition is a distinct suit, see infra § 242, and the judgment finally disposing of it is a final judgment subject to review by the supreme court.[80]

Petition for rehearing. The mere right of either of the parties for a certain period of time to petition for a rehearing in the state appellate court does not affect the finality of the judgment.[81] However, a judgment cannot be regarded as final when Prorate Commission of California, D.C.Cal., 30 F.Supp. 937.

Affirmance and remand for further proceedings is not a final judgment.—Laclede Gas Light Co. v. Public Service Commission of Missouri, 58 S.Ct. 938, 304 U.S. 398, 82 L.Ed. 1422, dismissing appeal State ex rel. City of St. Louis v. Affirmance of order denying new trial

Where highest court of state affirmed order denying plaintiff's motion for new trial and plaintiff brought certiorari, writ was dismissed as improvidently granted, it appearing that no final judgment had been entered.—Fox Film Corporation v. Muller, 55 S.Ct. 444, 294 U.S. 696, 79 L.Ed. 1234, dismissing certiorari 255 N.W. 845, 192 Minn. 212, certiorari granted 55 S.Ct. 213, 293 U.S. 550, 79 L.Ed. 653, and followed in United Artists Corporation v. Miller, 255 N.W. 848, 192 Minn. 219, and Fox Film Corporation v. Muller, 260 N.W. 320, 194 Minn. 654, certiorari granted 55 S.Ct. 924, 295 U.S. 730, 79 L.Ed. 1680, certiorari dismissed 56 S.Ct. 183, 296 U.S. 207, 80 L.Ed. 158.

Reversal and remand for further proceedings is not a final judgment.—Great Western Tel. Co. v. Burnham, Wis., 16 S.Ct. 850, 162 U.S. 339, 40 L.Ed. 991—Seagraves v. Wallace, C.C.A.Tex., 69 F.2d 163, certiorari denied Wallace v. Seagraves, 55 S.Ct. 80, 293 U.S. 569, 79 L.Ed. 668, rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 138, 293 U.S. 630, 79 L.Ed. 716—25 C.J. p 927 note 78 [e].

Judgment reversing order granting preliminary injunction is not final.—Tippecanoe County v. Lucas, Ind., 93 U.S. 108, 23 L.Ed. 822—3 C.J. p 591 note 77 [a].

Order overruling motion to quash execution is not a final judgment, and a judgment of the highest court of a state, affirming such an order, is not reviewable.—Loeber v. Schroeder, Md., 13 S.Ct. 934, 149 U.S. 580, 37 L.Ed. 856.

Successive appeals

(1) Where, after affirmance of interlocutory order granting a temporary injunction and remand of the case, the trial court allowed amendments, ruled on a demurrer, impaneled a jury, directed a verdict, and entered a final decree, which was affirmed, the decree of affirmance was a final judgment, reviewable by the United States supreme court, although the state supreme court ruled that its former judgment was the law of the case and res judicata.—Georgia Ry. & Power Co. v. Town of Decatur, 43 S.Ct. 613, 262 U.S. 432, 67 L.Ed. 1065, reversing 111 S.E. 911, 153 Ga. 329.

25 C.J. p 927 note 78 [d].

Judgments or decrees held final

(1) The refusal of the highest court of a state to discharge defendant on habeas corpus is a "final judgment."—State ex rel. Covington v. Hughes, 102 So. 824, 157 La. 652.

(2) Where judgment of chief judge of court of appeals of Maryland who was the judge of that court from city of Baltimore denying relief sought in habeas corpus proceeding was final in sense that it was not reviewable by any other court of Maryland, but petitioner had not exhausted state remedies in the sense that in Maryland a prisoner may apply successively to one judge after another and to one court after another without exhausting his remedies, the denial of relief sought was a "final judgment by highest court of state" in which judgment could be had of the issue joined.—Betts v. Brady, Md., 62 S.Ct. 1252, 316 U.S. 455, 86 L.Ed. 1595.

(3) Judgment of state supreme court affirming refusal of lower court to continue temporary injunction and to grant permanent injunction is a final decree.—North Carolina R. Co. v. Story, 45 S.Ct. 531, 268 U.S. 288, 69 L.Ed. 959, reversing 121 S.E. 433, 187 N.C. 184.

(4) A decree in a suit by a shareholder against a national farm loan association directing the association to retire plaintiff's shares and giving plaintiff judgment against association for the par value thereof, when affirmed by the state court of appeals, was "final" so as to be reviewable by certiorari from the United States supreme court under the statute, although it also provided for a receivership because of the association's inability to pay the judgment.—Knox Nat. Farm Loan Ass'n v. Phillips, Ohio, 57 S.Ct. 418, 300 U.S. 194, 81 L.Ed. 599, 108 A.L.R. 738.

(5) Other judgments or decrees.—U. S. v. Knott, 56 S.Ct. 902, 298 U.S. 544, 80 L.Ed. 1321, 104 A.L.R. 741, reversing Kelly v. Knott, 163 So. 64, 120 Fla. 580, certiorari granted U. S. v. 81. Finality before expiration of time

A law providing that, within sixty days after the termination of a case by the state supreme court, "either party" may petition for rehearing, does not deprive the judgment of finality on the theory that the successful party, as well as the unsuccessful party, had until the expiration of such time to exercise the right to petition for rehearing.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Clift, 43 S.Ct. 126, 260 U.S. 316, 67 L.Ed. 283, af-

a petition for a rehearing is pending,[82] although when such petition is denied the judgment in the case becomes final for the purpose of review by the supreme court.[83]

§ 241. Citizenship of Parties and Amount in Dispute

The jurisdiction of the United States supreme court to review decisions of state courts is not dependent on the citizenship of the parties or the amount in dispute.

Under the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344, the citizenship of the parties is immaterial as affecting the jurisdiction of the United States supreme court to review a judgment or decree of a state court,[84] and the right of review is not dependent on the amount in dispute.[85]

§ 242. Nature of Proceeding in State Court

A "suit" within the statute conferring appellate jurisdiction on the United States supreme court of decisions of state courts includes any proceeding in a state court by which a person pursues a remedy afforded him by law.

The term "suit" in the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344, conferring on the United States supreme court appellate jurisdiction of decisions of state courts applies to any proceeding in a state court by which an individual pursues that remedy in a court of justice which the law affords him,[86] and includes a criminal prosecution,[87] a proceeding for mandamus[88] or for a writ of prohibition,[89] and habeas corpus proceedings.[90]

§ 243. Substantial Character of Federal Question

The decision of a state court involving a federal question will not be reviewed by the United States supreme court unless such question is real and substantial and a decision thereof is essential to the disposition of the issues presented.

In order that a decision of a state court may be subject to review by the United States supreme court on the ground that a federal question is involved, it is necessary that such question should be real and substantial,[91] and that a decision thereof should be essential to a disposition of the issues pre-

Voluntary submission of controversy by agreement

A judgment of a state court may be reviewed, notwithstanding the proceeding in which it was rendered was commenced, not by any compulsory process, but pursuant to a statute of the state authorizing a voluntary submission of the controversy by agreement of the parties.—Aldrich v. Ætna Ins. Co., N.Y., 8 Wall. 491, 19 L.Ed. 473.

Proceeding as legislative or judicial

On a motion to dismiss an appeal on the ground that the proceeding in the state supreme court on appeal from an order of the corporation commission was legislative and not a "suit," the supreme court of the United States should not decide that the state provided no means of obtaining judicial review of order of corporation commission, in absence of definite decision by the state supreme court to such effect.—Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. v. Questions settled by supreme court decisions. The mere fact that a federal question was involved does not authorize a review by the supreme court where the question has been decided by the supreme court in previous cases so that it cannot be regarded as an open one.[93] However, a review will not be denied on the ground that the federal question relied on to confer jurisdiction has been conclusively foreclosed by prior decisions of the supreme court, where analysis and exposition are necessary in order to make clear the decisive effect of such prior decisions on the issue presented, and there is some conflict in the opinions of the various state courts of last resort on the question, and a division of opinion in the court below.[94]

§ 244. Materiality and Decision of Federal Question

To authorize a review by the United States supreme court of a state court decision, it is necessary that a federal question shall have been decided by the state court or necessarily involved in its judgment.

In order to authorize a review by the United States supreme court of a decision of a state court, it is usually necessary that a federal question shall have been decided by the state court[95] or at least

Changes merely in form or method of procedure by which federal rights are finally adjudicated in state courts do not preclude review of adjudication by federal supreme court, provided case retains essentials of adversary proceeding involving real, not hypothetical, controversy finally determined by judgment below.—Nashville, C. & St. L. Order of state university suspending students

Scope of review see infra § 280.

State laws as rules of decision in federal courts see supra §§ 165–190.

Where decision of state court expressly rested on determination of federal question and not on inapplicability of state law, United States supreme court had jurisdiction.—Commonwealth of Virginia v. Imperial Coal Sales Co., 55 S.Ct. 12, 293 U.S. 15, 79 L.Ed. 171, reversing Commonwealth v. Imperial Coal Sales Co., 167 S.E. 268, 161 Va. 718, adhered to on rehearing 172 S.E. 927, 161 Va. 718, certiorari granted Commonwealth of Virginia v. State courts acting as federal courts

Where a federal question is involved in a case, state courts in passing on it are federal courts in addition to being state courts, their decisions are reviewable by the United States supreme court, and they are bound by that court's judgments.—Montgomery & Atlanta Motor Freight Lines v. Morris, Miss., 8 So.2d 502, overruling suggestion of error 7 So. 2d 826.

necessarily involved in the judgment.[96] Hence a judgment resting on grounds adequate to sustain it, independent of any federal question, is not reviewable,[97] even though the state court actually de-

Decision rendered after rehearing

The United States supreme court, on certiorari to review state supreme court's decision, will consider merely the decision of such court rendered after a rehearing, where the original opinion was withdrawn.—Grayson v. Harris, 45 S.Ct. 317, 267 U.S. 352, 69 L.Ed. 652, reversing Harris v. Grayson, 216 P. 446, 90 Okl. 147.

Matter not introduced in evidence in trial court

An official declaration of the commissariat for justice of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic as to intended effect of Soviet government's decrees nationalizing insurance business on funds of Russian insurance companies outside of Russia was properly before the New York court of appeals on appeal from judgment involving question whether property of New York branch of a Russian insurance company was outside scope of decrees, notwithstanding such declaration was not introduced in evidence on trial, since the declaration constituted "other written law" within New York statute authorizing court to consider, even though not introduced in evidence on trial, a printed copy of the statute or other written law of another state or of a foreign country.—U. Judgment resting on two grounds

The supreme court will not take jurisdiction where the judgment of the state court rests on two grounds, one of which does not involve a federal question, or where it does not appear on which of the two grounds the judgment was based, and the nonfederal ground is sufficient in itself to sustain the judgment.—Fox Film Corporation v. cided the federal question adversely to the party by whom the review is sought.[98]

On the other hand, whether the state court decided a federal question is, in itself, a federal question, which the supreme court determines from an examination of the record.[99] Further, whether the judgment of the state court was based on an adequate, substantial, nonfederal ground is a federal question.[1] A state court cannot, by resting its judgment on some ground of local or general law, defeat the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court of the United States, in a case where a federal question was so involved that its determination was necessary to the disposition of the issues,[2] especially where the federal right or immunity which was set up or claimed would, if recognized and enforced, require a judgment different from that actually rendered.[3] Where it appears that the decision did rest on a ground involving a federal question, a review is not precluded by the fact that other grounds are stated in the decision;[4] and the supreme court will review a federal question, although it was not put in issue by the pleadings or directly passed on in the opinion, where it is apparent both from the pleadings and the record that the decision in the

Uncertainty as to ground for decision

Nonfederal ground unsubstantial
Where the purported nonfederal ground put forward by the state court for its refusal to decide the federal question was unsubstantial and illusory, the supreme court may assume jurisdiction.—Lawrence v. 25 C.J. p 931 note 3.

Where nonfederal ground is so interwoven with other as not to be an independent matter, or is not of sufficient breadth to sustain the judgment without any decision of the other, the court has jurisdiction.—State Tax Commission of Utah v. Van Cott, 59 S.Ct. 605, 306 U.S. 511, 83 L.Ed. 950, vacating Van Cott v. State Tax Commission of Utah, 79 P. 2d 6, 95 Utah 43, certiorari granted State Tax Commission of Utah v. Weaver, 51 S.Ct. 252, 282 U.S. 765, 75 L.Ed. 690, affirming 227 N.W. 922, 119 Neb. 153.

state court could not have been reached except by disposing of such question.[5] A fortiori, where the decision is in fact based on grounds involving a federal question, a review cannot be precluded by the fact that it might have been based on other grounds.[6] A statement in the opinion of a state court that an attack on the validity of a state statute as being in contravention of the federal constitution was "by a proceeding unknown to our practice" does not mean that the court did not necessarily pass on the constitutional question.[7]

Decision on prior appeal in state court. The federal question relied on to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court cannot be said not to have been open for discussion or consideration in the state court because of a prior decision in the same case, which was the law of the case, where the state court did consider and decide such question when the case came before it the second time.[8]

§ 245. Correctness of Decision of State Court

The United States supreme court is not deprived of jurisdiction to review the decision of a state court because the federal question involved was correctly decided by the state court.

The power to decide whether a federal question was rightly disposed of by the state court involves the exercise of jurisdiction,[9] and hence the United States supreme court is not deprived of jurisdiction because the federal question was correctly decided by the state court.[10] Conversely, the mere fact that the decision of a state court may be erroneous does not, where no federal question is involved, authorize a review by the supreme court,[11] even though such decision may be contrary to previous decisions of the state court.[12]

§ 246. Nature of Questions Involved

The federal statute conferring appellate jurisdiction on the United States supreme court over decisions of state courts determines the questions which may be reviewed by the supreme court.

As is shown supra §§ 243, 244, appellate jurisdiction of the United States supreme court over decisions of state courts is confined to substantial federal questions decided by the state court. The particular questions which may be reviewed depend on the federal statute, now Act of February 13, 1925, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344, conferring appellate jurisdiction over decisions of state courts.[13] Under the statute a final judgment or decree of a state court may be reviewed by the supreme court of the United States where there is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of the United States;[14] the valid-

(1) A public body not duly organized or admitted into the Union is not a state, and cannot pass a statute within the meaning of the Judiciary Act, and therefore the supreme court has no jurisdiction to review a decision in which the validity of an act passed by such a body is drawn in question.—Scott v. Jones, Mich., 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181.

(2) Where the validity of a territorial act is drawn in question by a decision in the highest court of the state, the supreme court cannot review such decision. Messenger v. Mason, Iowa, 10 Wall. 507, 19 L.Ed. 1028—Dubuque Miners' Bank v. State of Iowa, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867.

What constitutes "statute"

(1) "A statute of any state," within this provision, includes any enactment from whatever source originating to which a state gives the force of law.—Hamilton v. Regents of University of California, 55 S.Ct. 197, 293 U.S. 245, 79 L.Ed. 343, affirming 28 P.2d 355, 219 Cal. 663, and rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 345, 293 U.S. 633, 79 L.Ed. 717—John P. King Mfg. Co. v. City Council of Augusta, 48 S. Ct. 489, 277 U.S. 100, 72 L.Ed. 801, affirming 138 S.E. 159, 164 Ga. 306—Reinman v. Little Rock, Ark., 35 S. Ct. 511, 237 U.S. 171, 59 L.Ed. 900.

(2) Orders of state boards, commissions, and the like, which are instrumentalities of the state, and whose orders are legislative in their nature, are statutes of the state.—Ex parte Williams, Neb., 48 S.Ct. 523, 277 U.S. 267, 72 L.Ed. 877—Sultan Ry. & Timber Co. v. Department of Labor and Industries of State of Washington, 48 S.Ct. 505, 277 U.S. 135, 72 L. Ed. 820, affirming Eclipse Mill Co. v. Department of Labor and Industries of Washington, 251 P. 130, 141 Wash. 172—Live Oak Water Users' Ass'n v. Railroad Commission of State of California, 46 S.Ct. 149, 269 U.S. 354, 70 L.Ed. 305, dismissing error 219 P. 65, 192 Cal. 132—Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Department of Public Works of Washington, 45 S.Ct. 412, 268 U.S. 39, 69 L.Ed. 837, reversing 217 P. 507, 125 Wash. 584—Bluefield Waterworks & Improvement Co. v. Public Service Commission of West Virginia, 43 S. Ct. 675, 262 U.S. 679, 67 L.Ed. 1176, reversing 110 S.E. 205, 89 W.Va. 736—25 C.J. p 932 note 16 [a] (2).

(3) On certiorari to review the constitutionality of an order made by the Wisconsin employment relations board acting under the state Employment Peace Act, which order was passed on by the supreme court of Wisconsin, the federal supreme court reviews the order not as an isolated, self-contained writing but as the order with the gloss of the supreme court of Wisconsin on it.—Hotel & Restaurant Employees' International Alliance, Local No. 122 v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, 62 S.Ct. 706, 315 U.S. 437, 86 L.Ed. 946, affirming 295 N.W. 634, 236 Wis. 329, denying rehearing 294 N.W. 632, 236 Wis. 329.

(4) Order of land grant state University making military training compulsory under state constitutional authority was "statute of any state" within Judicial Code and reviewable on appeal from judgment of highest state court holding that order was not repugnant to federal Constitution.—Hamilton v. Regents of University of California, 55 S.Ct. 197, 293 U.S. 245, 79 L.Ed. 343, affirming 28 P.2d 355, 219 Cal. 663, and rehearing denied 55 S.Ct. 345, 293 U.S. 633, 79 L.Ed. 717.

(5) Municipal ordinances as "statutes" see infra § 265.

Characterization of statute by state court

In determining the validity of a state statute under federal laws, the characterization of the statute by the state court, as distinguished from its interpretation, see infra § 261, is not binding on the supreme court.—Schuylkill Trust Co. v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 56 S.Ct. 31, 296 U.S. 113, 80 L.Ed. 91, reversing Commonwealth v. Schuylkill Trust Co., 173 A. 309, 315 Pa. 429—Federal Land Bank of New Orleans v. Crosland, 43 S.Ct. 385, 261 U.S. 374, 67 L.Ed. 703, reversing Crosland v. Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, 93 So. 7, 207 Ala. 456—Truax v. Corrigan, 42 S.Ct. 124, 257 U.S. 312, 66 L. Ed. 254, 27 A.L.R. 375, reversing 176 P. 570, 20 Ariz. 7.

Statute contrary to public policy

Contention that section of state Code is contrary to public policy does not present federal question.—Endicott-Johnson Corporation v. Encyclopedia Press, 45 S.Ct. 61, 266 U.S. 285, 69 L.Ed. 288, affirming Encyclopedia Press, Inc. v. Endicott-Johnson Corporation, 138 N.E. 474, 234 N.Y. 627, which affirms 191 N.Y.S. 924.

Authority exercised under state

(1) Under former statutes the supreme court had appellate jurisdiction to review decisions of the state court on writ of error "where is drawn in question the validity of . . . an authority exercised under, any state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of . . . their validity."—John P. King Mfg. Co. v. City Council of Augusta, 48 S.Ct. 489, 491, 277 U.S. 100, 72 L.Ed. 801, affirming 138 S.E. 159, 164 Ga. 306—Jett Bros. Distilling Co. v. City of Carrollton, Ky., 40 S. Ct. 255, 252 U.S. 1, 64 L.Ed. 421.

(2) A state court did not render a decision in favor of the authority exercised under any state where it merely decides a question as to the jurisdiction of a federal court, and where the authority of the state court to decide this matter is not drawn in question.—Abbott v. National Bank of Commerce, 20 S.Ct. 153, 175 U.S. 409, 44 L.Ed. 217, affirming 56 P. 376, 20 Wash. 552.

(3) The general authority of state courts was not contemplated by this provision.—Bethell v. Demaret, La., any title,[16] right,[17] privilege,[18] or immunity[19] is specially set up or claimed by either party[20] under the Constitution,[21] or any treaty[22] or any stat-

(4) Where a judgment in a petitory action for Louisiana land went for plaintiff on the ground that his predecessors obtained title by virtue of a sale by the state under the Swamp Land Act, defendant's contention that the judgment was erroneous, in that the land in suit at the time of the Swamp Land Act was in private hands and did not pass to the state, did not draw in question the validity of an authority exercised under state law, on the ground that it was repugnant to the Treaty of 1803 with France, and the laws of the United States within Jud.Code § 237, as amended by Act Sept. 6, 1916, Comp.St. § 1214, as to writs of error, since, if the lands in suit were not within the grant, the officials who conveyed them were not exercising an authority under the state.—New Orleans Land Co. v. Brott, 44 S.Ct. 29, 263 U.S. 97, 68 L.Ed. 187, error dismissed Brott v. New Orleans Land Co., 91 So. 653, 151 La. 134.

16. Compact between states sanctioned by congress involves a "federal title, right, privilege, or immunity" which, when specially set up or claimed in a state court, may be reviewed in the United States supreme court.—Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission, Pennsylvania-New Jersey v. Colburn, 60 S.Ct. 1039, 310 U.S. 419, 84 L.Ed. 1287, reversing Colburn v. Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission, 8 A.2d 563, 123 N.J.Law 197, affirming Klement v. Supp. 127, certiorari granted Hague v. Committee for Industrial Organization, 59 S.Ct. 486, 306 U.S. 624, 83 L.Ed. 1028.

State court's opinion is not final on claim arising under federal Constitution.—Brinkerhoff-Faris Trust & Savings Co. v. Hill, 50 S.Ct. 451, 281 U.S. 673, 74 L.Ed. 1107, reversing 19 S.W.2d 746, 323 Mo. 180, certiorari denied 50 S.Ct. 86, 280 U.S. 604, 74 L.Ed. 648, revoked 50 S.Ct. 152, 280 U.S. 550, 74 L.Ed. 608, and certiorari granted 50 S.Ct. 152, 280 U.S. 550, 74 L.Ed. 608, conformed to 42 S.W.2d 23, 328 Mo. 835.

Whether state court denied to rights asserted under local law protection guaranteed by federal Constitution is question on which United States supreme court's judgment may be invoked.—Broad River Power Co. v. State of South Carolina ex rel. Daniel, 50 S.Ct. 401, 281 U.S. 537, 74 L.Ed. 1023, dismissing certiorari State v. Ratification of amendment to constitution

The questions raised by mandamus proceeding in supreme court of Kansas by members of Kansas legislature, to compel a proper record of legislative action on proposed child labor amendment to the federal Constitution, constituted "federal questions," since those questions arose under federal constitutional provision conferring power to amend.—Coleman v. Miller, 59 S.Ct. 972, 307 U.S. 433, 83 L.Ed. 1385, 122 A.L.R. 695, affirming 71 P.2d 518, 146 Kan. 390, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 758, 303 U.S. 632, 82 L.Ed. 1092.

ute[23] of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States.

The mode of review of decisions of state courts, by appeal as of right or by certiorari in the discretion of the supreme court, is discussed infra § 272.

§ 247. —— Denial of Due Process of Law

A decision of a state court involving a claim that petitioner has been denied due process of law in violation of the federal Constitution may be reviewed by the United States supreme court.

A claim that a state has, in violation of the federal Constitution, deprived petitioner of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, or is attempting to do so, is sufficient to support a review by the United States supreme court of a decision of a state court,[24] unless such claim is frivolous, unsubstantial, or contrary to the law as established by the prior decisions of the supreme court.[25]

Assignment by foreign country to United States

The claim of the United States against assets of New York branch of a Russian insurance company, based on assignment to the United States by the Russian Soviet government of its claims against American nationals, raises a "federal question," and hence state court's determination of question is not conclusive.—U. S. v. Pink, 62 S.Ct. 552, 315 U.S. 203, 86 L.Ed. 796, reversing 32 N.E.2d 552, 284 N.Y. 555, affirming 20 N.Y.S.2d 665, 259 App.Div. 871, appeal granted 20 N.Y.S.2d 983, 259 App.Div. 886, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 960, 313 U.S. 553, 85 L.Ed. 1516.

Due process of law see Constitutional Law §§ 567–707.
State decisions relating to due process as binding federal courts see supra § 189 b.

Application of doctrine of res judicata as denying due process

Where the judgment of a state court ascribing to the judgment of another court the binding force and effect of res judicata is challenged for want of due process, it becomes the duty of the United States supreme court to examine the course of procedure in both litigations to ascertain whether the litigant whose rights have thus been adjudicated has been afforded such notice and opportunity to be heard as are requisite to the "due process of law" which the federal Constitution prescribes.—Hansberry v. Lee, 61 S.Ct. 115, 311 U.S. 32, 85 L.Ed. 22, 132 A.L.R. 741, reversing Lee v. Hansberry, 24 N.E. 2d 37, 372 Ill. 369, certiorari granted Hansberry v. Lee, 60 S.Ct. 889, 309 U.S. 652, 84 L.Ed. 1002.

Determination of existence, etc., of contract

(1) Where it becomes necessary to consider whether a state is depriving or attempting to deprive a railroad company of property without due process of law, in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, and the questions turn on the existence and terms of an asserted contract, the United States supreme court determines for itself whether there is a contract and what are its terms.—Railroad Commission of Texas v. Eastern Texas R. Co., Tex., 44 S.Ct. 247, 264 U.S. 79, 68 L.Ed. 569, affirming, D.C., State of Texas v. Eastern Texas R. Co., 283 F. 584.

(2) Determination as to impairment of obligation of contract see infra § 249.

Public use

(1) Whether a use is public or private is influenced by local conditions, and the supreme court, in enforcing the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, should keep in view the diversity of such conditions, and regard with great respect the judgments of state courts as to what should be deemed public uses.—Milheim v. Moffat Tunnel Improvement Dist., 43 S.Ct. 694, 262 U.S. 710, 67 L.Ed. 1194, affirming 211 P. 649, 72 Colo. 268—Rindge Co. v. The controlling test in respect of the right of review is not in the form of a state law or its declared purpose, but is to be found in the operation and effect of the law as applied and enforced by the state,[26] and where a state statute is so construed by a state court as to obviate any objection that it violates the guaranty of due process of law, such constitutional objection to the statute is not a ground for review by the supreme court.[27]

§ 248. —— Denial of Equal Protection of Law

The United States supreme court may review a decision of a state court involving a claim that petitioner has been denied the equal protection of the laws guaranteed him by the federal Constitution.

A claim that a state has, in violation of the federal Constitution, denied to petitioner the equal protection of the laws guaranteed him by the federal Constitution is sufficient to support review by the United States supreme court of a decision of a state court,[28] unless such claim is frivolous, unsubstantial, or contrary to the law as established by the prior decisions of the supreme court.[29]

§ 249. —— Impairment of Obligation of Contract

The decision of a state court involving the question of whether the obligation of a contract was impaired by a state law is reviewable by the United States supreme court.

The United States supreme court has jurisdiction to review a decision of a state court wherein the question involved was whether the obligation of a contract was impaired by a state law in violation of the federal Constitution,[30] unless the claim of impairment is frivolous, unsubstantial, or contrary to the law as established by prior decisions of the supreme court.[31] Since the contract clause of the federal Constitution is directed only against impairment by state legislation and not by judgments of state courts, see Constitutional Law § 280, the fact that a decision of a state court, where such decision does not expressly, or by necessary implication, give effect to a subsequent statute of the state, may impair or fail to give effect to a contract is not a sufficient ground for review thereof by the supreme court.[32] A mere change in judicial decision, even though it invalidates a contract previously sustained or impairs the validity of a contract made in reliance on prior decisions, is not such impairment as will sustain a review by the supreme court;[33] a change in the judicial construction of a statute presents no question of impairment which will support a review.[34]

Existence and construction of contract. The judgment of a state court is not subject to review by the United States supreme court where the state court has decided nothing more than that the contract claimed to be impaired is void and never had any legal existence[35] or that it does not confer the rights claimed to have been impaired;[36] but, where the judgment of the state court goes further and

Change on second appeal

A change in the decision of a state supreme court in construing deeds of trust from an interlocutory decision rendered on a previous appeal does not impair an obligation of contract contrary to the United States Constitution, and therefore does not support a review of the decision of the state supreme court.—Rooker v. gives effect to state legislation which might reasonably be claimed to impair the obligation of a contract which one party claims to exist, the supreme court has jurisdiction and may determine for itself the existence, validity, and construction of the alleged contract,[37] even though the decision of the state court was based entirely on the construction of the contract, without determining whether or not its obligation was impaired.[38] Much consideration is, however, accorded to the views of the state court of last resort as to the existence, validity, and construction of the contract.[39]

Ground for state decision obscure

Where the basis for bringing an action was a statute claimed to impair the obligation of a contract, and the trial court gave effect to the statute to some extent, and its judgment was affirmed by the supreme court, although it was plainly wrong, unless based on the statute, jurisdiction will not be declined by the federal supreme court, because the extent to which the state supreme court's decision was based on the statute is obscure.—Columbia Ry., Gas & Electric Co. v. § 250. —— Questions under Full Faith and Credit Clause of Constitution

A decision of a state court is reviewable by the United States supreme court where it involves a claim that the state court has refused to give full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of another state.

A claim that a state court has refused to give full faith and credit to the public acts and records and judicial proceedings of another state, as required by the federal Constitution, raises a federal question authorizing a review by the United States supreme court,[40] unless the claim is frivolous, unsubstantial, or contrary to the law as established by prior decisions of the supreme court.[41] A decision of a court of one state which merely construes a statute, or a public act or record, of another state, the validity of which is not assailed, is not reviewable on the ground that a question of full faith and credit is involved,[42] unless such construction is contrary to, or inconsistent with, a construction authoritatively established in such other state.[43]

Judgments of same state. The fact that a state court refuses to give a judgment rendered by a court of the same state its proper effect as an estoppel does not present a federal question reviewable by the supreme court.[44]

§ 251. —— Rights Claimed under Judgments or Proceedings of Federal Courts

A decision of a state court involving rights claimed by reason of a judgment of, or proceedings in, a federal court is reviewable by the United States supreme court.

A decision by a state court with respect to rights claimed by reason of a judgment of, or proceedings in, a federal court involves an authority exercised under the United States, and therefore may be reviewed by the United States supreme court,[45] un-

Res judicata under "full faith and credit" clause

Under the "full faith and credit" clause of the Constitution, the local doctrines of res judicata, generally speaking, become a part of national jurisprudence and, therefore, "federal questions" cognizable in the United States supreme court.—Riley v. New York Trust Co., Del., 62 S.Ct. 608, 315 U.S. 343, 86 L.Ed. 885, affirming New York Trust Co. v. Riley, 16 A.2d 772.

United States supreme court must determine for itself how far the full faith and credit clause demands the qualification or denial of rights asserted under the laws of one state, that of the forum, by the statutes and judicial proceedings of another state.—Pink v. A. A. A. Highway Express, 62 S.Ct. 241, 314 U.S. 201, 86 L.Ed. 152, 137 A.L.R. 957, affirming 13 S.E.2d 337, 191 Ga. 502, 137 A.L.R. 934, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 1096, 313 U.S. 555, 85 L.Ed. 1517, and rehearing denied 63 S.Ct. 477, 314 U.S. 716, 86 L.Ed. 570—Pacific Employers Ins. less the claim is frivolous, unsubstantial, or contrary to the law as established by prior decisions of the supreme court.[46] However, the mere fact that such rights may be in some way involved in, or connected with, proceedings in a state court is not of itself sufficient to authorize such review;[47] and so if it is admitted that the judgment of the federal court was valid and the proceedings regular, and the issue relates merely to the title to property as between defendant in execution, or the purchaser under it, and the party making the adverse claim, no federal question is presented;[48] or if the decision of the state court depends wholly on general rules of law or local statutes, no federal question is raised, although the opinion of the supreme court in a former suit is disregarded.[49]

§ 252. —— Constitutional Limitations on Power of Congress

No federal question which will sustain a review by the United States supreme court of a decision of a state court is involved in the contention that action under state authority violated provisions of the federal Constitution limiting the powers of congress or the federal government.

A contention that action under state authority involves a violation of provisions of the federal Constitution which are a limitation on the powers of congress or the federal government only is not sufficient to warrant a review of a decision of a state court by the United States supreme court.[50] This rule has been applied where the question presented was whether religious liberty was impaired by a state law,[51] but, as shown in Constitutional Law § 206, the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution now safeguards religious liberty from state interference.

§ 253. —— Right to Remove Case to Federal Court

The action of a state court on an application to remove a cause to a federal court usually may be reviewed by the United States supreme court.

The action of a state court on an application to remove a cause to a federal court usually involves a federal question, and may be reviewed by the United States supreme court.[52] However, where a federal court remands a removed cause and the state court thereupon proceeds to a judgment therein, which is affirmed by the court of last resort of the state, such court cannot be said to have decided against any federal right by reason of the proceedings for removal which will render its judgment subject to review by the supreme court, nor is the action of the federal court in remanding the cause

Guaranty of republican form of government

Whether or not the adoption of an initiative and referendum provision deprives a state of a republican form of government, under U.S.Const. art 4 § 4, is not a federal judicial question which will support a review by the supreme court of the United States.—Marshall v. Circumstances under which no real federal question involved

(1) Where a state court which denies a petition for removal is assured that the federal court will decide promptly the question of removability, it is better practice for the state court to await that decision before proceeding in the cause, but failure to do so is not a denial of a federal right if the cause was not removable.—Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 61 S.Ct. 715, 312 U.S. 563, 85 L.Ed. 1044, affirming Stevens v. Northway, 291 N.W. 211, 293 Mich. 31, certiorari granted Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. subject to review on proceedings to review the action of the state court.[53]

Where a cause removed to a federal court has been by it remanded to the state court, the denial by the state court of a second petition for removal presenting no different ground therefor is not a denial of a federal right.[54]

§ 254. —— Questions Relating to Public Lands

Questions decided by a state court relating to public lands of the United States, and titles derived from, or confirmed by, the federal government, may constitute federal questions reviewable by the United States supreme court.

Questions decided by a state court relating to the public lands of the United States, entries on, and rights therein, and titles derived from, or confirmed by, the United States, may be federal so as to be within the reviewing power of the United States supreme court,[55] but they are not necessarily of this character.[56] A decision based on the construction of apparently conflicting patents from a state for the land in dispute is not reviewable by the supreme court.[57]

§ 255. —— Questions Relating to Mines or Minerals

Decisions of state courts involving mines and minerals may present federal questions reviewable by the United States supreme court.

The mere fact that an action in a state court relates to mines, minerals, mining claims, or mining lands, does not of itself authorize a review by the United States supreme court,[58] but as rights in minerals or mining lands are based on acts of congress, federal questions authorizing such a review may be, and frequently are, involved in such litigation.[59]

§ 256. —— Questions Relating to Bankruptcy

The United States supreme court may review decisions of state courts involving the federal bankruptcy act.

Decisions of state courts involving the federal bankruptcy act are reviewable by the United States supreme court,[60] but such review is not necessarily

Post office site

The supreme court had jurisdiction of appeal from final judgment of New York court awarding damages for accidental death, where New York statute necessarily was sustained against contention that its application to the case violated constitutional provisions as to exclusive authority of United States over a post office site purchased with consent of New York.—James Stewart & Co. v. Sadrakula, supra.

Surrender of legislative power to federal government

(1) Whether state of Washington has yielded exclusive legislative authority to the federal government over land acquired by the United States in connection with the Grand Coulee dam and power plant project involves extent of jurisdiction of the United States and is a "federal question."—Silas Mason Co. v. Tax Commission of State of Washington, 58 S.Ct. 233, 302 U.S. 186, 82 L.Ed. 187, affirming Silas Mason Co. v. State Tax Commission, 61 P.2d 1269, 188 Wash. 98—Ryan v. State of Washington, 58 S.Ct. 233, 302 U.S. 186, 82 L.Ed. 187, affirming Ryan v. State, 61 P.2d 1276, 188 Wash. 115.

(2) The supreme court, if at liberty to construe Washington statute giving consent to acquisition of certain rights by United States, should give great weight to state court's views on intent and limitations of statute in granting consent and cession, and supreme court should accept that construction unless satisfied that it does violence to a federal right based on statute, defeating the reasonable anticipation and purpose of securing through operation of statute an essential and exclusive legislative authority for the federal government.—Silas Mason Co. v. Tax Commission of State of Washington, 58 S.Ct. 233, 302 U.S. 186, 82 L.Ed. 187, affirming Silas Mason Co. v. State Tax Commission, 61 P.2d 1269, 188 Wash. 98—Ryan v. State of Washington, 58 S.Ct. 233, 302 U.S. 186, 82 L.Ed. 187, affirming Ryan v. State, 61 P.2d 1276, 188 Wash. 115.

authorized by the mere fact that a decision is connected with a case of bankruptcy.[61]

§ 257. —— Questions Relating to Patents

A decision of a state court against a defendant's contention that the suit arises under the patent laws may be reviewed by the United States supreme court.

A decision of a state court against defendant's contention that the suit arises under the patent laws of which the federal court has exclusive jurisdiction, see supra § 32, is a decision against a claim of immunity under the laws of the United States and may be reviewed by the United States supreme court;[62] but the mere fact that a patent or patent right is concerned in litigation is not sufficient to authorize such review where no federal question is presented.[63]

§ 258. —— Questions Relating to National Banks

Decisions of state courts with reference to the rights, powers, duties, liabilities, etc. of national banks may be reviewed by the United States supreme court.

National banks, being created by act of congress, it follows that decisions of state courts with reference to the rights, powers, duties, liabilities, etc., of such banks, or their officers, directors, or stockholders, ordinarily involve federal questions and may be reviewed by the United States supreme court,[64] but it does not necessarily follow from the mere fact that a decision relates to national banks that it involves a federal question authorizing such review.[65]

§ 259. —— Questions Relating to Commerce and Navigable Waters

A decision of a state court may be reviewed by the United States supreme court where it involves a question relating to interstate commerce or navigable waters.

A question involving the authority of congress over commerce and navigable waters is federal in its nature so as to authorize a review by the United States supreme court of a decision of a state court,[66] although a review may be denied where the contention relied on is frivolous, unsubstantial, or contrary to the law as settled by previous decisions of the supreme court.[67]

Application of state statute prohibiting branch banking

Whether a state statute prohibiting the maintenance of branch banks applies to national banks is conclusively established by the state court decision.—First Nat. Bank in St. Louis v. § 260. —— Questions Relating to Taxation and Assessments Decisions of state courts relating to taxation and assessments are not reviewable by the United States supreme court unless a federal question is involved.

State decisions with relation to taxation and assessments usually turn on local rather than federal questions, and hence are not subject to review by the United States supreme court.[68] However, state decisions may be reviewed by the supreme court

Unsubstantial nature of question generally see supra § 243.

Fixing place of crossing of railroad tracks

Judgment of state supreme court directing entry of order fixing place of crossing of railroad spur tracks was not in conflict with federal law, whether proposed new track constituted mere spur or extension.—St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 53 S.Ct. 516, 289 U.S. 76, 77 L.Ed. 1042, affirming 49 S.W.2d 1054, 185 Ark. 824, certiorari granted 53 S.Ct. 95, 287 U.S. 589, 77 L.Ed. 515.

Prohibition of diving equipment to take sponges

If the state of Florida had power to prohibit the use of diving equipment in taking sponges from the Gulf of Mexico off the coast of Florida, the supreme court was not concerned from the standpoint of the federal Constitution with ruling of the state court as to extent of territorial waters, and question before the supreme court had to be considered in light of the total power the state possessed.—Skiriotes v. State of Florida, 61 S.Ct. 924, 313 U.S. 69, 85 L.Ed. 1193, affirming 197 So. 736, 144 Fla. 220, and rehearing denied 61 S.Ct. 1093, 313 U.S. 599, 85 L.Ed. 1552.

Stock-exchange membership tax

Whether a membership in the New York Stock Exchange owned by a resident of Ohio is subjected to taxation by the laws of Ohio is a question of state law, the affirmative answer to which, by the state court of last resort, whose decision is sought to be reviewed, is controlling on the United States supreme court.—Citizens' Nat. Meaning and effect of contract between a foreign gas corporation delivering gas to a Tennessee distributing company for distribution to Tennessee consumers and the company, so far as they established corporation's participation in, and ownership of, profits derived from the retail sale of gas, so as to render the corporation subject to Tennessee excise tax, were local questions conclusively settled by decision of Tennessee supreme court, save only as the United States supreme court, in performance of its duties to safeguard an asserted constitutional right under the commerce clause, might inquire whether the decision of the state question rested on a fair or substantial basis.—Memphis Natural Gas Co. v. Beeler, Tenn., 62 S.Ct. 857, 315 U.S. 649, 86 L.Ed. 1090.

Exemption on sale to army post exchanges

Where California supreme court concluded that sales of motor vehicle fuel to army post exchanges were not exempt from license tax under California statute making tax inapplicable to fuel sold to the federal government and rested conclusion on its determination concerning relationship between exchanges and the federal government, a relationship controlled by federal law, the court made a determination of a "federal question," and the United States supreme court was not bound by the determination.—Standard Oil Co. of California v. Johnson, 62 S.Ct. 1168, 316 U.S. 481, 86 L.Ed. 1611, reversing 119 P.2d 329, 19 Cal.2d 104.

Federal employee's exemption from state income tax

Where supreme court of Utah determined that salaries paid attorney for Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation, both federal agencies, were not subject to Utah income tax law but the court's opinion as a whole showed that the court felt constrained to conclude as it did because of the federal Constitution and the United States supreme court's prior adjudications of constitutional immunity, the United States supreme court was not deprived of appellate jurisdiction on ground that the state court's decision did not involve a "federal question."—State Tax Commission of Utah v. Van Cott, 59 S.Ct. 605, 306 U.S. 511, 83 L.Ed. 950, vacating Van Cott v. State Tax Commission of Utah 79 P.2d 6, 95 Utah 43, certiorari granted State Tax Commission of Utah v. Situs of property for taxation

Where asserted federal right turns on determination of question of situs of property for taxation, supreme court may analyze facts to apply law, and thus to ascertain whether conclusion of state court has adequate support in evidence.—Johnson Oil Refining Co. v. State of Oklahoma ex rel. Mitchell, 54 S.Ct. 152, 290 U.S. 158, 78 L.Ed. 238, reversing In re Johnson Oil-Refining Co.'s Property, 19 P.2d 168, 162 Okl. 185.

Tax act as applied to national banks

A decision of the supreme court of Colorado adjudging the Public Revenue Service Tax Act of Colorado to be valid as applied to a national bank, after the court had drawn the conclusion that manner of state taxation of national banks must accord with federal statute and must not interfere with federal functions, involved a "federal question" as to validity of statute as tested by Constitution and laws of the United States so as to give supreme court of the United States jurisdiction of appeal.—Colorado Nat. Bank of Denver v. Bedford, 60 S.Ct. 800, 310 U.S. 41, 84 L.Ed. 1067, affirming 98 P.2d 1120, 105 Colo. 373, following Bedford v. Colorado Nat. Bank of Denver, 91 P. 2d 469, 104 Colo. 311.

§ 261. —— Questions Relating to Citizenship

The United States supreme court may review a decision of a state court that a person is not a citizen of the United States under the federal Constitution and laws.

A decision of a state court that a person born in a foreign country and claiming to have become a citizen of the United States by the operation of the federal Constitution and laws is not such citizen, and therefore not eligible to the office of governor of a state, may be reviewed by the supreme court of the United States.[71]

§ 262. —— Questions Relating to Legal Tender

Decisions of state courts involving questions as to what is, or is not, legal tender usually are reviewable by the supreme court of the United States.

Questions in decisions of state courts as to what is, or is not, legal tender and a medium of payment usually involve the validity of a federal statute or the construction of a federal statute under which a right is claimed and are, therefore, reviewable by the United States supreme court.[72]

§ 263. —— Questions Arising under State Constitution

In the absence of a federal question, a decision of a state court with respect to a question arising under the state constitution will not be reviewed by the United States supreme court.

Where no federal question is involved, the United States supreme court cannot review a decision of a state court with respect to a question arising under the constitution of the state,[73] even though the federal Constitution contains a provision, limiting

Powers of municipality
The decision of the state supreme court that a municipality under the constitution and laws of the state had power to contract with electric railway company as to fares, in the absence of action by the state, is controlling on the United States supreme court.—Georgia Ry. & Power Co. v. Town of Decatur, 43 S.Ct. 613, 262 U.S. 432, 67 L.Ed. 1065, reversing 111 S.E. 911, 153 Ga. 329.

Ward & Gow, 132 N.E. 873, 231 N.Y. 525, which affirms 184 N.Y.S. 443, 193 App.Div. 557—Quong Ham Wah Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission of California, 41 S.Ct. 373, 255 U.S. 445, 65 L.Ed. 723, dismissing error 192 P. 1021, 184 Cal. 26, 12 A.L.R. 1190.

For purpose of deciding constitutionality of state statute under federal constitution supreme court is required to take the statute as though it read precisely as the state supreme court interpreted it, and any contention that the state court's construction was contrary to the terms of the statute is unavailing.—Allen-Bradley Local No. 1111, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, 62 S.Ct. 820, 315 U. S. 740, 86 L.Ed. 1154, affirming 295 N. W. 791, 237 Wis. 164—Hotel & Restaurant Employees' International Alliance, Local No. 122 v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, 62 S. Ct. 706, 315 U.S. 437, 86 L.Ed. 946, affirming 295 N.W. 634, 236 Wis. 329, denying rehearing 294 N.W. 632, 236 Wis. 329—State of Minnesota ex rel. Pearson v. Probate Court of Ramsey County, 60 S.Ct. 523, 309 U.S. 270, 84 L.Ed. 744, 126 A.L.R. 530, affirming 287 N.W. 297, 205 Minn. 545.

Constitutionality of state statute is to be decided on the construction of the state supreme court.—Midland Realty Co. v. Kansas City Power & Light Co., 57 S.Ct. 345, 300 U. S. 109, 81 L.Ed. 540, affirming Kansas City Power & Light Co. v. Midland Realty Co., 93 S.W.2d 954, 338 Mo. 1141, rehearing denied Midland Realty Co. v. Kansas City Power & Light Co., 57 S.Ct. 504, 300 U.S. 687, 81 L. Ed. 888.

Misconstruction of valid statute by state court gives the supreme court no jurisdiction.—Neblett v. Carpenter, 59 S.Ct. 170, 305 U.S. 297, 83 L. Ed. 182, affirming Carpenter v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of Cal., 74 P.2d 761, 10 Cal.2d 307, certiorari granted Neblett v. Carpenter, 58 S. Ct. 1039, 304 U.S. 555, 82 L.Ed. 1521, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 61, 305 U.S. 562, 83 L.Ed. 354, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 355, 305 U.S. 675, 83 L.Ed. 437—Morehead v. People of State of New York ex rel. Tipaldo, 56 S.Ct. 918, 298 U.S. 587, 80 L.Ed. 1347, 103 A.L.R. 1445, affirming People ex rel. Tipaldo v. Morehead, 200 N.E. 799, 270 N.Y. 233, reversing 282 N.Y.S. 576, 156 Misc. 522, certiorari granted Morehead v. People of State of New York ex rel. Tipaldo, 56 S.Ct. 670, 297 U.S. 702, 80 L.Ed. 991, rehearing denied 57 S.Ct. 4, 299 U.S. 619, 81 L.Ed. 456—Hebert v. State of Louisiana, La., 47 S.Ct. 103, 272 U.S. 312, 71 L.Ed. 270, 48 A.L.R. 1102—25 C.J. p 943 note 83 [b].

Several statutes construed together

(1) Conclusion of state supreme court that several statutes must be taken together is accepted as if written in state statutes themselves.—Gregg Dyeing Co. v. Query, 52 S.Ct. 631, 286 U.S. 472, 76 L.Ed. 1232, 84 A.L.R. 831, affirming 161 S.E. 588, 166 S.C. 117 and City of Greenville v. Query, 164 S.E. 841, 166 S.C. 281.

(2) The meaning derived by the highest state court by construing together several state statutes is as conclusive on the federal supreme court as though such legislation were embodied in a single act.

U.S.—International Harvester Co. v. Kentucky, 34 S.Ct. 853, 234 U.S. 216, 58 L.Ed. 1284, reversing 144 S.W. 1064, 146 S.W. 12, 147 Ky. 564, 147 Ky. 795, and 147 S.W. 1199, 148 Ky. 572.

Severability

(1) The task of determining the intention of the state legislature as to severability of an unconstitutional provision rests primarily on the state court, and its decision is conclusive on the federal supreme court.—Dorchy v. State of Kansas, 44 S.Ct. 323, 264 U.S. 286, 68 L.Ed. 686, reversing State v. Dorchy, 210 P. 352, 112 Kan. 235.

(2) Where supreme court held part of state license tax statute unconstitutional, operation of statutory saving clause was matter of state law.—Louis K. Liggett Co. v. Lee, 53 S.Ct. 481, 288 U.S. 517, 77 L.Ed. 929, 859 A.L.R. 699, reversing Louis K. Liggett Co. v. Amos, 141 So. 153, 104 Fla. 609, annulled Louis K. Liggett Co. v. Lee, 147 So. 463, 109 Fla. 477, conformed to Louis K. Liggett Co. v. Lee. 149 So. 8, 109 Fla. 477.

(3) Where New Hampshire statute, attacked on ground that it placed unreasonable restraint on freedom of speech, contained two provisions, the first relating to words or names addressed to another in a public place and the second referring to noises and exclamations, and the statute had been authoritatively construed by the highest court of New Hampshire which held that the two provisions were distinct, and that one could stand separately from the other, the United States supreme court would accept that construction of severability and limit its consideration to the first provision under which accused was convicted.—Chaplinsky v. State of New Hampshire, 62 S.Ct. 766, 315 U.S. 568, 86 L.Ed. 1031, affirming State v. Chaplinsky, 18 A.2d 754, 91 N.H. 310.

fect of such construction is to remove any question of repugnancy to the federal constitution.[76] However, where a state statute is so construed as to render it open to the objection of repugnancy to the federal constitution, there is presented a federal question authorizing a review.[77]

§ 265. —— Construction or Validity of Municipal Ordinances

A decision of a state court construing an ordinance of a municipality of the state or a decision as to the validity of an ordinance under state laws is not reviewable by the United States supreme court, although the court may review the validity of an ordinance under federal laws.

A decision of a state court construing an ordinance of a municipality of the state is not reviewable by the United States supreme court.[78] Whether an ordinance is valid, and the extent to which it is so, under the constitution and laws of the state is not subject to review by the supreme court.[79]

A decision of a state court where there is drawn in question the validity of a municipal ordinance on the ground of repugnancy to the constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States may be reviewed by the United States supreme court,[80] although the court may decline to review the decision where the question as to the validity of the ordinance is not sufficiently substantial.[81]

(4) In passing on constitutionality of order entered under the Wisconsin Employment Peace Act, which contained a broad severability clause, the supreme court was not under necessity of treating the act as an inseparable whole, but act was to be read as though it contained only those provisions which authorized the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board to enter orders of the specific type involved.—Allen-Bradley Local No. 1111, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, 62 S.Ct. 820, 315 U.S. 740, 86 L.Ed. 1154, affirming 295 N.W. 791, 237 Wis. 164.

When applicability of one state statute depends on construction of another such law, state court's action presents no federal question.

U.S.—Powell v. Brunswick County, Va., 14 S.Ct. 166, 150 U.S. 433, 37 L.Ed. 1134.

Overruling former case construing statute

State court has power to construe statute and to reëxamine and overrule former case construing such statute.—Brinkerhoff-Faris Trust & Savings Co. v. Hill, 50 S.Ct. 451, 281 U.S. 673, 74 L.Ed. 1107, reversing 19 S.W.2d 746, 323 Mo. 180, certiorari denied 50 S.Ct. 86, 280 U.S. 604, 74 L.Ed. 648, revoked 50 S.Ct. 152, 280 U.S. 550, 74 L.Ed. 608, and certiorari granted 50 S.Ct. 152, 280 U.S. 550, 74 L.Ed. 608, conformed to 42 S.W.2d 23, 328 Mo. 836.

Decision construing order of commission

Court's construction of commission's order is conclusive on United States supreme court.—Sutter Butte Canal Co. v. Railroad Commission of California, 49 S.Ct. 325, 279 U.S. 125, 73 L.Ed. 637, affirming 259 P. 937, 202 Cal. 179.

Absence of state decision

In advance of a decision by the state court construing a statute, the United States supreme court should not adopt a construction which would render the provision of doubtful validity.—State of Minnesota ex rel. Pearson v. Probate Court of Ramsey County, 60 S.Ct. 523, 309 U.S. 270, 84 L.Ed. 744, 126 A.L.R. 530, affirming 287 N.W. 297, 205 Minn. 545.

76. U.S.—Quong Ham Wah Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission of California, 41 S.Ct. 373, 255 U.S. 445, 65 L.Ed. 723, dismissing error 192 P. 1021, 184 Cal. 26, 12 A.L.R. 1190.

77. U.S.—Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City R. Co. v. Mississippi, 28 S.Ct. 650, 210 U.S. 187, 52 L.Ed. 1016, affirming 41 So. 259, 89 Miss. 724.

Supreme court exercises independent judgment in determining whether statute as construed and applied violates the federal Constitution.—Hanover Fire Ins. Co., v. Carr, 47 S.Ct. 179, 272 U.S. 494, 71 L.Ed. 372, 49 A.L.R. 713, reversing, 148 N.E. 23, 317 Ill. 366, and conformed to Hanover Fire Ins. Co. v. Harding, 158 N.E. 849, 327 Ill. 590—Ward & Gow v. Krinsky, 42 S.Ct. 529, 259 U.S. 503, 66 L.Ed. 1033, 28 A.L.R. 1207, affirming Krinsky v. Ward & Gow, 132 N.E. 873, 231 N.Y. 525, which affirms 184 N.Y.S. 443, 193 App.Div. 557.

Ex post facto laws

Supreme court, in applying ex post facto prohibition of Constitution to state laws, accepts meaning ascribed to such laws by highest court of state, but will determine for itself from practical operation of laws as applied to case before court whether standards of punishment set up before and after commission of offense differ, and whether later standard is more onerous than earlier within meaning of constitutional prohibition.—Lindsey v. State of Washington, 57 S.Ct. 797, 301 U.S. 397, 81 L.Ed. 1182, reversing State v. Lindsey, 61 P.2d 293, 187 Wash. 364, certiorari granted Lindsey v. State of Washington, 57 S.Ct. 752, 300 U.S. 652, 81 L.Ed. 863.

80. U.S.—Lovell v. City of Griffin, Ga., 58 S.Ct. 666, 303 U.S. 444, 82 L.Ed. 949, reversing Lovell v. City of Griffin, 191 S.E. 152, 55 Ga.App. 609, vacated and conformed to 197 S.E. 347, 57 Ga.App. 901.

"Statute of any state"

(1) A municipal ordinance is a "statute of any state" within 28 U.S.C.A. § 344(a), providing for reviews of state court decisions by the supreme court.—John P. King Mfg. Co. v. City Council of Augusta, 48 S.Ct. 489, 277 U.S. 100, 72 L.Ed. 801, affirming 138 S.E. 159, 164 Ga. 306—Zucht v. King, 43 S.Ct. 24, 260 U.S. 174, 67 L.Ed. 194, dismissing error, Tex.Civ.App., 225 S.W. 267—25 C.J. p 932 note 16 [a] (3).

(2) What constitutes "statute of any state" generally see supra § 246.

Substantial character of federal question generally see supra § 243.

§ 266. —— Construction of Federal Statutes and Denial of Rights Thereunder

A decision of a state court denying a right asserted under a federal statute is reviewable by the United States supreme court.

A decision of a state court denying a right set up under a federal statute may be reviewed by the supreme court of the United States.[82] The construction of a federal statute presents a federal question which is determined by the supreme court in the exercise of its own independent judgment.[83] Where the disposition of a case by the state court depended on the construction of federal statutes and the opinion of the state court shows that the statutes were considered and federal rights asserted under them were denied, the supreme court may review the decision.[84]

§ 267. —— Jurisdiction of State Courts

A determination of a state court as to the jurisdiction of the courts of the state ordinarily is not reviewable by the United States supreme court.

Decisions of state courts respecting the jurisdiction of the courts of the state usually are not subject to review by the United States supreme court.[85] However, the decision of a state court may be reviewed where a federal question is involved.[86]

§ 268. —— Construction of Common Law

Unless some federal question is involved, the administration by the state court of the common law according to its own interpretation will not be reviewed by the United States supreme court.

The highest court of a state may administer the common law according to its own understanding and interpretation, without liability to a review in the United States supreme court, unless some right, title, immunity, or privilege, the creation of the federal power, has been asserted and denied.[87] A

86. Commerce clause of federal Constitution

A decision of a state court dismissing, on the ground that the suit was one against the state, a bill to enjoin a state oil inspector from enforcing a state inspection law, on the theory that such law, if applied to the oils in controversy, violates the commerce clause of the federal Constitution, gives effect to such law, and is reviewable.—General Oil Co. v. Crain, 28 S.Ct. 475, 209 U.S. 211, 52 L.Ed. 754, affirming 95 S.W. 824, 117 Tenn. 82, 121 Am.S.R. 967.

Want of jurisdiction of subject matter

In action in unlawful detainer in a justice court wherein it was contended that justices' court had no jurisdiction of the subject matter and that its decision was void under the Fourteenth Amendment, appellate jurisdiction was in the United States supreme court, since proceeding involved a "case" or "controversy" within U.S.Const. art 3 § 2.—Lambert v. Central Bank of Oakland, C.C.A. Cal., 85 F.2d 954, certiorari denied 57 S.Ct. 436, 300 U.S. 658, 81 L.Ed. 867.

§ 269. —— Questions of Pleading and Practice

Unless a federal question is involved, the United States supreme court will not review the decision of a state court on questions of pleading and practice under state laws.

Last clear chance doctrine
Supreme court was without jurisdiction to consider whether state court erred in applying doctrine of last clear chance in action for violation of Safety Appliance Act by traveler struck by train at highway crossing, since no federal question was involved, in that the right to enforce liability arising from breach of duty imposed by the act is derived from principles of common law and is not affected by the act.—Fairport, P. & E. R. Co. v. Meredith, 54 S. Ct. 826, 292 U.S. 589, 78 L.Ed. 1446, affirming 189 N.E. 10, 46 Ohio App. 457, certiorari granted 54 S.Ct. 564, 291 U.S. 657, 78 L.Ed. 1050.

Trial
(1) Determination of the state supreme court that respondents in mandamus to compel railroads to eliminate grade crossings are not entitled to jury trial will be accepted by the federal supreme court as a correct determination of the local law.—Southern Ry. Co. v. City of Durham, N.C., 45 S.Ct. 51, 266 U.S. 178, 69 L.Ed. 231, affirming City of Durham v. Southern R. Co., 117 S.E. 17, 185 N.C. 240.

(2) If federal power is invoked to set aside what a state regards as a fair trial, it must be plain that a federal right has been invaded.—Lisenba v. People of State of California, 62 S.Ct. 280, 314 U.S. 219, 86 L.Ed. 179, affirming People v. Lisenba, 94 P.2d 569, 14 Cal.2d 403, prior opinion 89 P.2d 39, affirmed 61 S.Ct. 832, 313 U.S. 537, 85 L.Ed. 1507, vacated 61 S.Ct. 956, 313 U.S. 597, 85 L.Ed. 1550, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 68, 311 U.S. 617, 85 L.Ed. 391, affirmed 62 S.Ct. 280, 314 U.S. 219, 86 L.Ed. 179.

Substitution of parties
U.S.—City of Boston v. Jackson, 43 S.Ct. 129, 260 U.S. 309, 67 L.Ed. 274, affirming City of Boston v. Treasurer and Receiver General, 130 N.E. 390, 237 Mass. 403.

Nature of remedy to be employed is a question for state determination, and a judgment of the state supreme court that a certain proceeding was appropriate is conclusive, unless it involves a denial of due process of law.—First Nat. Bank in St. Louis v. State of Missouri at inf. Barrett, 44 S.Ct. 213, 263 U.S. 640, 68 L.Ed. 486, affirming State v. First Nat. Bank of St. Louis, 249 S.W. 619, 297 Mo. 397, 30 A.L.R. 218.

Deficiency judgment in mortgage foreclosure
The requirement of state statute that the right to a deficiency judgment should be determined in mortgage foreclosure action as against one who was a party to that action raises no substantial federal question.—Honeyman v. Hanan, 58 S.Ct. 273, 302 U.S. 375, 82 L.Ed. 312, dismissing appeal 9 N.E.2d 970, 275 N.Y. 382, affirming 285 N.Y.S. 527, 246 App. Div. 781, reargument denied 285 N. Whether state court has obtained jurisdiction is generally a question involving procedure only and in such cases the United States supreme court will not review a decision of highest court of state.—Blaustein v. Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co., 297 N.Y.S. 539, 163 Misc. 749, affirmed, 296 N.Y.S. 996, 251 App. Div. 704.

Finality of judgment
(1) State supreme court's determination as to finality of a judgment will not be questioned by the supreme court of the United States.

struction, etc., of pleadings[90] ordinarily are not reviewable by the United States supreme court, even though the action is brought under a federal statute.[91]

On the other hand, when matters nominally of procedure are actually matters of substance which affect a federal right, the decision of the state court is subject to review.[92] Whether a pleading sets up a sufficient right of action or defense, grounded on the constitution or a law of the United States, is necessarily a question of federal law, and, where a case coming from a state court presents that question, the supreme court must determine for itself the sufficiency of the allegations displaying the right or defense, and is not concluded by the view taken by the state court.[93]

§ 270. —— Questions of Fact or Evidence

A decision of a state court with respect to a question of evidence will not be reviewed by the supreme court of the United States unless a federal question is involved.

The United States supreme court cannot ordinarily review a decision of a state court as to the propriety of taking or refusing to take judicial notice of a particular matter,[94] or the admissibility[95] or sufficiency[96] of evidence; nor is a mere inference of fact from the evidence subject to such review.[97]

On the other hand, where a federal question is involved, the supreme court may review a decision of a state court on a question pertaining to evidence.[98] A contention, in an action based on a federal statute, that there was no evidence showing liability thereunder presents a federal question, which may be reviewed by the supreme court,[99] and there is also a right of review where it is claimed that a state court admitted in evidence an instrument which was inadmissible under an act of congress because it was not sufficiently stamped.[1]

§ 271. Nature of Decision

The nature of the decision of the state court on a constitutional question is not as a rule determinative of the right to certiorari although it may be controlling as to the right to an appeal.

Formerly the nature of the decision rendered by the state court had an important bearing on the right to a review by the United States supreme court.[2] However, under the statute governing the jurisdiction of the supreme court on certiorari, the supreme court may exercise jurisdiction where the federal claim is sustained as well as where it is denied,[3] although, as is shown infra § 272, an appeal will not lie as a matter of right except where the decision is against the validity of a treaty or statute of the United States or in favor of the validity of a statute of a state attacked as repugnant to the constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States.

§ 272. Mode of Review

Decisions of state courts are reviewable in the United States supreme court by appeal or certiorari.

Decisions of state courts are reviewed by the United States supreme court in the manner provided for by statute.[4] Under the present statutes, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 344, 861a, 861b, review is by appeal or certiorari.[5] Prior to 1914, the jurisdiction of the supreme court to review the judgments and decrees of state courts could be exercised only by writ of error.[6] Review by certiorari was allowed by statute in 1914[7] and until 1928 review was had by means of either a writ of error or a certiorari.[8] In 1928 the writ of error was abolished by statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a, b and an appeal substituted therefor.[9]

Certiorari is granted or refused in the exercise of the court's discretion,[10] while an appeal (former-

98. Burden of proof
Where a discharge in bankruptcy was pleaded as a bar to recovery on plaintiff's judgment, the question of the burden of proving knowledge of the bankruptcy proceeding by a judgment creditor whose judgment was not scheduled is so connected with the substantive rights given to the respective parties by the statute, and so flows from the words of the statute, that the ruling thereon may be reviewed by the United States supreme court.—Hill v. ly writ of error) is allowed as of right where it appears that the case is of the class designated in the statute and that the federal question is a real and substantial one, and an open one in the supreme court.[11]

Appeal or certiorari. Under the statute, 28 U.S. C.A. §§ 344(a), 861a, a final judgment or decree of a state court may be reviewed by the United States supreme court on appeal where there is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of the United States, and the decision is against its validity; or where there is drawn in question the validity of a statute of any state, on the ground of its being repugnant to the constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of its validity.[12] Unless the case comes within the terms of this provision an appeal is not the proper mode of review.[13] An appeal is proper where the validity of a state statute as construed by the state court is drawn in question on the ground of its being repugnant to the federal constitution and the decision of the state court is in favor of its validity.[14] However, to sustain an appeal it is not enough that an appellant could have launched his attack on the validity of a state statute if he has failed to do so.[15]

Under the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344(b), review by certiorari may be had, in the court's discretion, where there is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of the United States; or where there is drawn in question the validity of a statute of any state on the ground of its being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States; or where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is specially set up or claimed by either party under the Constitution, or any treaty or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States; and the power to review by certiorari may be exercised by the supreme court as well where the federal claim is sustained as where it is denied.[16] Where the question is as to a right, title, privilege, or immunity claimed under the constitution, laws, or treaties of, or any commission held or authority exercised under, the United States, the decision, whether for or against the claim as-

Under prior statutes

(1) Formerly, where the federal question was as to the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, a judgment against the validity thereof could be reviewed only by writ of error, and a judgment in favor of such validity only by certiorari.—Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co. v. (2) Where the question was as to the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, a state, attacked as repugnant to the constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, a decision in favor of the validity thereof could be reviewed only by writ of error, and a decision against such validity only by certiorari.—First Nat. Judicial Code was intended to restrict obligatory appellate jurisdiction to a narrow class of cases, and to foreclose an appeal as of right whenever the prescribed conditions have not been rigorously fulfilled.—Memphis Natural Gas Co. v. Beeler, Tenn., 62 S.Ct. 857, 315 U.S. 649, 86 L.Ed. 1090.

Something more than a claim of a federal right is necessary. Appeal improvidently sought and allowed. Under the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 344(c), 861a, if an appeal (formerly writ of error) is improvidently sought and allowed where the proper mode of invoking a review is by a petition for certiorari, this alone shall not be a ground for dismissal, but the papers whereon the appeal was allowed shall be regarded and acted on as a petition for certiorari and as though duly presented to the supreme court at the time they were presented to the court or judge by whom the appeal was allowed, provided, where in such a case there appears to be no reasonable ground for granting a petition for certiorari, it shall be competent for the supreme court to adjudge to the respondent reasonable damages for his delay, and single or double costs.[19]

Compact between states

(1) Compact between states sanctioned by congress involves a "federal title, right, privilege, or immunity" which, when specially set up or claimed in a state court may be reviewed on certiorari.—Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission, Pennsylvania-New Jersey v. Colburn, N.J., 60 S.Ct. 1039, 310 U.S. 419, 84 L.Ed. 1287, reversing Colburn v. Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission, 8 A.2d 563, 123 N.J.Law 197, affirming Klement v. Colburn, 60 S.Ct. 386, 308 U.S. 549, 84 L.Ed. 462.

(2) The assent of congress to the compact does not make it a "treaty or statute of the United States" within Jud.Code § 237(a), 28 U.S.C.A. § 344(2), warranting a review by appeal.—Hinderlider v. La Plata River & Cherry Creek Ditch Co., 58 S.Ct. 803, 304 U.S. 92, 82 L.Ed. 1202, reversing 70 P.2d 849, 101 Colo. 73, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 55, 305 U.S. 668, 83 L.Ed. 433.

Defendants on denial of right of removal to federal court by state supreme court on appeal have remedy by certiorari from United States supreme court.—Jennings v. Southern Ry. Co., 150 S.E. 309, 152 S.C. 322.

Official interest
(1) A county treasurer has no such personal interest in the litigation as entitles him to a review in the federal supreme court of a judgment of a state court compelling him to account to a city under certain taxing statutes in the state, claimed by him to be unconstitutional.—Stewart v. Kansas City, 36 S.Ct. 15, 239 U.S. 14, 60 L.Ed. 120, dismissing error Kansas City v. Stewart, 136 P. 241, 90 Kan. 846, affirmed 140 P. 876, 92 Kan. 406.

(2) Other cases.—Smith v. Indiana, 24 S.Ct. 51, 191 U.S. 138, 48 L.Ed. 125, dismissing appeal 63 N.E. 25, 214, 64 N.E. 18, 158 Ind. 543—25 C.J. p 947 note 21 [a].

Members of state senate who voted against ratification of proposed child labor amendment to Federal Constitution, and who claimed that their votes were sufficient to prevent ratification, had such an interest in mandamus proceeding commenced by them and other legislators questioning validity of the legislative action as to give United States supreme court jurisdiction to review, on certiorari, adverse decision of Kansas supreme court, which had treated the legislators' interest as sufficient to justify it in entertaining and deciding federal questions raised.—Coleman v. Miller, 59 S.Ct. 972, 307 U.S. 433, 83 L.Ed. 1385, 122 A.L.R. 695, affirming 71 P.2d 518, 146 Kan. 390, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 758, 303 U.S. 632, 82 L.Ed. 1092.

Executor is entitled to a review of a decision of the supreme court of a state so construing a statute of the United States as to sustain a claim of creditors against the estate which he represents.—Briggs v. Walker, 19 S.Ct. 1, 171 U.S. 466, 43 L.Ed. 243, affirming 43 S.W. 479, 102 Ky. 359, 19 Ky.L. 419.

Expiration of term of office
Federal agent, after expiration of term of office, was without right to complain of judgment against him, or to invoke review by certiorari, and the fact that surety, jointly liable with federal agent for costs, joined in petition for certiorari after expiration of agent's term, did not prevent dismissal.—Davis v. Preston, 50 S. Ct. 171, 280 U.S. 406, 74 L.Ed. 514, dismissing certiorari 16 S.W.2d 117, 118 Tex. 303, certiorari granted 50 S. United States adversely affected
United States was not precluded from review of judgment denying it priority for debts due it as to securities deposited with state treasurer by insolvent surety company, on ground that it was not adversely affected, because entitled to be paid from surplus, where no order was entered directing payment of surplus to United States after payment of state creditors and it was not clear that surplus would satisfy claim of United States.—U. § 274. Raising Federal Question in State Court

To warrant a review by the United States supreme court of a decision of a state court it is ordinarily essential that a federal question have been raised in the state court.

It is not sufficient to warrant a review by the United States supreme court of a judgment of a state court that a federal question might have arisen in the case,[30] or that it was intended to raise it,[31] but ordinarily it is essential that such a question should have been actually raised in the state court.[32] Whether the federal question was in fact raised in the state court is itself a federal question to be resolved by the supreme court by an examination of the record.[33]

Showing that question is a federal one. A contention in the state court that there has been a violation of a constitutional guaranty which is contained in both the state and the federal constitutions does not raise a federal question where no reference to the federal Constitution is made, it being presumed in such case that the state constitution was intended.[34]

A party who has raised but one federal question in the state courts cannot, in the United States supreme court, argue, in addition thereto, another, not connected with it, not raised in any of the courts below, and not necessarily arising on the record, although the record discloses facts on which the question might have been raised.[35]

Time and mode of presenting question. Where a federal question has been actually considered and decided by the state court of last resort, the time at which or the method by which such question was presented is immaterial as bearing on the right to a review in the United States supreme court.[36]

Assignment of error in state supreme court, complaining of the re-

However, in order for a right of review to be fairly predicable on the refusal or omission of the state court to decide a federal question, the question must have been raised and presented at such time and in such manner as to bring it properly before the state court for consideration.[37] Where a party to an action in a state court specially claims a right under the Constitution or laws of the United States, the decision of the state court as to the sufficiency of the allegations to present such claim is not necessarily conclusive on the supreme court,[38] although it is well established that the decision of the state court as to whether or not the claim involving a federal right has been properly asserted in such court is binding on the supreme court when it is clear that such decision was rendered in good faith and not in a spirit of evasion for the purpose of defeating the federal right claimed.[39]

Presenting question in trial court. The reviewing power of the supreme court of the United States being confined to the judgments and decrees of the highest state court in which a decision could be had, see supra § 239, it follows that in the great majority of cases the decision which was brought up for review is one rendered on appeal from, or writ of error to, a lower court of the state, and as it is a rule of almost universal application that questions not raised in the trial court will not be considered on appeal, one who desires to save his right of review by the United States supreme court must raise the federal question on which he relies in the trial court,[40] and one who, on appeal or writ of error to a state court, raises a federal question not set up in the trial court, cannot ask a review by the supreme court of the United States in case the state appellate court declines or omits to consider such question.[41] If, however, a federal question is raised in the highest court of the state and there considered and passed on, the right of review by the United States supreme court exists, regardless of whether such question was raised in the trial court.[42]

fusal of the chancery court to hold that, whether an act of congress or the laws of Mississippi governed a sale under execution, the validity of the execution was a federal question, because the state statutes, if applicable, became federal statutes by adoption, under Rev.St. § 916, sufficiently raised the question whether § 916 conferred validity on the sale to authorize review of that question in the federal supreme court.—Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. City of Clarksdale, 42 S.Ct. 27, 257 U.S. 10, 66 L.Ed. 104, reversing, Miss., 81 So. 178.

Constitutional questions waived by appeal to intermediate court

Under 3 Starr & C.St.Annot.Ill. p 3114 par 89, where case involves constitutional question, it must be taken on error or appeal to the supreme court, and, if taken to the appellate court on other grounds, the constitutional questions are waived, and writ of error from United States supreme court to state supreme court did not lie to review decision refusing to hear constitutional questions because of such waiver, whether the constitutional questions involve state or federal Constitution.—Central Union Telephone Co. v. City of Edwardsville, 46 S.Ct. 90, 269 U.S. 190, 70 L. Ed. 229, dismissing error City of Edwardsville v. Central Union Telephone Co., 141 N.E. 206, 309 Ill. 482, affirming City of Edwardsville v. Central Union Telephone Co., 227 Ill. App. 424.

Validity of state statute

"There are various ways in which the validity of a state statute may be drawn in question on the ground that it is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. No particular form of words or phrases is essential, but only that the claim of invalidity and the ground therefor be brought to the attention of the state court with fair precision and in due time. And if the record as a whole shows either expressly or by clear intendment that this was done, the claim is to be regarded as having been adequately presented."—People of State of New York ex rel. Averments held sufficient

(1) Where Georgia executors, in their statement of claim to stock as against New York administrator with will annexed, alleged in Delaware interpleader proceedings that Georgia courts had determined that testatrix was domiciled in Georgia, pleaded and proved exemplified copies of probate record of Georgia courts and applicable Georgia statutes governing domiciliary probate, and prayed issuance to them of new certificates of stock relying on the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution, the pleading and trial contention adequately raised the constitutional question.—Riley v. Question raised on petition for rehearing. It is not sufficient to raise the federal question for the first time in a petition for rehearing after judgment has been rendered by the state court,[43] unless the court entertains the motion and decides the question[44] or unless the first opportunity to present the question was on the motion for the rehearing.[45]

Question raised after decision and remand. Where a state court has decided a case on appeal and remanded it, a federal question raised for the first time after such decision, but not considered on a second appeal, does not warrant a review by the supreme court of the United States.[46]

Question raised on petition for writ of error. It was held that no jurisdiction to review existed where the federal question was raised for the first time in the petition for a writ of error after final judgment in the state court.[47]

Presentation held not timely

In prosecution under statute for attempt to incite insurrection, where trial court instructed jury to acquit unless evidence indicated that defendant's advocacy would be acted on immediately, and state supreme court ruled that conviction was proper if defendant intended insurrection to happen merely within reasonable time, contention first raised on motion for rehearing that statute as construed by state supreme court violated due process clause of Fourteenth Amendment was not timely presented, requiring dismissal of appeal, defendant being bound to anticipate probability of ruling similar to that made over one year previously in another case construing same statute, and holding that state may suppress threatened danger in its incipiency.—Herndon v. State of Georgia, 55 S.Ct. 794, 295 U.S. 441, 79 L.Ed. 1530, dismissing appeal Herndon v. State, 174 S.E. 597, 178 Ga. 832, rehearing denied 176 S.E. 620, 179 Ga. 597, and rehearing denied Herndon v. proper parties on review of a judgment of a state court by the United States supreme court.[48]

Joint or separate appeal. Where a joint judgment has been rendered against two or more parties in the state court, one of them, alone, is not entitled to a review by the United States supreme court unless there has been a proper summons and severance.[49]

Addition or substitution of parties. After the expiration of the period within which an appeal to the supreme court must be taken, a person will not be permitted to become a party to the appeal.[50] Present members of a state board of election commissioners which, under the statute, is a continuing board, might, it was held, be substituted as plaintiffs in error on a writ to review a judgment of a state court against their predecessors,[51] but where an official petitions for a writ of certiorari after the time for application has expired his successor in office may not be substituted.[52]

§ 276. Proceedings for Review in General

Proceedings for review of decisions of the United States supreme court are regulated by statute and rules of the supreme court.

An appeal to the United States supreme court is allowed as of right where the conditions prescribed by the statute are fulfilled.[53] Whether the proper mode of review is by appeal or certiorari has been discussed supra § 272. An application for an appeal must have been duly made within the time prescribed by statute after entry of the judgment or decree in the state court.[54] The application for, and allowance of, certiorari are discussed infra § 277.

§ 277. Allowance and Issuance of Certiorari

An application for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of a state court must be made in the manner and within the time prescribed by statute and rules of the United States supreme court.

The application for the writ is made to the United States supreme court.[55] The petition must afford adequate information concerning the record and essential facts and when the case on argument differs radically from the one tendered by the petition on which certiorari was granted the writ will be dismissed.[56] The writ is granted or refused in the exercise of the court's discretion.[57] The court may grant the writ because of the nature and importance of the question raised.[58]

48. State

(1) State is a proper party defendant in a writ of error (now appeal) sued out to review the judgment of a state court suspending collection of tolls until the roads were properly repaired, although the state was not a party to the proceeding leading up to the judgment.—Norfolk & S. Turnpike Co. v. Virginia, Va., 32 S.Ct. 828, 225 U.S. 264, 56 L.Ed. 1082.

(2) The United States supreme court did not lack jurisdiction to determine validity and effect of river compact between Colorado and New Mexico in suit by ditch company for a mandatory injunction against Colorado state engineer on ground that Colorado and New Mexico were not parties to suit and could not be made parties.—Hinderlider v. La Plata River & Cherry Creek Ditch Co., 58 S.Ct. 803, 304 U.S. 92, 82 L.Ed. 1202, reversing 70 P.2d 849, 101 Colo. 73, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 55, 305 U.S. 668, 83 L.Ed. 433.

Summons and severance generally see Appeal and Error § 394.

Form of judgment as controlling

Time for application. Under the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 350, a writ of certiorari must be applied for within three months after entry of the judgment or decree which it is sought to have reviewed, or the petition therefor cannot be entertained.[59] The running of the time within which application must be made is suspended by the seasonable filing in the state court of a petition for rehearing.[60] However, the period begins to run from the time of the denial or other final disposition of such petition,[61] and further suspension cannot be obtained by the mere presentation of a motion for leave to file a second request for rehearing.[62]

To what court directed. A writ of certiorari should be directed to the state court which holds the proceedings as part of its own records and exercises judicial power over them.[63] Where the highest court of the state has declined to review the judgment of an inferior or intermediate court, the writ is properly directed to the inferior or intermediate court, as the case may be.[64]

Stay pending, and after granting, application for writ. Under the statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 350, execution and enforcement of a judgment of a state court subject to review in the United States supreme court by certiorari may be stayed for a reasonable time to enable the party aggrieved to apply for and to obtain a writ of certiorari.[65] By its very terms the statute is limited to cases in which the judgment is subject to review by the supreme court on certiorari.[66] The statute permits a stay to be granted by a judge of the court rendering the judgment or decree as well as by a justice of the United States supreme court.[67] The application should first be addressed to one of the justices of the state court.[68]

67. State court which may order stay

(1) Where defendant's application to state supreme court for review of judgment of court of appeal was denied with statement that judgment of court of appeal upholding constitutionality of act was correct, court of appeal thereafter had jurisdiction to issue order staying execution of judgment to permit defendant to prepare appeal to supreme court of United States on ground that act was repugnant to federal Constitution.—State ex rel. Muslow v. Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation, La.App., 177 So. 476, denying motion 176 So. 686, affirmed Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. v. State of Louisiana ex rel. Muslow, 58 S.Ct. 832, 304 U.S. 197, 82 L.Ed. 1287, rehearing denied 58 S.Ct. 1044, 304 U. S. 589, 82 L.Ed. 1549.

(2) State court to which writ of certiorari directed see supra notes 63, 64.

68. U.S.—Magnum Import Co. v.

The suspension by the state court of its decree is a matter wholly within its discretion.[69] If it is made to appear that the case is one that would likely be taken up on certiorari and one in which the balance of convenience requires a suspension of its decree and a withholding of its mandate, the stay order should be granted.[70] If the state court refuses to stay its judgment, the United States supreme court will require an extraordinary showing before it will grant a stay of the decree pending application for certiorari and even after the supreme court has granted a writ of certiorari, it requires a clear case and decided balance of convenience before it will grant a stay.[71]

Effect of denying writ. The denial of a writ of certiorari by the supreme court to review the judgment of a state court imparts no expression on the merits of the case; affirmance of the judgment is not inferable from the denial of the writ.[72]

§ 278. Allowance and Issuance of Writ of Error

The writ of error has been abolished, but the various statutes regulating writ of error are applicable to appeal which is substituted for the writ.

The writ of error has been abolished by statute, Act of January 31, 1928, c 14 § 1, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a; Act of January 31, 1928, c 14 § 2, as amended Act of April 26, 1928, c 440 § 861b, but the various statutes regulating the right to a writ of error, defining the relief which may be had thereon, and prescribing the mode of exercising that right and of invoking such relief, including the provisions relating to costs, supersedeas, and mandate, are applicable to the appeal which is substituted for the writ of error.

A writ of error was allowed either by a justice of the supreme court of the United States or by the chief justice or judge or chancellor of the state court whose judgment it was sought to review.[73] An application for the writ was not allowable as a matter of right, but its allowance was determined from an examination of the record;[74] and if the decision of the state court was plainly right it was proper to deny the writ.[75]

Assignments of error. Assignments of error which simply alleged in various forms that the state court erred in its decision of the cause presented no federal question for consideration by the supreme court.[76] Where the record of a case in the state court was properly brought on writ of error be-

70. Fla.—Williams v. Keyes, supra.

Interpretation of state statute as affected by state constitution

The balance of convenience does not require suspension of state supreme court's judgment, on which writ of ouster in quo warranto proceeding was predicated, to enable respondents to apply to federal supreme court for writ of certiorari to review judgment, where ultimate question was interpretation of state statute as affected by section of state constitution repeatedly construed as authorizing thing complained of before respondents took office.—State ex rel. Gibbs v. Couch, 190 So. 818, 139 Fla. 709.

Security for stay

In the discretion of the court the stay may be granted without giving security, especially where the judgment is otherwise secured.—State ex rel. Muslow v. Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation, La.App., 177 So. 476, denying motion 176 So. 686, affirmed Arkansas Fuel Oil Co. v. State of Louisiana ex rel. Muslow, 58 S.Ct. 832, 304 U.S. 197, 82 L.Ed. 1287, rehearing denied 58 S.Ct. 1044, 304 U. S. 589, 82 L.Ed. 1549.

Vacation of order staying execution

An order staying execution of judgment to permit defendant to perfect appeal to supreme court of United States on ground that act, validity of which was upheld by court of appeal, was repugnant to federal Constitution, would not be vacated on ground that no federal question was shown by pleadings, since such issue was premature.—State ex rel. Muslow v. Louisiana Oil Refining Corporation, supra.

However, it has been stated that, while the denial does not mean that the supreme court approved of the opinion, it does mean that the decision was approved.—Bartosik v. Chicago River & Indiana R. Co., 266 Ill.App. 28, certiorari denied 53 S.Ct. 401, 288 U.S. 609, 77 L.Ed. 983.

Further, it has been said that where the federal question involved was before the supreme court on the petition for the writ the denial of the writ would appear to be conclusive in view of Supreme Court Rules, rule 38.—Campbell River Mills Co. v. Chicago, M., St. P. & P. R. Co., D. C.Wash., 42 F.2d 775, affirmed, C.C.A., Chicago, M. St. P. & P. R. Co. v. cause it involved the validity of a state statute under the federal constitution, see supra § 272, plaintiff in error could also assign any other ground of error based on an adverse decision on any right, title, privilege, or immunity claimed under federal laws although such assignment could have been made the basis only of a writ of certiorari.[77]

Time for issuing writ. The provision in the United States Revised Statutes that a writ of error from the supreme court to a state court must be brought within two years after the entry of the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed, with a saving clause for persons under disability, was not affected by the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891 or by the Judicial Code, the latter containing nothing on the subject; but in 1916 it was enacted that no writ of error to bring up any cause for review by the supreme court should be allowed or entertained unless duly applied for within three months after entry of the judgment or decree complained of.[78] Where there was a petition for a rehearing, the time did not begin to run until it was finally disposed of.[79]

To what court directed. A writ of error was directed to the state court which held the proceedings as part of its own records and exercised judicial power over them,[80] which was not necessarily the court that rendered the judgment.[81] If the highest state court had, after judgment, sent its record and judgment in accordance with the law of the state to an inferior court and directed entry of the judgment there, a writ of error could be sent either to the highest court or to the inferior court,[82] but, according to general practice, it was sent in such a case only to the inferior court,[83] and it was unnecessary and inadvisable to direct a writ of error to each court.[84] Where the writ of error was sued out before the highest court had thus remitted its judgment and record to the court below, the writ of error was directed to the former court.[85] If the law required the highest court to retain its records, and they were not in practice sent down to the inferior court, the writ of error could go only to the highest court.[86]

In those states, or in those cases, where the highest court did not have possession of the record, and did not render a judgment, but decided questions certified by the inferior courts, and merely issued a rescript directing the latter what judgment to render, the writ was addressed to the lower court.[87]

Security for costs. A party suing out a writ of error from the supreme court to a state court was required to give security for costs.[88]

Under Remington Comp.St.Wash. § 10, relating to "decisions" of the departments of the supreme court of Washington, and § 11, relating to hearings en banc, and providing for the issuance of a "judgment" on the decision of a department after a hearing en banc, such judgment of the court en banc, and not a decision of a department, was the "judgment" referred to in Act Sept. 6, 1916, § 6, Comp.St. § 1228a, requiring a writ of error in the United States supreme court to be taken within three months after entry of "judgment" complained of.—Puget Sound Power & Light Co. v. Citation. When a writ of error was issued by the supreme court to a state court, the citation was required to be signed by the chief justice or judge or chancellor of the court rendering the judgment or passing the decree complained of, or by a justice of the supreme court of the United States.[89] Making a writ of error to a state court and the citation thereon returnable "within thirty days from the date hereof" was a substantial compliance with the rule requiring writs and citations to be made returnable "not exceeding thirty days from the day of signing the citation."[90]

Effect of writ. The allowance of a writ of error by a justice of the United States supreme court was a prima facie showing that a meritorious federal question was involved.[91]

A writ of error from the supreme court to a state court removed the case to the supreme court,[92] and usually suspended the jurisdiction of the state court until it was again restored by some act of the supreme court.[93] The issuance of the writ of error did not, however, vacate the judgment of the state court, but such judgment continued in force until it was reversed.[94] The state court had no power to set aside[95] or pass on the regularity of[96] the writ. Where the order of the chief justice of a state court granting a writ of error from the federal supreme court merely followed the federal statute, petitioner's failure subsequently to comply with the statute by lodging a copy of the writ in the clerk's office for respondent's use did not affect the validity of the order that the writ should operate as a supersedeas.[97]

Where the case involved matters not involved in the writ of error, the state court could proceed with respect to such matters.[98]

Where a writ of error was allowed by the judge of a state supreme court to the United States supreme court, but no writ of error had been issued, the clerk of the state court was not bound to transmit to the United States supreme court a true copy of the record.[99]

§ 279. Necessity and Sufficiency of Showing of Jurisdiction

The facts necessary to give the United States supreme court jurisdiction to review a decision of a state court must either appear on the record or be necessarily deducible therefrom.

On review of a decision of a state court by the United States supreme court the appellant or petitioner has the burden to show affirmatively that the supreme court has jurisdiction.[1] The facts which give the United States supreme court juris-

Supersedeas

(1) Where a writ of error was issued by the supreme court of the United States to the supreme court of the state, its allowance did not supersede the judgment, but the taking of the bond and the supersedeas itself was the action of the supreme court which brought about the superseding of the judgment.—Larabee Flour Mills Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 116 P. 901, 85 Kan. 214.

(2) Where writ of error to United States supreme court, to review judgments of court of appeals on appeal from orphans' court, was sued out later than sixty days after last of judgments to be reviewed, it did not operate as a supersedeas or stay proceedings in the orphans' court.—Marx v. Reinecke, 127 A. 480, 146 Md. 603, error dismissed 46 S.Ct. 204, 270 U.S. 664, 70 L.Ed. 788.

(3) Attachment against deposed executor for failure to obey previous orders and turn over assets of estate will not be suspended pending writ of error sued out to the federal supreme court, taken more than sixty days after last of judgments to be reviewed, where he has persistently refused to comply with orders of orphans' court, notwithstanding granting of repeated indulgences.—Marx v. diction to review a decision of a state court should either appear on the record or be necessarily deducible therefrom.[2] Thus it must affirmatively appear from the record that a federal question was raised in the state court,[3] that its decision of the federal question was necessary to the determination of the cause,[4] and that the federal question was actually decided or that the judgment could not have been given without deciding it.[5] Whether these requirements have been met is itself a federal ques-

The fact that omissions in record on appeal from New York court of appeals in a case involving question whether "contract" clause of federal Constitution applied to antenuptial instrument executed by wife and to state statute applied thereto by state courts might have been due to statutory restriction on right of survivor to testify under New York law did not authorize United States supreme court to guess as to existence of a contract or its meaning under applicable rules of law.—Irving Trust Co. v. tion.[6] Nothing outside of the record ordinarily can be taken into consideration in determining whether the supreme court has jurisdiction to review a decision of a state court.[7] The fact that the chief justice of the highest state court allowed a writ of error from the supreme court of the United States does not cure the failure of the record to show that a federal question was raised and decided.[8]

However, if the grounds of a decision given by the highest state court are not shown by the record of such court, the record of the proceedings of the inferior court may be considered in connection therewith in order to ascertain the grounds of such decision;[9] and the opinion of the highest court may be examined, especially where by statute all decisions of such court are required to be in writing, stating the grounds of the decision, and to be recorded.[10]

Certificate or statement by state court. A certificate or statement by the state court or by the chief justice or a presiding justice of the state court that a federal question was raised and determined was not of itself sufficient to give jurisdiction to the supreme court to review a decision,[11] although it might be considered for the purpose of rendering a federal question, which was raised on the record in general and indefinite terms, more certain and specific.[12] It has been held that a recital of a certifi-

Additional evidence
On certiorari to review a judgment of the supreme court of Tennessee affirming a judgment dismissing an interstate railroad's suit to set aside the assessment of its property under Tennessee's ad valorem tax law, the United States supreme court could not receive evidence not offered in any of the tribunals below to show absence of equalization and violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.—Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Browning, 60 S.Ct. 968, 310 U.S. 362, 84 L.Ed. 1254, affirming 140 S.W.2d 781, 176 Tenn. 245, certiorari granted 60 S.Ct. 888, 309 U.S. 651, 84 L.Ed. 1002.

Reference to briefs and statements
Claim of jurisdiction cannot be sustained by reference to briefs and statements which are not a part of the record.—Lynch v. People of New York ex rel. Pierson, 55 S.Ct. 16, 293 U.S. 52, 79 L.Ed. 191, dismissing certiorari People ex rel. Pierson v. Lynch, 189 N.E. 684, 263 N.Y. 533, affirming Pierson v. cate of the highest state court, that it was made by order of the court itself to afford record evidence that a federal question raised by a petition for rehearing was adversely determined, justified treating such certificate as bringing into the record necessary proof of a federal question, authorizing review by the supreme court.[13]

Dismissal. The supreme court would dismiss a writ of error where it did not appear from the record that a question of the nature required to give it jurisdiction was involved, even though the jurisdictional question was not raised by either party,[14] although, as shown infra § 281, in certain cases the supreme court might remand the cause for an amendment of the record.

§ 280. Scope and Extent of Review

a. In general
b. Questions of law and fact

a. In General

On a review of a decision of a state court the United States supreme court ordinarily is confined to an examination of the federal questions involved and will not consider questions of state law.

Where a case is removed to the United States supreme court from a state court, the supreme court it authorized to determine all questions as to its jurisdiction and as to the form of the writ, the parties, citation, and service or otherwise.[15] However, as far as the review of the judgment or decree of the state court is concerned, the supreme court is usually confined to an examination of the federal question involved in the case and a determination of the rights, immunities, etc., claimed under the United States,[16] and, with respect to other matters involved in the judgment, it is bound by the decision

True function of certificate or statement of state court by way of amendment of, or addition to, the record is to aid in understanding record, to clarify it by defining the federal question involved with reasonable precision and by showing how question was raised and decided, so that United States supreme court on the record as thus clarified may be able to see that federal question was properly raised and was necessarily determined.—Honeyman v. Hanan, 57 S.Ct. 350, 300 U.S. 14, 81 L.Ed. 476, vacating 3 N.E.2d 186, 271 N.Y. 564, affirming 285 N.Y.S. 527, 246 App.Div. 781, reargument denied 285 N.Y.S. 1084, 246 App.Div. 829, and affirmed 9 N.E.2d 970, 275 N.Y. 382, remittitur amended 11 N.E.2d 788, 275 N.Y. 382, remittitur amended 11 N.E.2d 788, 275 N.Y. 625, appeal dismissed 58 S.Ct. 273, 302 U.S. 375, 82 L.Ed. 312, remittitur amended 3 N.E.2d 473, 271 N.Y. 662, reargument granted and amendment of remittitur denied 8 N.E.2d 618, 274 N.Y. 490.

Order of state court, entered after writ of error had been issued and returned to supreme court was sufficient to show federal questions raised and decided.—Whitney v. People of State of California, 47 S.Ct. 641, 274 U.S. 357, 71 L.Ed. 1095, vacating 46 S.Ct. 22, 269 U.S. 530, 70 L.Ed. 396, and affirming People v. Whitney, 207 P. 698, 57 Cal.App. 449, and rehearing granted Whitney v. People of State of California, 46 S.Ct. 120, 269 U.S. 538, 70 L.Ed. 400.

14. U.S.—Palmer v. State of Ohio, 39 S.Ct. 16, 248 U.S. 32, 63 L.Ed. 108, dismissing writ of error Raudabaugh v. State, 118 N.E. 102, 96 Ohio St. 513.
25 C.J. p 957 notes 95, 96.

Where judgment of state court is sustained by determination of local question, writ of error to review such judgment will ordinarily be dismissed, rather than judgment affirmed.—Live Oak Water Users' Ass'n v. Railroad Commission of State of California, 46 S.Ct. 149, 269 U.S. 354, 70 L.Ed. 305, dismissing error 219 P. 65, 192 Cal. 132.

15. U.S.—Ex parte Chetwood, Cal., 17 S.Ct. 385, 165 U.S. 443, 41 L.Ed. 782.

Presumptions

(1) On appeal supreme court will not presume acquiescence in loss of fundamental rights.—Ohio Bell Telephone Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 57 S.Ct. 724, 301 U.S. 292, 81 L.Ed. 1093, reversing 3 N.E.2d 475, 131 Ohio St. 539.

(2) The supreme court in passing on validity of order entered under state statute will not assume in advance that a state will so construe its law as to bring it into conflict with the federal Constitution or an act of congress.—Allen-Bradley Local No. 1111, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, 62 S.Ct. 820, 315 U.S. 740, 86 L.Ed. —, affirming 295 N.W. 791, 237 Wis. 164.

(3) In determining whether Massachusetts workmen's compensation statute is entitled to full faith and credit in California courts, as respects injury in California to Massachusetts employee of Massachusetts employer, United States supreme court may assume that provisions of Massachusetts statute are controlling on the parties in Massachusetts, and, being applicable to the Massachusetts contract of employment, do not infringe due process.—Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission of State of California, 59 S.Ct. 629, 306 U.S. 493, 83 L.Ed. 940, affirming 75 P.2d 1058, 10 Cal.2d 567, certiorari granted 59 S.Ct. 76, 305 U.S. 563, 83 L.Ed. 355.

(4) On certiorari to review state court's judgment in favor of person challenging constitutionality of state minimum wage law, federal supreme court must assume that wage rates were fairly made in full compliance with statutory procedure and standards, in absence of details respecting administrative investigation and findings.—Morehead v. People of State of New York ex rel. Tipaldo, 56 S.Ct. 918, 298 U.S. 587, 80 L.Ed. 1347, 103 A.L.R. 1445, affirming People ex rel. Tipaldo v. Morehead, 200 N.E. 799, 270 N.Y. 233, reversing 282 N.Y.S. 576, 156 Misc. 522, certiorari granted Morehead v. People of State of New York ex rel. (5) Other cases.—Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Scarlett, 57 S.Ct. 541, 300 U.S. 471, 81 L.Ed. 748, reversing Scarlett v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry., 60 P.2d 462, 7 Cal.2d 181, certiorari granted Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Scarlett, 57 S.Ct. 232, 299 U.S. 537, 81 L.Ed. 395, rehearing denied 57 S.Ct. 787, 301 U.S. 712, 81 L. Materiality and decision of federal question see supra § 244.

Rate cases

(1) Inquiry in rate cases coming from state court is whether action of state officials is consistent with enjoyment by regulated utility of revenues higher than line of confiscation, and, if such level is attained with suitable opportunity to challenge result, there is due process although proceeding is irregular or erroneous.—United Gas Public Service Co. v. State of Texas, 58 S.Ct. 483, 303 U.S. 123, 625, 82 L.Ed. 702, affirming United Gas Public Service Co. v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 89 S.W.2d 1094—West Ohio Gas Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 55 S.Ct. 316, 294 U.S. 63, 79 L.Ed. 761, reversing West Ohio Gas Co. v. Public Utilities Commission (City of Lima), 191 N.E. 105, 128 Ohio St. 301, conformed to 196 N.E. 674, 129 Ohio St. 670.

(2) Order of state public utilities commission, affirmed by state supreme court, prescribing gas rates to consumers of natural gas, was not confiscatory, and hence not subject to revision in United States supreme court.—Dayton Power & Light Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 54 S.Ct. 647, 292 U.S. 290, 78 L.Ed. 1267, affirming 187 N.E. 18, 127 Ohio St. 137.

Questions of foreign law

(1) The question whether the Russian Soviet government's decrees nationalizing insurance business and seizing assets of insurance companies had extraterritorial effect is not to be determined exclusively by the state court, and, while deference will be given to determination of the state court, its conclusion is not accepted as final.—U. S. v. Pink, 62 S.Ct. 552, 315 U.S. 203, 86 L.Ed. 796, reversing 32 N.E.2d 552, 284 N.Y. 555, affirming 20 N.Y.S.2d 665, 259 App.Div. 871, appeal granted 20 N.Y.S.2d 983, 259 App.Div. 886, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 960, 313 U.S. 553, 85 L.Ed. 1516.

(2) The supreme court will take such notice of a foreign law as the state court whose judgment is being reviewed could have taken.—U. S. v. Pink, supra.

(3) Where Georgia cases relied on in Delaware proceedings to establish Georgia law were cited in an opinion of the supreme court of Georgia which was pleaded in the proceedings, no objection was made below to the citations, and that opinion was properly in the record, in absence of a contrary ruling by Delaware, those cases could be considered by the United States supreme court under Delaware law.—Riley v. New York Trust Co., 62 S.Ct. 608, 315 U. S. 343, 86 L.Ed. 885, affirming New York Trust Co. v. Riley, Del., 16 A. 2d 772.

Supreme Court would not consider telephone company's objection to public utilities commission's method of allocation to subscribers of excess income of company or problems of going concern value and depreciation reserve, where value of company's physical plant had not been properly ascertained.—Ohio Bell Telephone Co. v. Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, 57 S.Ct. 724, 301 U.S. 292, 81 L.Ed. 1093, reversing 3 N.E.2d 475, 131 Ohio St. 539.

Estoppel to raise constitutional questions

The effect of a ruling by the state supreme court that a property owner was estopped to attack a tax bill issued against his property on constitutional grounds was not lessened because the court ruled as well on the constitutional questions, so as to require the supreme court to review the ruling on the constitutional questions.—St. Louis Malleable Casting Co. v. George C. Prendergast Construction Co., 43 S.Ct. 178, 260 U.S. 469, 67 L.Ed. 351, affirming 231 S.W. 989, 288 Mo. 197.

Meadowmoor Dairies, 61 S.Ct. 552, 312 U.S. 287, 85 L.Ed. 836, 132 A.L.R. 1200, affirming Meadowmoor Dairies v. Milk Drivers' Union of Chicago, No. 753, 21 N.E.2d 308, 371 Ill. 377, certiorari denied Milk Wagon Drivers Union of Chicago, Local 753 v. State laws as rules of decision in federal courts see supra §§ 165–190.

Existence of riparian right

State court's decision that asserted riparian right, for which constitutional protection was sought, did not exist, was binding on supreme court, in the absence of attempt to evade constitutional issue.—Fox River Paper Co. v. Railroad Commission of Wisconsin, 47 S.Ct. 669, 274 U.S. 651, 71 L.Ed. 1279, affirming 208 N.W. 266, 189 Wis. 626.

When scope of police power is in question, state tribunals' special knowledge of local conditions may have great weight, as regards review of state court's judgment.—Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Walters, 55 S.Ct. 486, 294 U.S. 405, 79 L.Ed. 949, reversing Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Baker, 71 S.W.2d 678, 167 Tenn. 470, appeal dismissed Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Herndon, 55 S.Ct. 87, 293 U.S. 518, 79 L.Ed. 632.

Explicit holding of state court as to basis of its decision cannot be disregarded except for convincing reasons.—Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. Blodgett, 53 S.Ct. 244, 287 U.S. 509, 77 L.Ed. 463, affirming Blodgett v. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, 158 A. 245, 114 Conn. 207.

The action of a federal court in remanding a cause to a state court after its removal was not open to revision on writ of error from the supreme court of the United States to the state court.[20]

b. Questions of Law and Fact

On review of a state court decision by the United States supreme court, questions of law are reviewable, but questions of fact ordinarily may not be reviewed.

On review of a judgment of a state court by the United States supreme court questions of law, as far as they are necessarily involved in the judgment of a state court on a federal question, should be reviewed by the supreme court.[21] However, questions of fact determined in a state court ordinarily are not reviewable by the supreme court,[22] although eys found by federal district court to be due to bondholders and subsequently transferred from court's registry to federal treasury's account in bank in Pennsylvania, apart from possession acquired under court's decree and federal statutes, supreme court would not consider effect of absence of moneys from state and absence or nonresidence of unknown claimants, if that was the case, on Pennsylvania court's decree declaring escheat of moneys to commonwealth, but those questions could be raised and decided whenever application was made to district court for payment over of moneys.—U. S. v. Klein, 58 S.Ct. 536, 303 U.S. 276, 82 L.Ed. 840, affirming In re Escheat of Moneys in Custody of U. S. Treasury, 192 A. 256, 326 Pa. 260.

Right to insist on overruling of prior decision

Person who, without challenging principles underlying prior decision of federal supreme court, petitioned for certiorari to state court on ground that case was distinguishable from prior case, was not entitled to contend that prior case should be overruled.—Morehead v. People of State of New York ex rel. Tipaldo, 56 S.Ct. 918, 298 U.S. 587, 80 L.Ed. 1347, 103 A.L.R. 1445, affirming People ex rel. Tipaldo v. Morehead, 200 N.E. 799, 270 N.Y. 233, reversing 282 N.Y. Evidence

(1) Questions of evidence are not within the jurisdiction of the supreme court unless it is sought to give effect to such evidence for other purposes over which the court has jurisdiction.—Mackay v. Dillon, Mo., 4 How. 421, 11 L.Ed. 1038.

(2) Where evidence stricken by the trial court was held immaterial by state supreme court, United States supreme court could treat case as though evidence had been received and held without bearing.—Hans Rees' Sons v. State of North Carolina ex rel. Maxwell, 51 S.Ct. 385, 283 U.S. 123, 75 L.Ed. 879, reversing Maxwell v. Hans Rees' Sons, 153 S.E. 850, 199 N.C. 42.

Where picketing was accompanied by violence, the United States supreme court could not say that a finding of the Illinois supreme court, that the momentum of fear generated by past violence would survive even though future picketing might be wholly peaceful, so contradicted experience as to warrant rejection, nor could that court say that it was written into the Fourteenth Amendment that a state through its courts cannot base protection against future coercion on an inference of the continuing threat of past misconduct.—Milk Wagon Drivers Union of Chicago, Local 753, v. Meadowmoor Dairies, 61 S.Ct. 552, 312 U.S. 287, 85 L. Ed. 836, 132 A.L.R. 1200, affirming Meadowmoor Dairies v. Milk Wagon such court may examine into the facts to such extent as is necessary to determine whether a federal question is involved,[23] and, where conclusions of law and findings of fact are so intermingled as to make it necessary to pass on questions of fact as an incident to a decision on the claim of a denial of a federal right, the supreme court may exercise such power.[24] So also the question whether there is suf-

Availability of equitable remedy in state court

A water company which itself sought review of New York public service commission's determination in rate case by certiorari and did not invoke plenary jurisdiction of an equity court could not, on appeal to United States supreme court, raise question whether it was entitled to a court's independent judgment on the law and facts on issue of confiscation, where it did not appear that a remedy in equity was not available under New York law.—People of State of New York ex rel. Consolidated Water Co. of Utica v. Maltbie, 58 S.Ct. 506, 303 U.S. 158, 82 L.Ed. 724, dismissing appeal People ex rel. Consolidated Water Co. of Utica, N. Y., v. Maltbie, 9 N.E.2d 961, 275 N.Y. 357, affirming 282 N.Y.S. 412, 245 App.Div. 866.

Representation of accused by counsel

On certiorari to review Kansas supreme court judgment denying a writ of habeas corpus, the United States supreme court would accept that court's conclusion that the record showing that petitioner was represented by counsel throughout, and revealing on its face no irregularities in criminal trial, was sufficient refutation of petitioner's unsupported charge that he was denied the right to summon witnesses and testify for himself.—Cochran v. State of Kansas, 62 S.Ct. 1068, 316 U.S. 255, 86 L.Ed. 1453, reversing Cochran v. Amrine, 113 P.2d 1048, 153 Kan. 777, certiorari granted 62 S.Ct. 109, 314 U.S. 588, 86 L.Ed. 474.

State of Louisiana, 59 S.Ct. 100, 305 U.S. 586, 83 L.Ed. 370.

Denial of right to assistance of counsel

Making findings of fact

Supreme court can make findings of fact based on the evidence which the state courts omitted to make because, under the erroneous construction of the federal statute adopted by them, they considered such findings immaterial.—Merchants' Nat. Bank of Richmond, Va., v. City of Richmond, 41 S.Ct. 619, 256 U.S. 635, 65 L.Ed. 1135, reversing City of Richmond v. Merchants' Nat. Bank of Richmond, 98 S.E. 643, 124 Va. 522.

Purpose of analyzing facts

The supreme court analyzes the facts on an appeal from a state court, not to determine issues of fact arising on conflicting testimony or inferences, and thus to usurp the function of the state court as a trier of the facts, but to perform its own proper function in deciding the question of law arising on the findings which the evidence permits.—United Gas Public Service Co. v. State of Texas, 58 S.Ct. 483, 303 U.S. 123, 625, 82 L.Ed. 702, affirming United Gas Public Service Co. v. State, Tex.Civ. App., 89 S.W.2d 1094.

Where the facts were admitted by demurrer, the supreme court, in determining whether a state statute in its application to such facts violates the federal Constitution, must analyze the facts alleged and draw its own inferences as to its ultimate effect, and is not bound by the conclusions of the state supreme court.—Truax v. Corrigan, 42 S.Ct. 124, 257 U.S. 312, 66 L.Ed. 254, 27 A.L.R. 375, reversing 176 P. 570, 20 Ariz. 7.

ficient evidence to sustain a finding being one of law is open for examination by the supreme court;[25] and a finding of fact which is so grossly wrong as to amount to an infraction of the federal constitution may be reviewed.[26]

§ 281. Determination and Disposition of Cause

On review of a judgment of a state court the United States supreme court has power not only to correct errors in the judgment entered but to make such disposition of the case as justice may require.

On review of a decision of a state court, the United States supreme court has power not only to correct errors in the judgment entered in the state court but to make such disposition of the case as justice may require.[27] The supreme court may reverse, modify, or affirm the judgment of the state

Disposition of case on face of decree

Where a case clearly presented a substantial claim of the right to free discussion, it would be improper for the supreme court to dispose of the case otherwise than on the face of the state court's decree under review on certiorari.—American Federation of Labor v. Swing, 61 S.Ct. 568, 312 U.S. 321, 85 L.Ed. 855, reversing Swing v. American Federation of Labor, 22 N.E.2d 857, 372 Ill. 91, affirming 18 N.E.2d 258, 298 Ill.App. 63, court.[28] In disposing of the case the supreme court will lean toward affirmance where error on the part of the state court is not clear,[29] and where the court is convinced that a writ of error was taken only for delay, a motion to affirm the judgment should be granted.[30] It has also been held proper to affirm instead of dismiss where the question raised, although not frivolous, is without merit.[31]

The decision of the supreme court in a case brought before it from the state court is the binding law of the case.[32] Where the supreme court affirms the judgment of the state court, effect must be given thereto,[33] while if the judgment is reversed and remanded the case is then pending in the state court for such disposition as it deems proper, not inconsistent with the opinion of the supreme court.[34] Where a reversal is necessary because of an erroneous construction given to an act of con-

Judgment affirmed

In action by railroad employee to recover under the Federal Employers' Liability Act for personal injuries caused by negligence of the railroad and another employee, where state supreme court in affirming judgment for injured employee correctly ruled that question of assumption of risk was for the jury, judgment would be affirmed notwithstanding the state supreme court's erroneous ruling as a further ground for affirming judgment that the Federal Employers' Liability Act was one intended to promote the safety of employees and hence that the defense of assumption of risk was barred.—Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Leonidas, 59 S. Ct. 51, 305 U.S. 1, 83 L.Ed. 3, affirming Leonidas v. Great Northern R. Co., 72 P.2d 1007, 105 Mont. 302, certiorari granted Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Leonidas, 58 S.Ct. 759, 303 U.S. 632, 82 L.Ed. 1092.

Judgment reversed

Judgment of state supreme court, erroneously based on assumption that railroad was subject to liability on garnishment process under federal statute, will be reversed by United States supreme court.—Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Alvin R. Durham Co., 46 S.Ct. 509, 271 U.S. 251, 70 L.Ed. 931, reversing Alvin R. Durham Co. v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 201 N.W. 503, 229 Mich. 468, certiorari granted Chicago & N. W. Judgment based on questions of federal law wrongly determined may be reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings.—Joines v. Patterson, 47 S.Ct. 706, 274 U.S. 544, 71 L.Ed. 1194, reversing Patterson v. Joines, 244 P. 585, 114 Okl. 9.

Action under Federal Employers' Liability Act

In action under Federal Employers' Liability Act, supreme court will examine record, and reverse judgment, if evidence is insufficient as matter of law to show negligence.—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Where record does not contain all evidence Judgment of state court awarding shipper damages for payment of rebates to other shippers for a like service should not be reversed on the theory that some of the shipments were destined for points outside the state, where the record does not contain all the evidence, but shows that some of the shipments were listed as "Coal–Intrastate."—Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mitchell Coal & Coke Co., 35 S.Ct. 787, 238 U.S. 251, 59 L.Ed. 1293, affirming Mitchell Coal & Coke Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 88 A. 743, 241 Pa. 536.

Attorney's fees and taxation of disbursements

(1) A state statute cannot empower a state court, when assessing damages to a successful plaintiff in mandamus, to allow attorney's fees for services in the federal supreme court on a writ of error unsuccessfully prosecuted by defendant, where such award is in conflict with the settled rule in the federal supreme court.—Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Larabee, 34 S.Ct. 979, 234 U.S. 459, 58 L. Ed. 1398, reversing 116 P. 901, 85 Kan. 214.

(2) Even if municipal court code permitted taxation of disbursements incurred in resisting application to United States supreme court for writ of certiorari, such an item would be unenforceable as an unauthorized restraint upon free access to United States supreme court.—Jorgensen v. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, 36 N.Y.S.2d 318, 178 Misc. 740.

Undetermined issues arising under state law exclusively may be considered by state court after mandate of federal supreme court remanding cause.—Engen v. Union State Bank of Harvard, 236 N.W. 741, 121 Neb. 257, certiorari denied 52 S.Ct. 33, 284 U.S. 655, 76 L.Ed. 555.

State courts will be free to decide any federal questions remaining undecided, without prejudice to further presentation of such questions to United States supreme court.—McGoldrick v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 60 S.Ct. 670, 309 U.S. 430, 84 L.Ed. 849, reversing Compagnie Generale Transatlantique v. clude the right of the state court to consider and pass on the rights of the parties in the light of the statute as correctly construed.[35] Where the statutes and practice of a state provide that an appellate court of such state may, on reviewing a judgment of the court below, render such a judgment as should have been rendered by that court, the United States supreme court may, on reversing the decision of the state appellate court, enter a judgment finally disposing of the case.[36] The supreme court may, in its discretion, award execution.[37] A writ of error to a state court, which incorrectly stated the date of the judgment in the court below, could be dismissed without prejudice to proceedings under a second writ of error, which correctly described the judgment.[38]

Remanding of case by highest state court after receiving federal supreme court's mandate reversing judgment, and plaintiff's filing amended petition asserting additional demand, and trial thereon, was not inconsistent with such mandate.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 52 S.Ct. 160, 284 U.S. 338, 76 L.Ed. 327, affirming Southern Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth, 38 S.W.2d 696, 238 Ky. 638, and mandate stayed Southern Ry. Co. v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 52 S.Ct. 639, set aside 53 S.Ct. 24, 287 U.S. 561, 77 L.Ed. 495.

Construing state statute to render it constitutional

Where the supreme court holds a state statute invalid, as construed and applied by the state court, and remands the cause for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion, the state courts are not precluded from construing the statute so as to eliminate the unconstitutional features.—Schuylkill Trust Co. v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 58 S.Ct. 295, 302 U.S. 506, 82 L.Ed. 392, affirming Commonwealth v. Schuylkill Trust Co., 193 A. 638, 327 Pa. 127.

Abandonment of issue

Where statute was assailed as violating both the state and federal constitutions and on appeal to the supreme court of Iowa validity of the statute under the state constitution was not challenged, question of the validity of the statute under the state constitution was "abandoned" and after decision of the supreme court was reversed by the United States supreme court and cause was remanded appellee was not entitled to a consideration of whether statute violated the state constitution.—Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Nelson, 299 N.W. 401, 230 Iowa 942, conforming to mandate Nelson v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 61 S.Ct. 593, 312 U.S. 373, 85 L.Ed. 897, reversing Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Roddewig, 292 N.W. 142, 228 Iowa 1301, certiorari granted Roddewig v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 61 S.Ct. 34, 311 U.S. 630, 85 L.Ed. 401, rehearing denied Nelson v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 61 S.Ct. 804, 312 U.S. 716, 85 L. Ed. 1145.

Passing on errors of supreme court

It is not the province of the supreme court of Iowa or of the district court to pass on or attempt to correct alleged errors of the supreme court of the United States.—Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Nelson, supra.

Proper construction of mandate of the United States supreme court presents a "federal question" for the determination of that court.—Ex parte State of Texas, 62 S.Ct. 418, 315 U.S. 8, 86 L.Ed. 579, denying petition Lone Star Gas Co. v. State, Tex., 153 S.W.2d 681.

Vacated judgment as "law of the case"

Opinion of state supreme court on federal issue, reviewed on certiorari by United States supreme court and there vacated, does not remain "law of the case" for any purpose, and is without effect.—In re Hallbom's Estate, 249 N.W. 417, 189 Minn. 383, certiorari granted Pagel v. Pagel, 54 S.Ct. 131, 290 U.S. 620, 78 L.Ed. 541, affirmed 54 S.Ct. 497, 291 U.S. 473, 78 L.Ed. 921.

Mandamus to enforce mandate

(1) On motion for leave to file petition for writ of mandamus in United States supreme court against the judges of the supreme court of Texas to bring a judgment of that court into conformity with controlling mandate of the United States supreme court, in a case involving enforcement of an order of the Texas railroad commission, the United States supreme court was required to accept the return of the Texas judges regarding the scope of judicial review of orders of Texas railroad commission as well as their showing regarding the distribution of judicial power within the Texas judicial system, since such matters were matters of "local law".—Ex parte State of Texas, 62 S.Ct. 418, 315 U.S. 8, 86 L.Ed. 579, denying petition Lone Star Gas Co. v. State, Tex., 153 S.W.2d 681.

(2) Where merits of claim of confiscation were not determined by United States supreme court on review of judgment of Texas court of civil appeals entered on an appeal in action to enforce an order of Texas railroad commission fixing rate to be charged by gas company for gas delivered to Texas distributing companies, and subsequently the case was before Texas supreme court which rendered opinion which was susceptible to construction that United States supreme court had ruled on merits of claim of confiscation, and sent case to district court for new trial, and motion was filed in United States supreme court for leave to file mandamus petition to bring Texas supreme court's judgment within controlling mandate of United States supreme court, rule to show cause was discharged and motion was denied on filing of return to rule to show cause by judges of the Texas supreme court which was in effect a disavowal that their action implied that decision of United States supreme court foreclosed a trial on issue of confiscation.—Ex parte State of Texas, supra. 62 S.Ct. 418, denying petition Lone Star Gas Co. v. State, 153 S.W.2d 681.

37. Refusal of state court to execute mandate

If a cause has been remanded to the state court which refuses to execute the mandate of the supreme court the latter court may, on a second writ, proceed to a final decision and award execution thereon.—Martin v. Hunter's Lessee, Va., 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L.Ed. 97.

Equally divided court. If the supreme court is equally divided with respect to the federal question presented the judgment of the state court will be affirmed.[39]

Effect of events subsequent to decision by state court. As shown supra § 280, the supreme court on review of a decision of a state court ordinarily considers only federal questions and does not review questions of state law. However, under its power to make such disposition of the case as justice requires, the supreme court may consider questions of state law which arise after the decision of the state court has been rendered, as where new facts have supervened or there has been a change in the law.[40] The court in a proper case may dismiss the appeal or writ[41] or it may decide the state questions or remand the cause for appropriate action by the state court.[42] When the intervening event is of such nature that the judgment of the state court should not be enforced, the supreme court will vacate the judgment and remand the cause rather than dismiss the appeal or writ.[43]

Where, by reason of events occurring subsequent to the rendition by the state court of the judgment which is sought to be reversed, the particular relief sought in that action by plaintiff in error cannot be afforded, the appeal or writ will be dismissed.[44]

Amendment of record. Under its power to make such disposition of the case as justice requires, the supreme court may, instead of dismissing the appeal or writ, vacate the judgment of the state court and remand the cause to the end that the record be amended or clarified.[45] Thus such procedure may be followed where the record fails adequately to state the facts underlying a decision of a federal question,[46] or where the grounds of the state decision are obscure,[47] as where, under the deci-

Ambiguous or obscure adjudications by state courts do not bar a determination by the supreme court of the validity under the federal Constitution of state action, and intelligent exercise of its appellate powers compels the supreme court to ask for the elimination of the obscurities and ambiguities from the opinions in such cases so that the court can ascertain whether its jurisdiction to review should be invoked.—State of Minnesota v. X. CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS

§ 282. Creation of Court

The circuit courts of appeals are statutory courts, created for the purpose of facilitating the prompt disposition of cases and relieving the supreme court from the oppressive burden of general litigation.

The circuit courts of appeals are statutory courts,[49] created for the purpose of facilitating the prompt disposition of cases and relieving the supreme court from the oppressive burden of general litigation, which impedes the examination of cases of public concern and operates to the delay of suitors.[50] There was one court for each of the nine judicial circuits, as originally created by the Judiciary Act of 1891, 28 U.S.C.A. § 211,[51] which took effect immediately notwithstanding provisions that the jurisdiction of the supreme and circuit courts was not thereby to be impaired in cases of appeals taken or pending before July 1, 1891.[52] A tenth circuit was added by Act of February 28, 1929 c 363 § 1, 28 U.S.C.A. § 211, as amended.[53]

§ 283. Personnel of Court

The judges eligible to sit on a circuit court of appeals are the circuit justice assigned to the circuit, the circuit judges, and, when needed, the district judges. The court may consist of three or, in some circuits, of more than three judges.

Under the provisions of the Judicial Code § 289, 28 U.S.C.A. § 430, abolishing circuit courts, and the various related statutes, Judicial Code §§ 117–120, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 211–216, dealing with the creation and composition of circuit courts of appeals, including the allotment of justices of the supreme court to the circuits, the judges of a circuit court of appeals are drawn from three sources—the chief justice or associate justice of the supreme court assigned to the circuit, the circuit judges, and the district judges.[54] Circuit judges become ex officio judges of the respective circuit courts of appeals,[55] but district judges are drawn on only in case a full court cannot be made up by the circuit justice and the circuit judges.[56] The provisions of the Judicial Code also manifest a purpose to constitute in some circuits a circuit court of appeals of more than three judges.[57] The provision that "the circuit judges in each cir-

"Full court," as used in this connection, refers to the court which contains the permissible complement of judges, as distinguished from a quorum of two, and the permissible complement is a bench of three judges.—Textile Mills Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, supra.

Court composed of district judges alone

In the absence of the chief justice or an associate justice of the supreme court, or of a circuit judge, a circuit court of appeals is legally constituted where made up of three district judges of the circuit, regularly designated by particular assignments to attend as members for the term.—Peters v. Hanger, Va., 136 F. 181, 69 C.C.A. 197.

57. U.S.—Textile Mills Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 62 S.Ct. 272, 314 U.S. 326, 86 L.Ed. 249, affirming, C. C.A., Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Textile Mills Securities Corporation, 117 F.2d 62, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 830, 312 U.S. 677, 85 L.Ed. 1117.

Three judges under original act

(1) By the original Act of March 3, 1891, 28 U.S.C.A. § 212, each circuit court of appeals was to consist of three judges, of whom two constituted a quorum.—Textile Mills Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, supra.

(2) This act, it has been held, was not amended by the later creation of cuit shall be judges of the circuit court of appeals in that circuit" manifests the purpose that the size of the circuit court of appeals shall not be less than the number of circuit judges authorized by law in that circuit, notwithstanding the provision that such a court shall consist of three judges,[58] and notwithstanding the further provision that each circuit judge shall sit as one of the judges of the circuit court of appeals in that circuit from time to time according to law.[59] The term "court," as used in these statutes, does not mean three judges when the court is sitting, and all the judges when other functions are performed, but comprises the entire number of judges in each circuit, so that, not merely three, but all the judges in active service of the court in a particular circuit may sit in banc.[60]

§ 284. Rules and Conduct of Business

A circuit court of appeals is governed, as to matters of procedure, by the rules of practice and procedure in the federal courts, although it may establish rules and regulations for the conduct of its business.

In regard to matters of procedure, a circuit court of appeals is governed, not by the rules of practice and procedure in the state court, but by those in the federal courts,[61] such as by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 73–76, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, relating to and regulating appeals to a circuit court of appeals.[62]

However, under the provisions of Judicial Code § 122, 28 U.S.C.A. § 219, a circuit court of appeals may establish rules and regulations for the conduct of its business, within its jurisdiction as conferred by law. Such a rule may be established for the purpose of expediting and simplifying the practice and procedure in a circuit court of appeals,[63] and has the force and effect of law, unless it is in conflict with an act of congress.[64] A rule of a circuit court of appeals which allows the court to sit in banc has been held valid.[65]

Judges of the court will not knowingly review, reverse, or overrule decisions of other judges of the same court.[66]

§ 285. Jurisdiction in General

The jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals is purely statutory and appellate.

The jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals is purely statutory.[67] Furthermore, by virtue of the 60. U.S.—Textile Mills Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, supra.

"Court," as used in different sentences

In statute providing that circuit court of appeals should consist of three judges, and in a later sentence prescribing duties of court other than hearing and deciding appeals, the word "court" was used in the same sense, and did not change meaning when the separate sentences were sectionalized in the code, and could not be construed as meaning that court, when sitting, should consist of three judges drawn from a panel drawn from such larger number as might from time to time be authorized.—Textile Mills Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, supra.

66. U.S.—Donnelly Garment Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, C.C.A., 123 F.2d 215.

Remedy is in supreme court

Where judges who constituted the circuit court of appeals to which petitions of employer and workers' union to set aside cease and desist order of National Labor Relations Board was finally submitted were not the same judges who originally passed on the sufficiency of the employer's and the union's applications for leave to adduce additional evidence and who denied those applications, the court would not, on final submission of case, consider such applications, and if court erred in denying an opportunity to prove that the board was not an impartial tribunal, the error was one which properly could be corrected only by the United States supreme court.—Donnelly Garment Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, supra.

provisions of the Judicial Code § 128, 28 U.S.C.A. § 225, its jurisdiction is purely appellate,[68] and it can pass on the merits of a cause only by way of review.[69] It has no original jurisdiction except such as may be necessary to aid, protect, or enforce its appellate jurisdiction,[70] and it is subject to the supervisory jurisdiction of the supreme court.[71]

§ 286. Issuance of Writs

The circuit court of appeals has power to issue supersedeas, scire facias, habeas corpus, mandamus, prohibition, and other writs, which may be necessary for the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.

Although the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure do not apply of their own force to the circuit courts of appeals,[72] such courts have general power, under the provisions of the Judicial Code § 262, 28 U.S. C.A. § 377, to issue writs which are necessary for the exercise of their appellate jurisdiction,[73] such as writs of supersedeas,[74] scire facias,[75] habeas corpus,[76] injunction,[77] or prohibition.[78] A circuit

Injunction refused

(1) To holder of permit, to restrain proceedings for revocation of permit pending its appeal from interlocutory order denying injunction against holding of hearing.—Harrison Beverage Co. v. Hunsberger, C.C.A.Pa., 65 F.2d 873.

(2) On appeal from decree refusing to appoint trustee to take possession of assets of debtor undergoing reorganization, to have debtor and other interested parties restrained from proceeding with hearings on proposed plan of reorganization, since that matter had no connection with pending appeal.—In re Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., C.C.A.Pa., 103 F.2d 901.

Other form of relief

Where appeal had been from decree refusing to appoint trustee to take possession of assets of debtor undergoing reorganization, appellants, if anticipating harm to them from hearings on proposed plan of reorganization, should not have sought relief from circuit court of appeals, but should have applied to district court for postponement of hearings or should have appealed from order prescribing them.—In re Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., supra.

As proper remedy

Motion for prohibition to restrain district court from proceeding with motion to vacate orders is the proper remedy, and will be granted by the circuit court of appeals, in protection of its appellate jurisdiction, where motion to vacate was made after giving of notice of petition to revise, court of appeals is without any power to issue writs as original process,[79] and accordingly it has no original jurisdiction to issue writs of prohibition[80] or habeas corpus.[81]

The existence of appellate jurisdiction, as a prerequisite to the issuance of original writs, is determined not only by the pendency of the appeal, but also by the question whether or not the proceeding below is within the court's appellate jurisdiction.[82] A situation classed within the protection of appellate jurisdiction is one in which the right of appeal exists but, because of circumstances, a departure from the remedy by appeal becomes necessary, in which situation a circuit court of appeals may employ original writs, as an auxiliary means of giving full force and effect to existing appellate authority and furthering justice;[83] and on this principle, it may issue the writ of certiorari only as auxiliary to a review by appeal or writ of error and not as an original process.[84] The granting of an original writ in such a case is within the court's discretion, limited by the rule that the writ will not issue if the remedy of appeal exists, unless the case is rare and exceptional.[85]

Mandamus. Under its power to issue writs which may be necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction, a circuit court of appeals may issue a writ of mandamus, before as well as after steps for review have been taken,[86] when, and only when, it is necessary for the protection of its appellate jurisdiction, and strictly in aid of that jurisdiction when it is involved,[87] and to enforce its decrees and manand favorable action thereon would take away appellate jurisdiction of circuit court of appeals.—In re St. Lawrence Condensed Milk Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 65.

Who may not obtain

Prohibition will not lie in circuit court of appeals at instance of persons not parties to proceeding in district court to restrain district judge from signing an order taking over administration of two funds in custody of state supreme court in which petitioners are interested.—In re Heilbroner, C.C.A., 69 F.2d 643.

Writ denied for lack of jurisdiction

Where motion to dismiss petition and complaint on ground that court was without jurisdiction of subject matter was denied by the district court, application to the circuit court of appeals for writ of prohibition would be denied for want of jurisdiction and because district judge had not been made a party, although it appeared clear that district court lacked jurisdiction.—New York & Porto Rico S. S. Co. v. U. S., C.C.A. N.Y., 116 F.2d 799.

(6) To require district court to reinstate judgment, vacated without authority, after affirmance and expiration of term.—Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Rellstab, N.J., 48 S.Ct. 203, 276 U.S. 1, 72 L.Ed. 439, reversing, C.C.A., 15 F.2d 137, certiorari granted 47 S.Ct. 247, 273 U.S. 685, 71 L.Ed. 840.

(7) To compel allowance of appeal.—Richfield Oil Co. v. Sawtelle, C.C.A.Ariz., 279 F. 851.

Where district court refuses to act, circuit court of appeals can ordinarily require district court to act, but cannot direct what that action shall be; and a proceeding in circuit court of appeals to require action by district judge allegedly refusing to perform his duties does not determine rights between parties to litigation, but is directed at the judge, who is a party and has the right to justify his inaction, if he can, by pleading and supporting evidence, and must take the form and have the substance of a mandamus proceeding.—Speer v. Reason for rule

"The Act of Congress, Title 28 U.S.C.A. § 723b, empowering the Supreme Court to promulgate rules of civil procedure, provides that it 'shall have the power to prescribe, by general rules, for the district courts . . . and for the courts of the District of Columbia, the forms and even if the rule were construed as forbidding the issuance of a writ of mandamus by the circuit court of appeals, the court could entertain an application, designated as an application for a writ of mandamus, as a motion for relief previously available by mandamus, as authorized by the rule[94]

In an original contempt proceeding pending before the circuit court of appeals, in which it becomes necessary for the court to sit as a trier of controverted facts, it may issue subpœnas ad testificandum and subpœnas duces tecum for purposes of pretrial discovery.[95]

B. APPELLATE JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

§ 287. In General

The appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals is purely statutory; and such a court must consider the question of its jurisdiction, and that of the lower court, even though the question has not been raised by either party. Abstract or moot questions, not connected with the granting of actual relief, cannot be considered.

The appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals is purely of statutory origin, existing only when given by some statutory provision.[96] So, the right of appeal is a matter of privilege rather than a natural, inherent, or vested right,[97] and congress may grant it on such conditions as it deems appropriate;[98] but when provision has been made for appeal, it is, in the cases mentioned, and on the conditions prescribed, a matter of right.[99] A statutory right of appeal may be taken away by repeal of the statute giving it, even as to causes which have been previously appealed.[1]

The jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals ends when they find want of jurisdiction in the low-of process, writs, pleadings, and motions, and the practice and procedure in civil actions at law.' While Section 81(b) is general in its terms, it cannot be construed to apply to Circuit Courts of Appeals, since so construed it would be in the exercise of a power not conferred upon the Supreme Court."—Armour & Co. v. Kloeb, supra.

Equity jurisdiction

Under a statute providing that suits in equity shall not be maintained in federal courts where there is a plain and adequate remedy at law, the circuit court of appeals should, where such a remedy is obvious, raise the objection sua sponte, and require transfer of the case to the law side of the court.—Denison v. Keck, C.C.A.Neb., 13 F.2d 384.

Failure to appeal from decree sustaining jurisdiction

Failure of life policy beneficiaries against whom insurer brought bill in equity for cancellation of policy to appeal from that portion of decree sustaining jurisdiction of district court as court of equity, did not preclude circuit court of appeals from noticing and determining matter of jurisdiction, but circuit court of appeals had choice of action in treating matter as waived or not, as might seem to comport with justice.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, C.C.A.Iowa, 87 F.2d 842.

Before considering verity of decree, the circuit court of appeals must defirmatively appear from the record,[7] and cannot be waived;[8] nor can it be conferred by the consent, agreement, or conduct of the parties[9] or of counsel.[10]

Jurisdiction is confined to the review of error committed in the court below in the cause which is brought up on the appeal, and does not extend to errors committed in other causes.[11]

Since an actual controversy is necessary, it is not within the province of the circuit courts of appeals to entertain or decide abstract, hypothetical, or moot questions, not connected with the granting of actual relief,[12] or the determination of which can serve termine the issue of the jurisdiction of the trial court, where such jurisdiction is challenged during oral presentation of the appeal.—Bassett v. Massman Const. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 120 F.2d 230, reversing, D.C., Massman Constr. Co. v. Bassett, 30 F.Supp. 813, certiorari denied 62 S.Ct. 92, 314 U.S. 648, 86 L.Ed. 520.

Settlement of question by verdict

It has been held that objection, not raised in district court, that jurisdiction of district court by diversity of citizenship is not shown, is settled by verdict.—Hotel McAllister v. Coburn, C.C.A.Fla., 18 F.2d 100.

On motion for rehearing in the circuit court of appeals, where appellee had submitted the case on the merits and without objection, it was held too late to question the court's jurisdiction.—Dudley E. Jones Co. v. Munger Improved Cotton Mach. Mfg. Co., Tex., 50 F. 785, 1 C.C.A. 668.

Invoking decision by court in equity

Where both parties on appeal argued the question whether, in view of the incontestability clause of the policy in suit, there was any defense in law on claims for future benefits, they acquiesced in invoking decision of the question by the circuit court of appeals sitting in equity, and hence that court had power to dispose of the question and make the decision res adjudicata between the parties.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York v. Markowitz, C.C.A.Cal., 78 F.2d 396, certiorari denied 56 S.Ct. 148, 296 U.S. 625, 80 L.Ed. 444.

3 C.J. p 358 note 84.

What makes question moot

(1) If, pending an appeal, an event occurs which renders it impossible for the appellate court to grant any relief, or renders a decision unnecessary, the question becomes moot.—Lewis Pub. Co. v. Wyman, Mo., 182 F. 13, 104 C.C.A. 453, affirmed 33 S. Ct. 599, 228 U.S. 610, 57 L.Ed. 989—3 C.J. p 360 note 89.

(2) The occurrence of such an event may be shown by extrinsic evidence, or noticed by the court where it is a matter of judicial notice.—Lisman v. Knickerbocker Trust Co., Mich., 211 F. 413, 128 C.C.A. 85—Keely v. Ophir Hill Cons. Min. Co., Utah, 169 F. 601, 95 C.C.A. 99.

(3) So, where, pending an appeal from a decree in a case involving the infringement of a patent, the patent expires, nothing remains for the judgment of the appellate court to act on.—Gamewell Fire-Alarm Tel. Co. v. Municipal Signal Co., Mass., 61 F. 208, 9 C.C.A. 450.

(4) The question is rendered moot where, pending the appeal, appellee does, or relinquishes the right to do, the act in respect of which the appeal was taken.—Lewis Pub. Co. v. Wyman, supra—Goldstein v. Behrends, Alaska, 123 F. 399, 59 C.C.A. 203.

(5) The question may be rendered moot by the act of the court where, pending the appeal, some judgment or order rendered or made in the cause renders the determination of the questions presented by the appeal unnecessary.—Keely v. Ophir Hill Cons. Min. Co., supra—3 C.J. p 363 note 95 [a] (5).

(6) Where a litigation has ceased to be between parties having adverse no beneficial purpose for any party,[13] or from the determination of which no practical relief can follow;[14] and the fact that the parties agree on the presence of an actual controversy is of no importance.[15]

§ 288. Mode of Exercising Jurisdiction

The writ of error has been abolished by statute in all cases, civil and criminal, all relief previously obtainable thereby being obtainable by appeal. The Rules of Civil Procedure for the district courts, adopted by the supreme court, superseded all former methods of appeal in civil cases to which they are applicable.

The circuit courts of appeals have no power to vacate, set aside or modify any order, judgment, or decree of the district court except on proper appellate procedure,[16] and on the hearing of the case as an appellate matter;[17] they cannot on mere motion set aside orders of the district court,[18] or direct the district court to do so.[19] They can act on the lower court only by mandate.[20]

Under the former practice the acts of congress gave to defeated litigants in the national courts the right to a review of final judgments at law against them by writ of error and a right to a review of final decrees in equity or admiralty by appeal, and a decree in equity or admiralty could not be reviewed by a writ of error, nor could a judgment at law be challenged by an appeal.[21] However, un-interests, the case falls within the general rule as to moot questions.—Arnold v. Woolsey, Neb., 54 F. 268, 4 C.C.A. 319.

Determination of right to costs

Where all substantial interest in the controversy has been parted with or extinguished, the court will not hear the appeal merely to determine the right to costs.—Arnold v. Woolsey, supra—3 C.J. p 365 note 8.

More than declaratory judgment held sought, so that court had jurisdiction of appeal.—Whitney v. Puro Filter Corporation of America, C.C.A. N.Y., 63 F.2d 811.

25 C.J. p 970 note 19.
Power to superintend and revise in bankruptcy proceedings see Bankruptcy §§ 592–606.

Direction to correct judgment

The circuit court of appeals has not the power to direct the supreme court of Hawaii to correct a judgment reversing a decree, so as to set forth what further action would be compatible to the decision, and to direct the lower judge to take such action, so as to render the decree final in form and appealable.—Rumsey v. New York Life Ins. Co., C.C.A. Hawaii, 267 F. 554, certiorari denied 41 S.Ct. 216, 254 U.S. 654, 65 L.Ed. 459.

Failure to appeal as "technical error"

Failure to appeal, which can alone confer jurisdiction on a circuit court of appeals, cannot be ignored under a statute requiring courts to give judgment without regard to "technical errors," defects, or exceptions which do not affect substantial rights of the parties.—U. S. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., C.C.A.Md., 283 F. 937, modifying, D.C., 283 F. 438, and certiorari denied Pennsylvania R. Co. v. U. S., 43 S.Ct. 96, 260 U.S. 736, 67 L.Ed. 488.

Character of principal action as controlling

(1) Every judgment or order in an action is of the character of the principal action, so that, if such action was at law, the judgment or order, as in intervention, was reviewable on writ of error, and if the action was in equity, it was reviewable by appeal.—U. S. v. Northwestern Dev. Co., Alaska, 203 F. 960, 122 C.C.A. 262—3 C.J. p 311 note 16.

(2) In the absence of a rule of court to the contrary, an action at law in which an equitable defense was pleaded, under Judicial Code § 274b, might be reviewed either by writ of error or appeal.—Maine Northwestern Development Co. v. Northwestern Commercial Co., Wash., 240 F. 583, 153 C C.A. 387, certiorari denied 37 S.Ct. 742, 244 U.S. 655, 61 L.Ed. 1374.

Writ of error had its origin at the common law and was adopted in the United States as a part of the common-law system.—Buessel v. U. S., C.C.A.Conn., 258 F. 811—Nashville Ry. & Light Co. v. Bunn, C.C.A.Tenn., 168 F. 862.

Origin of appeal

The remedy or procedure by appeal is of civil-law origin, and was introduced therefrom into courts of equity and admiralty.—Buessel v. U. S., C.C.A.Conn., 258 F. 811—Nashville Ry. & Light Co. v. Bunn, C.C.A.Tenn., 168 F. 862.

Nature and function of writ of error

(1) "The writ of error is the writ of the appellate court addressed to the judge of the trial court directing him to send the record and proceedings in the case to the appellate court."—Siegelschiffer v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 248 F. 226, 228.

(2) A writ of error could be brought only on a final judgment, and was not the appropriate remedy where a court refused to proceed to the hearing and determination of a cause.—Green v. Underwood, Colo., 86 F. 427, 30 C.C.A. 162.

(3) Certiorari is regarded as in the nature of a writ of error when not ancillary to other process.—Staffords v. King, W.Va., 90 F. 136, 32 C.C.A. 536.

(4) The suing out of a writ of error was the commencement of a new suit or action to annul and set aside the judgment of the court below, and not a continuation of the suit or action below to which it related.—Gould v. U. S., Colo., 205 F. 883, 126 C.C.A. 1—Fitzpatrick v. Graham, N. Y., 119 F. 353, 56 C.C.A. 95.

(5) The writ could challenge not only jurisdiction of district court, but its findings on merits.—Meade der Act of September 6, 1916, 39 U.S.St. at L. p 727 c 448 § 4, Act of February 13, 1925, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861, error in this respect was disregarded, the reviewing court being required to take the action which would have been appropriate if the proper appellate procedure had been followed;[22] and by Act of January 31, 1928, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a, the writ of error in civil and criminal cases was abolished, all relief theretofore obtainable by writ of error being thereafter obtainable by appeal;[23] fur-

(6) Review as dependent on mode of review see infra § 297 a.

Writ, and not appeal, held proper to review:

(1) Judgment in proceedings for condemnation of property, under Food and Drugs Act.—Goodwin v. U. S., C.C.A.Ohio, 295 F. 856—3 C.J. p 313 note 23 [a] (2), p 324 note 93 [e].

(2) Judgment in action at law by a receiver, authorized by court, to recover a money judgment on an alleged contract.—Quarles v. City of Appleton, C.C.A.Wis., 299 F. 508.

(3) Ruling on a motion made at the close of the evidence in an action tried without a jury, which motion presents a question of law.—Keystone Steel & Wire Co. v. Kokomo Steel & Wire Co., C.C.A.Ind., 1 F.2d 790.

(4) Order directing the issuance of mandamus against a county to compel the levy of a tax to pay a judgment recovered against it.—Carter County v. Schmalstig, Ky., 127 F. 126, 62 C.C.A. 78.

(5) Under Judicial Code § 274b, Comp.St. § 1251b, cross petition setting up an equitable cause of action in an action at law might be treated by the appellate court as a counterclaim, and a judgment dismissing the cross petition reviewed on error.—Miami Paper Co. v. American Woodpulp Corporation, C.C.A.Ohio, 5 F.2d 408.

Appeal, and not writ, held proper to review:

(1) Order dismissing a plea of intervention in equitable proceedings.—Harry Bros. Co. v. Yaryan Naval Stores Co., Miss., 219 F. 884, 135 C.C.A. 454.

(2) Decree in action at law transferred to the equity docket on account of equitable defenses pleaded, and tried as a suit in equity without objection.—Levy v. S. H. Kress & Co., C.C.A.Okl., 285 F. 836, decree modified on other grounds 296 F. 697, and certiorari denied 45 S.Ct. 90, 266 U.S. 601, 69 L.Ed. 462.

(3) Proceeding to enforce an attorney's lien against a judgment in an action at law, in which the attorney by petition asked for equitable relief, and defendant by its answer set up the equitable defense of fraud.—Machcinski v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 272 F. 920.

(4) Where the only controversy in an action at law was on a cross petition setting up an equitable cause of action, a judgment dismissing the cross petition was properly reviewable by appeal.—Miami Paper Co. v. American Woodpulp Corporation, C.C.A.Ohio, 5 F.2d 408.

(5) Other decisions or rulings.—McPherson v. U. S., Ohio, 215 F. 35, 157 C.C.A. 331—Georgia & F. Ry. Co. v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Ga., 217 F. 755, 132 C.C.A. 559, affirming, D.C., In re Georgia & F. Ry., 215 F. 195—McNeil v. McNeil, Cal., 170 F. 289, 95 C.C.A. 485.

Decisions of the supreme court of Puerto Rico in law cases were reviewable by the circuit court of appeals only by writ of error.—Ana Maria Sugar Co. v. Quinones, 41 S.Ct. 110, 254 U.S. 245, 65 L.Ed. 246, affirming 251 F. 499, 163 C.C.A. 493, certiorari granted 39 S.Ct. 11, 248 U.S. 555, 63 L.Ed. 419—Société Anonyme des Sucreries de St. Jean v. Polanco, C.C.A., 6 F.2d 3.

Canal Zone

Under Act of Aug. 24, 1912 c 390 § 9, 48 U.S.C.A. § 1365, the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals of the fifth circuit over decisions of the district court of the Canal Zone was to be exercised in the same manner and under the same regulations and by the same procedure, as nearly as practicable, as in reviewing final judgments and decrees of district courts of the United States; law cases had to come up by writ of error, and equity cases by appeal.—Simkins v. Simkins, C.C.A., 271 F. 87—Panama R. Co. v. Beckford, 231 F. 436, 145 C.C.A. 430.

Virgin Islands

Since the distinction between causes at law and in equity was unknown in the courts of the Virgin Islands, and all judgments were reviewable de novo on the record by the supreme court of Denmark on appeal, such judgments might be similarly reviewed on appeal, both as to facts and law, by the circuit court of appeals, irrespective of whether the cause of action would have been in equity or at law in the courts of the United States.—Clen v. Jorgensen, C.C.A., 265 F. 120.

Where two writs of error were issued within the time limited for an appeal, the court could retain them both until final decision of case and transfer records in one to the other for the purpose of hearing.—Gould v. U. S., Colo., 205 F. 883, 126 C.C.A. 1.

Action on affidavits of bias and prejudice

The action of district judge in overruling affidavits of bias and prejudice "is reviewable in the Circuit Court of Appeals on error," and such action "may be also the subject of certain alternative writs to the Circuit Court of Appeals."—U. S. v. Gilbert, D.C.Ohio, 29 F.Supp. 507, 509.

25 C.J. p 970 note 25.

Use of both modes prior to statute

It was held in several cases, prior to the enactment of the statute, that the taking of an appeal and a writ of error to review the same adjudication was permissible where there was doubt as to the proper procedure, and that the reviewing court would dismiss the one which was ineffective and review the ruling in accordance with the rules of the applicable method.—Lockman v. Lang, Colo., 132 F. 1, 65 C.C.A. 621—3 C.J. p 343 note 73.

23. Effective date of statute

Since the statute was not approved until Jan. 31, 1928, writ of error is the proper method of review in a criminal case in which petition for writ of error was filed on Jan. 28, 1928.—Gold v. U. S., C.C.A.Minn., 36 F.2d 16.

Criminal cases

(1) Prior to the enactment of the statute, writ of error was the proper mode of review in criminal cases.—Gold v. U. S., supra—Sena v. U. S., 147 F. 485, 78 C.C.A. 27, reversing 12

ther, by Act of January 31, 1928 c 14 § 2, 45 U.S.St. at L. p 54, as amended April 26, 1928 c 440, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861b, the statutes regulating the right to a writ of error, defining the relief which might be had thereon, and prescribing the mode of exercising that right and of invoking such relief, were made applicable to the appeal thus substituted for a writ of error.[24] In this connection it is to be observed that the word "appeal" has been used in a variety of senses,[25] including appellate jurisdiction, as distinguished from original jurisdiction, without regard to the particular mode by which a cause is transmitted to a superior tribunal;[26] but an appeal has been said to be a rehearing by a superior court on fact and law,[27] its office being to remove the entire cause.[28] It is in substance a new trial,[29] although a continuation of the suit below, and not a new suit.[30]

The Rules of Civil Procedure for the district courts of the United States, adopted by the supreme court pursuant to Act of June 19, 1934 c 651, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 723b, 723c, superseded all former methods of appeal in civil cases to which they are applicable.[31]

Existence of other remedy. An appeal will not lie where the proper remedy is in the lower court,[32] and a writ of error did not lie where a different remedy for review, such as mandamus, was the proper one;[33] but an original extraordinary writ cannot be used as a substitute for appeal.[34]

A second proceeding may lie to review and determine questions which were not and could not be considered by the appellate court on the former proceeding.[35]

A cross appeal may be allowed where a judgment grants a litigant only part of the relief sought and denies the rest.[36]

Joinder of proceedings. Where separate and distinct causes are consolidated solely for the purpose of trial, and result in separate judgments, the judgments cannot be brought up for appellate review by one appellate proceeding.[37]

N.M. 397, 78 P. 58—De Lemos v. U. S., Ala., 107 F. 121, 46 C.C.A. 196, certiorari denied 21 S.Ct. 925, 181 U.S. 622, 45 L.Ed. 1032—17 C.J. p 12 notes 10–15.

(2) Prior to the enactment of the statute, a prosecution under the National Prohibition Act was an action at law, to be reviewed on writ of error, and not as on appeal in equity.—Sibona v. U. S., C.C.A.N.J., 294 F. 272.

(3) Where both appeal and writ of error are employed in a criminal case, the writ of error will be dismissed, appeal now being the proper remedy for review.—De Mayo v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 32 F.2d 472.

(4) In prosecution for violation of National Prohibition Act, appeal, not writ of error, is proper procedure for bringing up record of trial.—English v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 30 F.2d 518.

(5) Appeal and writ of error in criminal cases generally see Criminal Law § 1623 et seq.

24. Application of provision

(1) "The requirement of the Act . . . applies only to appeals which are substituted for the abolished writs of error; that is, to actions at law."—Territory of Hawaii v. Gay, C.C.A.Hawaii, 52 F.2d 356, 357, certiorari denied 52 S.Ct. 131, 284 U.S. 677, 76 L.Ed. 572.

(2) "The . . . section . . . [applies] only to cases where review theretofore had been obtained by writ of error."—Ross v. White, C.C.A.Tenn., 32 F.2d 750, 751.

32. Dismissal as to one party defendant available by answer.—Herrup v. Stoneham, C.C.A.N.Y., 15 F.2d 49.

Error in accounting need not be considered on appeal, where trial court prescribed proper formula and reserved jurisdiction to complete or adjust accounting.—Bromfield v. Trinidad Nat. Inv. Co., C.C.A.Colo., 36 F.2d 646, 71 A.L.R. 542.

Invalidity of rule

District court rule, requiring defendants to make a deposit to secure clerk fees before filing a defense, which was enforced against them, cannot be attacked on appeal by defendant from an adverse decree, but must be brought to the appellate court, if at all, by some direct challenge.—King v. Weiss & Lesh Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 266 F. 257.

Uncertainty of verdict

If, in trespass to try title, there is anything in the evidence regarding lot lines or fences or other matters tending to render the verdict vague or uncertain, it cannot be inquired into on an appeal raising a question as to its sufficiency in such respect, that being a matter which can only be dealt with by the trial court on a motion for new trial.—Cochran v. Schreiber, Tex., 107 F. 371, 46 C.C.A. 349.

§ 289. Right of Review

a. In general
b. Deprivation or loss of right

a. In General

(1) General rules
(2) Particular litigants and persons in particular relations

(1) General Rules

Ordinarily to be entitled to maintain an appeal in the circuit court of appeals a person must be a party or privy to the judgment, order, or decree complained of, and must have or represent an interest in the subject matter of the suit or controversy, and be injuriously affected or aggrieved by such judgment, order, or decree.

The view has been expressed that doubts respecting the right of appeal to the circuit court of appeals in border line cases should be resolved in favor of the appellant,[38] and it has been broadly stated that any person may appeal if he was a party to the action or proceeding below, either originally or because subsequently made a party, or if he is a party or privy to the judgment, order, or decree complained of,[39] but in the absence of a statute extending the right of review no one can appeal from a judgment, order, or decree, unless he was a party to the action or proceeding below, or to the judgment, order, or decree, or unless he is a legal representative of a party, or his privity of estate, title, or interest appears from the record.[40]

Interest in subject matter or controversy. It is also necessary to a valid appeal that appellant, even when a party, should have or represent an interest in the subject matter of the suit or controversy,[41] and a person who is merely a nominal party to an action, and who has no interest therein, either individually or in a representative capacity, cannot appeal.[42] Broadly speaking, the right of a party to an appeal must be based on a direct, immediate, pecuniary, and substantial interest in the particular litigation in which review is sought.[43] Where a tion of counsel, the cases are considered as one for the purpose of review and as requiring but one bill of exceptions, one record, one writ of error, etc., the circuit court of appeals will exercise jurisdiction to review the judgments.—American Central Life Ins. Co. v. American Trust Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 5 F.2d 71, affirming, D.C., American Trust Co. v. American Central Life Ins. Co., 5 F.2d 69, and certiorari denied 46 S.Ct. 20, 269 U.S. 559, 70 L.Ed. 411.

Separate appeals held not required

Where suits by members of the Agua Caliente band of Mission Indians to obtain adjudications that allotments of tribal lands had been made to them, and that they were entitled to trust allotment patents, were consolidated for trial, separate appeals by the Indians from adverse decrees were not required.—St. Marie v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 108 F.2d 876, affirming, D.C., 24 F.Supp. 237, certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 35, 311 U.S. 652, 85 L.Ed. 417.

38. U.S.—Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. George, C.C.A.N.J., 69 F.2d 871, certiorari granted George v. Victor Talking Mach. Co., 55 S.Ct. 82, 293 U.S. 544, 79 L.Ed. 649, reversed on other grounds 55 S.Ct. 229, 293 U.S. 377, 79 L.Ed. 439.

Parties as to whom action dismissed

Generally persons as to whom a suit has been dismissed or discontinued before judgment or decree cannot appeal from the judgment or decree subsequently rendered, or join in an appeal as they are no longer parties, and no longer have any interest in the litigation.—Armstrong v. New La Paz Gold Mining Co., C.C.A.Cal., 107 F.2d 453—Tuttle v. Claflin, N.Y., 88 F. 122, 31 C.C.A. 419.

Right or title to property

The right or title which a party seeking to appeal seeks to establish must be his own and not that of a third person.—Hamilton Trust Co. v. Cornucopia Mines Co. of Oregon, supra.

3 C.J. p 627 note 63.

Rights affected by appeal

As a rule an appealable interest in the subject matter exists whenever the interest of the party may be enlarged or diminished or his rights or liabilities affected, by the result of the appeal.—In re Michigan-Ohio Bldg. Corporation, C.C.A.Ill., 117 F.2d 191—Todd Engineering Dry Dock & Repair Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.La., 32 F.2d 734, reversing, D.C., The West Ira, 24 F.2d 858—3 C.J. p 625 note 25.

Lessee's interest sufficient

In an action by the United States, as guardian and trustee of tribal property of the Creek Nation, to quiet title to river bed oil lands, the lessee of a portion of the river bed claiming under a lease from the state, which intervened, and from the receiver, acting during litigation, was held to have an interest in the con-

decision directly affects only one of several defendants, he alone may appeal,[44] and parties who disclaim any interest in the subject matter in litigation cannot appeal, where no costs are taxed against them,[45] and as a general rule a party cannot prosecute an appeal where his interest in the subject matter or controversy has ceased, either before the suit was commenced or pendente lite, by conveyance, sale, assignment, release, or operation of law, so that the judgment, order, or decree does not prejudice him, although it may be erroneous and prejudicial to other parties,[46] but the rule does not apply where appellant, notwithstanding the conveyance, sale, or assignment, retains a sufficient interest to support the appeal.[47]

Necessity for prejudice. In order to maintain an appeal the person or party seeking review must not only be interested in the subject matter of the suit, but must also be injuriously affected or aggrieved by the judgment, order, or decree complained of,[48] and a party who is not aggrieved cannot prosecute a cross appeal.[49] In legal acceptation a party or person is aggrieved by a judgment, order, or decree so as to be entitled to appeal, whenever it operates prejudicially and directly on his property or pecuniary rights or interest, or on his personal rights, and only when it has such effect,[50] and the right invaded must be immediate.[51] Although there are some exceptions,[52] the general rule is that a plaintiff or defendant cannot appeal from a judgment, order, or decree in his own favor, since he is not aggrieved thereby.[53] However, since an troversy, entitling him to appeal from an adverse decree.—U. S. v. Hayes, C.C.A.Okl., 20 F.2d 873, certiorari denied 48 S.Ct. 116, 275 U.S. 555, 72 L.Ed. 423—U. S. v. Cimarron River Oil Co., C.C.A.Okl., 20 F.2d 873, certiorari denied 48 S Ct. 116, 275 U.S. 555, 72 L.Ed. 423—Riverside Oil & Refining Co. v. Object to establish liability for fire damage

Where the entire object of the proceeding to perpetuate testimony was to establish defendant's liability for damages resulting from fire while defendant was engaged in repair of a ship, a decree seeking not only to perpetuate evidence against defendant, but also to establish finally its liability for the amount awarded to the commissioner making the report in the event defendant should be held liable in any future suit for damages, made defendant "an interested and prejudiced party" entitled to appeal from the decree.—Todd Engineering, Dry Dock & Repair Co. v. Damages to property

Where court had jurisdiction of action for injunction and for an accounting of past damages because of misuse of right of way, sale of land after an adverse judgment would not deprive circuit court of appeals of jurisdiction as a court of equity, since equity will give complete relief where it originally had jurisdiction, even though the court is thereby called on to determine legal rights that otherwise would not be within the range of its authority, particularly since distinction between law and equity has been abolished in the federal courts.—Mendez v. Bowie, supra.

Judgment on one count

In action in four counts relating to a single injury, where verdict was for defendant on three counts but for plaintiff on fourth count, and single judgment was entered for plaintiff for the full relief asked, plaintiff could not appeal from such judgment or assign cross error in defendant's appeal therefrom.—Cochran v. appeal exists only by grace of the statutes and not otherwise, the mere fact that the interests of a person are adversely affected by a decree of court does not necessarily give him a right of appeal.[54]

(2) Particular Litigants and Persons in Particular Relations

The right of particular litigants and persons in particular relations to maintain appeals in the circuit courts of appeal must be determined in the light of the circumstances of the particular case.

A claimant who is permitted to appear in a suit and maintain his title to the property or fund involved is to be regarded as a party, and is entitled to appeal to the circuit court of appeals;[55] and a party who claims a particular fund or property has a right to appeal from an order diverting the fund for other purposes.[56] An appeal may be brought on behalf of an insane or incompetent person by his guardian, guardian ad litem, or next friend;[57] but an executor or administrator cannot appeal if he has no interest in the matter or if he is not aggrieved.[58]

A mortgagor or mortgagee may appeal from a judgment, order, or decree with relation to or affecting the mortgaged property if he is a party, and if he has an interest and is prejudiced or aggrieved by the judgment, order, or decree.[59]

Interveners. One who has been allowed by order of the court to intervene in a cause, or who has been treated as a party thereto, may appeal from a judgment, order, or decree therein affecting his interests,[60] but, as a rule, one whose application to intervene, or to be admitted as a party defendant, in a suit has been rejected by the court cannot appeal from the final judgment rendered in the suit,[61] although if the judgment, order, or decree is appealable he may appeal from the decision dismissing his petition or motion.[62] There can as a rule be no intervention for the purpose of an appeal after trial and judgment.[63]

Creditors. Where the creditor has intervened or otherwise been made a party, or a quasi party, to the action or proceeding, he may secure a review if interested and aggrieved,[64] but a creditor cannot appeal if he is not aggrieved by the judgment or order of which he complains.[65]

Private corporations and stockholders, etc. A private corporation, like a natural person, may appeal from a judgment, order, or decree affecting a matter in which it has an interest and by which it is aggrieved,[66] but if it is not interested, or is not aggrieved by the judgment, order, or decree complained of, it cannot appeal.[67] If stockholders, bondholders, or noteholders have been made parties or quasi parties to the litigation, or have become parties by intervention, they may appeal to protect

Intervening creditors of insolvent corporation

Creditors of an insolvent corporation, who were permitted to intervene below to oppose the payment to another of a fund in which they claimed an interest, have sufficient interest to enable them to maintain an appeal from the order for payment of the fund as against a motion to dismiss.—Pennsylvania Co. for Ins. on Lives and Granting Annuities v. Parties pro hac vice

A corporation's creditor, made a party pro hac vice to a receiver's proceeding for instructions, was concluded by an order granting the receiver's petition, and hence entitled to appeal therefrom.—West v. Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, C.C.A.N. Y., 70 F.2d 621.

Banks aggrieved by decree requiring payment of dividends

Banks which are brought into a suit for the purpose of requiring them to issue new certificates of stock to complainant, as purchaser under an attachment levy, and who disclaim any interest in the ownership of the stock and offer to abide the decision of the court, are nevertheless directly affected by a decree requiring them to pay to complainant dividends which they had previously paid to others, and may appeal therefrom.—John T. Porter Co. v. Java Cocoanut Oil Co., C.C.A.Cal., 4 F.2d 476, certiorari denied 45 S.Ct. 515, 268 U.S. 697, 69 L.Ed. 1163.

their interests,[68] although in any event where it appears that they are not interested or aggrieved the right of review should be denied.[69]

Purchasers of property. As a general rule, a purchaser at a judicial sale, by acceptance of his bid, becomes a party in such a sense, and acquires such an interest that he may appeal from an order setting aside or refusing to confirm the sale,[70] although an unaccepted bidder may be denied the right of appeal.[71]

Purchasers pendente lite and others succeeding to the rights of a party, either by act of the party or by operation of law, may generally appeal on intervening or being substituted as provided by the statutes.[72]

Receivers, commissioners, etc. As a general rule a receiver, commissioner, or other like officer may appeal from a judgment, order, or decree in a suit brought by or against him, or to which he is otherwise made a party, if he is aggrieved thereby,[73] and in cases in which, although he is not personally interested, an appeal by him is necessary or proper for the protection of the entire estate which he represents;[74] but he cannot appeal from an order respecting the conflicting claims of creditors or other parties, unless the court first authorizes him to do so,[75] and a receiver for a corporate mortgagor has no right of appeal from an order to surrender mortgaged property to purchaser at foreclosure sale, where no equity was disclosed or discretion abused.[76]

As a general rule a receiver may not appeal from a judgment, order, or decree for, or merely affecting, the payment or distribution of the funds or assets in his hands to or among those entitled thereto,[77] except where the receiver is permitted to appeal from a judgment allowing a claim and ordering payment thereof in preference to other claims.[78]

A trustee of property under a will, deed, or otherwise has such an interest or concern in a judgment, order, or decree affecting the interest of his cestuis que trust as entitles him to appeal to protect or recover the trust property or estate,[79] but he cannot appeal in any case where it does not appear that he is interested in the controversy or aggrieved by the judgment, order, or decree of which he complains.[80]

Assignment after judgment

One taking an assignment of a cause of action after final decree may appeal in his own name, on making himself a party by appropriate application, or in the name of his ancestor without being made a party, he being bound by all that was done before the assignment.—F. amount rendered against it[81] provided it is aggrieved thereby.[82] As a rule appeals may be maintained by cities, counties, and other municipal corporations, or quasi corporations to the same extent and in the same manner as by other litigants, if they are interested parties and are aggrieved by the judgment, order, or decree complained of,[83] but not otherwise.[84]

b. Deprivation or Loss of Right

A person may expressly or impliedly waive his right to appeal to the circuit courts of appeal, as by complying with a judgment, order, or decree, or by the acceptance of benefits accruing thereunder.

As a general rule, where an appeal to the circuit courts of appeal is a matter of right, the party aggrieved by a judgment or decree is not deprived of the privilege of having it reviewed by the fact that he is in contempt of court.[85] The statute giving a party the right to appeal from an interlocutory order or decree within a specified time has been held not to take away his right to appeal from a final decree.[86]

Express agreement. A party may, by express agreement or stipulation before trial or judgment, waive his right to appeal, either wholly or partially, and such agreement will be enforced by dismissal or quashing of an appeal taken in violation thereof, or by refusing to pass on questions covered by the waiver,[87] and a formal release of errors, for a valuable consideration, or under seal, will waive the right, or estop the party, to prosecute an appeal as to such errors as are covered by the release.[88] However, such a right will be held to have been waived only where the intention to waive or release clearly appears from the terms of the agreement or stipulation,[89] and is supported by a sufficient consideration.[90] If, however, the party has already perfected his appeal, and the agreement remains executory, nothing being done under it by way of dismissal of the appeal, he does not forfeit his right to appear and be heard on the appeal.[91]

Implied waiver or estoppel. A party may not only waive his right to appeal by express agreement or stipulation, but a waiver may also be implied from, or the party may be estopped by, an act, course of conduct, or agreement which is inconsistent with such right.[92] A waiver or release of errors cannot be implied, however, nor can an estoppel arise, from acts or agreements which are not clearly inconsistent with the right to appeal, as the right of appeal is favored by the law, and it will not be held to have been waived except on clear and decisive grounds,[93]

As to trustee

A stipulation, submitting a cause to a district court for final determination to which a mortgagee trustee is not made a party, and which does not appear to have been signed on behalf of the bondholders' committee by attorneys who represented all of the bondholders, does not show an intention on the part of such trustee to waive right of appeal.—Kane v. Offer to increase bid at foreclosure sale

A reorganization committee of bondholders, whose purchase of the property of the corporation at foreclosure sale was set aside on the ground that they were parties to a combination to suppress competition at the sale, did not estop themselves to appeal from the decree denying confirmation by offering to increase their bid.—Investment Registry v. Chicago & M. E. R. Co., Ill., 212 F. 594, 129 C.C.A. 130, affirming, D.C., 206 F. 488.

Decree not requiring condition

A decree in a foreclosure suit, which ordered an accounting, and provided that after the account plaintiff might file a petition for the entry of a foreclosure decree for the net amount found due, did not require plaintiff, as a condition precedent to foreclosure to concede reduction, and estop him to appeal from the order of reduction, since the decree, considering all provisions together, did not make plaintiff's right of recovery of the reduced amount conditioned on the filing of such pe-

and, where a judgment or decree involves distinct and severable matters or demands, a waiver or estoppel as to only one or a part thereof will not prevent an appeal as to the residue.[94] A party who voluntarily acquiesces in, ratifies, or recognizes the validity of a judgment, order, or decree against him, or otherwise takes a position which is inconsistent with the right to appeal therefrom, thereby impliedly waives, or is estopped to assert, his right to have such judgment, order, or decree reviewed.[95] As a general rule, if a party, after an order or judgment on demurrer to pleadings is given against him, under leave of court, amends the pleading demurred to, or substitutes another therefor so as to remove the grounds of the demurrer, he acquiesces in the judgment or order on the demurrer, and will not be permitted to appeal therefrom.[96] The right to appeal in such a case is not aided by a stipulation agreeing that the question involved should be submitted to the court of appeals,[97] but the mere fact that the court, on sustaining a demurrer, and without any request therefor, grants leave to amend does not bar an appeal, if the party against whom the demurrer is sustained does not act on such leave, but elects to stand on his pleading.[98] Also the mere fact that a judgment or order was formally entered or recorded on the motion of appellant is not a recognition of its validity and does not affect his right to appeal therefrom, such entry being necessary for appeal.[99] The right to appeal is not waived by taking steps to obviate the objection to maintenance of the first action and bringing a new action.[1]

It is well settled that a party is not aggrieved by a judgment, order, or decree, or ruling regularly rendered or made on agreement or otherwise, with his express or implied consent, and therefore he cannot appeal therefrom,[2] or from a judgment entered in conformity with facts admitted by him.[3] However, a party cannot be held to have waived error or to be estopped on the ground of consent, unless it is plainly made to appear that the judgment, order, or decree was in fact by consent, either by showing express consent or by showing facts from which consent may be clearly implied,[4] and, where the original judgment is entered after trial on the merits, consent by both parties that the judgment be amended to correct an error therein does not make the amended judgment a "consent judgment" so as to preclude an appeal therefrom by the losing party.[5] Also an appeal will lie where the question for decision was whether the trial court gave improper effect to the consent or stipulation of the parties, and whether the consent decree should have been entered at all.[6]

Where the judgment, order, or decree appealed from is of such a nature that compliance therewith leaves nothing on which a judgment of reversal can operate, so that only a moot question remains, the right to appeal to the circuit court of appeals is tition.—Gardner v. Grand Beach Co., C.C.A.Mich., 29 F.2d 481.

Proceedings before master

Parties at whose instance proceedings were had before a special master cannot be afterward heard to say that they will be injured by having expenses incurred paid out of the fund in the registry of the court.—Edgell v. Felder, Ga., 99 F. 324, 39 C.C.A. 540.

Removing objection to want of capacity to sue

The right of heirs of mortgagors to appeal from a decree, dismissing their suit to set aside the foreclosure of the mortgage and recover the property, for want of capacity to sue, because of bankruptcy proceedings, was not waived by obtaining an order extinguishing the bankruptcy proceedings and bringing a new suit for the same cause, as the order of extinguishment may not have been rightfully entered, and the second suit may be open to defenses not available in the first suit.—Franceschi v. Mercado, supra.

Remittitur

The fact that a party voluntarily enters a remittitur in compliance with the lower court's suggestion, rather than have a motion for new trial allowed, waives his right to appeal or bring error.—Chickasha Cotton Oil Co. v. lost,[7] but a voluntary compliance with the judgment, order, or decree of the court by payment or performance, either before or after taking the appeal, is not necessarily a bar to an appeal, particularly where repayment or restitution may be enforced, or the effect of compliance may be otherwise undone, in case of a reversal,[8] nor is the right to appeal waived by acts done by appellant in the exercise of a right which he has independently of the judgment.[9] Even where there is no actual or threatened execution, contempt proceeding, or other legal process, payment or performance of a judgment or decree is regarded as under compulsion and not voluntary in the legal sense, so as to bar an appeal, where it is necessary to the exercise or protection of a legal right, and in other analogous cases,[10] and, a fortiori, the payment or performance is not voluntary where it is made or done under protest.[11]

Where a party, knowing the facts, voluntarily accepts the benefits, or a substantial part thereof, accruing to him under a judgment, such acceptance operates as a waiver or release of errors and estops him from afterward maintaining an appeal from the judgment,[12] when the effect of the appeal may be to annul the judgment as a whole.[13] If the provisions of a judgment, order, or decree are mutually interdependent, so that the acceptance of benefits therefrom is inconsistent with the alleged invalidity in other portions, a party cannot avail himself of that portion which is favorable to him, and accept its benefits, and afterward prosecute an appeal to reverse such portions as are unfavorable to him.[14] However, the right to appeal is not waived where the controversy is a separable one and the different parts of the judgment, order, or decree are separate and independent, so that acceptance of a benefit from the part which is favorable is not inconsistent with an appeal from the part which is adverse.[15] So also there is not such a waiver or estoppel where the right to the benefit received is conceded by the opposite party or appellant is entitled thereto in any event, so that it could not be denied if the portions of the judgment or decree granting it should be reversed,[16] or in the other cases in which the acceptance of the benefit or partial enforcement of the judgment is not inconsistent with an appeal and re-

Partial set-off
If the payment of the entire judgment does not constitute waiver, a fortiori the offering of a prior judgment in partial set-off does not constitute a waiver of the right to appeal from a subsequent judgment.—Puget Sound Nav. Co. v. Nelson, C.C. A.Wash., 59 F.2d 697.

In bankruptcy proceeding
Where a trustee in bankruptcy, having recovered judgment, under Bankruptcy Act § 67, for net proceeds of sale of property under judgment within four months of bankruptcy, accepted payment of the full amount of the judgment, he was without right to prosecute an appeal because of dissatisfaction with the award of the net proceeds only, rather than the gross proceeds of sale, in that the judgment was based on inseparable claims, and benefit thereof had been received by accepting complete satisfaction.—Allen v. Acceptance of uncontroverted part of claim versal.[17] The acceptance of payment of a judgment for less than the amount claimed has been held not a waiver of the right to appeal where the judgment or decree failed to allow proper interest as damages,[18] or as a penalty.[19] In order that the acceptance of a payment of or on a judgment or decree may be binding, so as to bar an appeal, such acceptance by appellant, or by some one authorized to bind him, must of course be shown, and it must appear, on clear and decisive grounds, that the acceptance or receipt therefor was understood or intended as constituting an acquiescence in the judgment or decree.[20] Thus acceptance of payment by a party has been held not to estop a coparty from appealing where the interests of appellants are separate and distinct, so that one has no authority, express or implied, to bind the other by such acceptance.[21]

Waiver of objections to the right of appeal may be implied from an act on the part of appellee.[22]

a. Decisions Reviewable Generally

(1) In general
(2) Decisions of territorial courts, etc.

(1) In General

The jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeal depends on statutory provisions, and ordinarily an appeal will not lie to such courts unless a judgment, order, or decree has been actually rendered or made in the court below and entered in permanent form as a record of the latter court.

In the absence of express statutory provision to the contrary, an appeal to the circuit court of appeals will lie only where there has been a decision by a tribunal or officer vested with judicial authority, and acting in a judicial capacity when making the decision,[23] and mere preliminary or procedural

Judgment on motion of party's attorney
The mere recital in a judgment awarding a sum, that it was granted on motion of plaintiff's attorney, is no acceptance of a benefit under it which could affect his right to appeal.—Grant v. U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, C.C.A. N.Y., 22 F.2d 488.

A proceeding before a grand jury constitutes a judicial inquiry.—Cobbledick v. U. S., Cal., 60 S.Ct. 540, 309 U.S. 323, 84 L.Ed. 783, affirming, C.C.A., Palmuth v. U. S., 107 F.2d 975, certiorari granted Cobbledick v. U. S., 60 S.Ct. 299, 308 U.S. 547, 84 L.Ed. 460, 461.

An order or judgment of a United States commissioner is not within the appellate jurisdiction of a circuit court of appeals.—U. S. v. Various Documents, Papers and Books of Briggs & Turivas, C.C.A.Ill., 278 F. 944, certiorari denied U. S. v. Various Documents, 42 S.Ct. 271, 258 U.S. 617, 66 L.Ed. 793.

Orders of Securities and Exchange Commission
The statute providing that United States district courts shall have "ex-

orders of an administrative body have been held not reviewable.[24] Also the question whether any particular form of judicial action is appealable to the circuit court of appeals turns on the character of the proceedings which resulted in the order appealed from,[25] and, if a proceeding is regarded as a civil action, statutes relating to appeals in civil cases will apply.[26]

While it has been broadly stated that the circuit court of appeals has jurisdiction to review orders of the district courts,[27] the jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals to review judgments, orders, and decrees of the district courts depends on statutory provisions,[28] and such courts are without jurisdiction to hear an appeal from an order which is not appealable,[29] and, where the decision, order, judgment, or decree of the federal trial court is one as to which a direct review by the supreme court is authorized, a review must be sought in the supreme court and the circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction.[30] clusive jurisdiction" of violations of the Securities Exchange Act must be so interpreted, if possible, as to be consistent with other provisions of the act and not as to repeal provision for review in circuit court of appeals of orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission.—Wright v. Securities & Exchange Commission, C.C.A., 112 F.2d 89.

Decisions not reviewable

(1) Circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction of appeal from decision affirming registrar of property of Guayama's action denying record of deed, as no legal rights under the deed were ascertained or determined.—Luce & Co. v. Registrar of Property of Guayama, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 20 F.2d 115.

(2) The entry, ex parte, of an order authorizing a national bank's receiver to execute a contract for the sale of realty constituted neither a "suit at law" nor a "suit in equity," presented no "justiciable controversy," and involved the entry of no judicial "order" or "judgment" which could be reviewed by an appellate court, since the receiver's actions were purely "administrative actions" and the court's approval was merely an administrative "condition precedent" to the congressionally granted executive power to sell, not subject to judicial review.—Mitchell v. Joseph, C.C.A.Ill., 117 F.2d 253.

(3) When a case is referred for arbitration to a judge before whom it does not come in due course of law, no appeal lies from his decision.—Nashville Interurban R. Co. v. Barnum, N.Y., 212 F. 634, 129 C.C.A. 170.

Injunctive proceedings involving state statute

(1) Where no application for a preliminary injunction was pressed and no request for three judges was made in a suit to have a statute declared unconstitutional and defendants enjoined from enforcing it, an appeal from an order of a single judge was held properly taken to the circuit court of appeals.—Stratton v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co., Ill., 51 S.Ct. 8, 282 U.S. 10, 75 L.Ed. 135, reversing, C.C.A., St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Emmerson, 30 F. 2d 322, reversing, D.C., 27 F.2d 1005—New York State Electric & Gas Corporation v. Public Service Commission of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 102 F.2d 453—Peet Stock Remedy Co. v. McMullen, C.C.A.Neb., 32 F.2d 669.

(2) Whether a city charter is within the statute providing for a direct appeal to the supreme court in injunctive proceedings involving the statutes of a state or the action of a state officer or board under or pursuant to state statutes depends on whether that charter is a direct grant from the legislature, so that it is, in effect, a state statute although of local application, and a charter which is an act purely by voters of the locality within a power granted by a state constitution is not within the federal statute, so that an appeal to the circuit court of appeals was held proper. Uhlein v. City of St. Paul, C.C.A.Minn., 32 F.2d 748, certiorari denied 50 S.Ct. 240, 281 U.S. 726, 74 L.Ed. 1113, and followed in, C.C.A., 38 F.2d 1020.

(3) Where three-judge federal district court issued temporary injunction restraining state officials from enforcing a state statute but dissolved injunction on final hearing, and it was mistakenly assumed that defendants' motion for assessment of damages and costs against the plaintiffs and their injunction bond sureties should be passed upon by the three-judge court, judgment dismissing the motion was reviewable by the circuit court of appeals.—Public Service Commission of Missouri v. Brashear Freight Lines, Mo., 61 S.Ct. 784, 312 U.S. 621, 85 L.Ed. 1083, reversing, C.C.A., 114 F.2d 1, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 392, 311 U.S. 642, 85 L.Ed. 410, and rehearing denied 61 S.Ct. 938, 313 U.S. 598, 85 L. Ed. 1551.

(4) However, no appeal lies from an order of a single district judge acting without jurisdiction in rendering a final decree where an application is made for an interlocutory injunction in a cause involving the validity of state legislation.—Stratton v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co., Ill., 51 S.Ct. 8, 282 U.S. 10, 75 L.Ed. 135, reversing, C.C.A., St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Emmerson, 30 F.2d 322, reversing, D.C., 27 F. 2d 1005—Riss & Co. v. Hoch, C.C.A. Kan., 99 F.2d 553—Smith v. Dudley, C.C.A.Ark., 89 F.2d 453.

The circuit court of appeals may also review questions involving the jurisdiction of the district court,[31] and the former rules with respect to the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals of cases involving no question except the jurisdiction of the trial court as a federal court, the constitutionality of a federal or state statute, etc., which are no longer of any practical value because of the amendment of the statutes relating to a direct review thereof by the supreme court are discussed in 25 C.J. p 964 notes 59–64, p 965 notes 68–71.[32]

The statute does not fix any pecuniary limits with respect to the reviewing power of the circuit court of appeals,[33] except as to appeals from the supreme courts of the Territories of Hawaii and Puerto Rico, discussed infra subdivision a (2) of this section.

Rendition, form, or entry of judgment or decree. The existence in the record of an appealable judgment, order, or decree is a jurisdictional fact and an appeal will not lie unless such a judgment in the court below has been actually rendered or made.[34] The judgment need not be technical and formal, and immaterial defects in form will not render it unappealable,[35] but it must, in substance, show intrinsically and distinctly, and not inferentially, that the matters in the record have been determined in favor of one of the litigants, or that the rights of the parties in litigation have been adjudicated,[36] for an appeal will not lie from the verdict of a jury without an entry of judgment thereon,[37] or from the mere finding of facts or conclusions of law by the court not followed by a judgment or decree,[38] and an order or direction for a judgment or decree is not a final judgment, order, or decree, and, as a rule, no appeal can be taken therefrom.[39] Also, in order that a judgment, order, or decree may be reviewed by an appellate court, it must not only be rendered or made, but it must be entered in permanent form as a record of the court,[40] and the mere ruling, decision, or opinion of the court, no judgment or final order being entered in accordance therewith, does not have the effect of a judgment, and is not reviewable.[41]

An appeal will lie from a decree pro confesso on

Entry insufficient
The minute entry of the clerk of the district court, stating that motions had been argued and submitted, that the court filed its opinion, and that "said motions are granted", did not constitute entry of an order," "judgment," or "decree," from which an appeal could be taken.—Wright v. Judgments of state courts. The circuit courts of appeals have no jurisdiction to review the judgments of state courts.[43]

(2) Decisions of Territorial Courts, Etc.

In order to review final decisions of the supreme courts of the territories of Hawaii and Puerto Rico there must ordinarily be a substantial federal question involved, or the amount in controversy must be within the statutory requirement.

The appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeal of cases arising in territorial and other similar courts is regulated by statutory provisions,[44] and under the statute giving the circuit courts of appeals jurisdiction to review by appeal final decisions in the supreme courts of the territories of Hawaii and Puerto Rico in all cases, civil or criminal, wherein the constitution or a statute or treaty of the United States is involved, the appeal must necessarily involve[45] a substantial[46] federal question.[47] The circuit courts of appeals have jurisdiction in

Under act of Sept. 21, 1922, c 370 § 3, 48 USCA § 1356, amended Febr. 16, 1933, c. 91, § 3, 48 USCA 1356, prosecution for illegally purchasing public property from soldier in Canal Zone held not within court's appellate jurisdiction, since offense was not "felony" under article of Canal Zone Penal Code defining felony.—Weil v. Government of Canal Zone, C.C.A., 42 F.2d 448.

Puerto Rico

(1) Construction of local statute by supreme court of Puerto Rico held not binding on circuit court of appeals, where it would deprive that court of its appellate jurisdiction.—Petition of Zeno, C.C.A., 14 F.2d 418, certiorari denied Rossy v. Zeno, 47 S.Ct. 244, 273 U.S. 737, 71 L.Ed. 866.

"Lurking in record" insufficient

Appeal to circuit court of appeals from judgment of the supreme court of Puerto Rico would be dismissed for want of jurisdiction where no constitutional provision, statute or treaty of United States or any authority exercised thereunder was raised before or considered by supreme court of Puerto Rico, since it was not enough that a federal question was "lurking in the record."—Ramos v. Leahy, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 111 F.2d 955.

all other civil cases of appeals from such courts wherein the value in controversy exceeds the specified statutory amount, exclusive of interest and costs,[48] and the value of the object sought to be protected is the matter in controversy which determines jurisdiction.[49] It is not always the sum demanded or claimed which controls, but the jurisdiction depends on the amount or value which is actually in controversy between the parties[50] as the case stands in the circuit court of appeals,[51] and matters conceded, admitted, or waived by the parties are not considered in determining the appellate jurisdiction.[52] The appellants have the burden of proving the jurisdictional amount,[53] and the statutory provision authorizing affidavits or other competent evidence to show the amount in controversy where such amount is not otherwise satisfactorily disclosed on the record has been held a confirmation of the previously approved practice.[54]

Retrospective construction of statute

Appeal from judgment of Puerto Rico supreme court, in which it was claimed that court gave retrospective construction to statute relative to filiation, held not to involve any substantial federal question within jurisdiction of circuit court of appeals.—Succession of Tristani v. Colon, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 71 F.2d 374.

Sufficiency of complaint in criminal proceedings

Whether charge in complaint or information is sufficient under territorial statute does not involve federal Constitution or laws so as to support appeal from supreme court of Hawaii.—Kimbrel v. Territory of Hawaii, C.C.A.Hawaii, 41 F.2d 740.

Suit involving money and title to land

On appeal from a decree of the supreme court of Porto Rico, in a suit involving not only a money award, but also title to land, the value of the land enters into the amount involved for jurisdictional purposes.—Ayllon v. Gonzalez, C.C. A.Puerto Rico, 288 F. 28, certiorari granted B. Fernandez & Bros. v. Ayllon, 44 S.Ct. 5, 263 U.S. 691, 68 L.Ed. 509, and reversed on other grounds B. Fernandez & Bros. v. Ayllon, 45 S.Ct. 52, 266 U.S. 144, 69 L.Ed. 209.

Appeal only as to costs

Circuit court of appeals held without jurisdiction to entertain appeal from order or decree of supreme court of Puerto Rico affirming an order taxing costs, including attorney's fees, against plaintiff in a certain sum, since, after excluding costs, no sum remained in dispute.—Luce & Co. v. Cintron, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 73 F.2d 481.

Partition suit

Amount in controversy in partition suit was within jurisdiction of circuit court of appeals when decreased value from partition in kind would amount to ten thousand dollars.—Sauri v. Sauri, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 45 F.2d 90.

To examine corporate books

Mandamus to permit stockholder's examination of corporation's books did not involve five thousand dollars jurisdictional minimum, notwithstanding claim of damages from use of information.—Arias v. Usera, C.C. A.Puerto Rico, 38 F.2d 235.

Suit to vacate attachment

On appeal from judgment of supreme court of Puerto Rico refusing to vacate attachment in aid of judgment on note, the "value in controversy" as determining jurisdiction of reviewing court was not amount of the note, but either the value of property subject to the attachment, or the amount still owing on the judgment debt for which the attached property stood security, whichever was the smaller.—De La Torre v. b. Dependent on Nature and Scope of Decision

(1) In general
(2) Decisions as to particular matters
(3) Decisions in particular actions or proceedings
(4) Decisions of intermediate appellate courts

(1) In General

Except as provided otherwise by statute, in order that there may be a review of a decision by a circuit court of appeals, a final judgment, order, or decree must have been rendered in the cause; and ordinarily an appeal will not lie from the action of the lower court in the exercise of its purely discretionary power.

Since the jurisdiction conferred by statute on the circuit courts of appeals is to review by appeal final decisions, an appeal to a circuit court of appeals will not lie from an interlocutory decision except where it is expressly permitted by statute,[55] and in order that there may be a review of a decision, a final judgment, order, or decree must have been rendered in the cause,[56] and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, have worked no modification of this rule.[57] The appel-tion shown in the record, petition for appeal might have been disallowed and reviewing court would dismiss the appeal unless appellants would file affidavits within a specified time showing that value in controversy exceeded five thousand dollars.—De La Torre v. National City Bank of New York, supra.

Lashar, C.C.A.Conn., 266 F. 215.

Jurisdictional requirement

(1) The existence on the record of a final or an appealable interlocutory judgment, order, or decree is jurisdictional, and, although no objection may be made at the hearing and no motion may be made to dismiss, the court will, on its own motion, notice such question.—Loufakis v. U. S., C.C.A.Pa., 75 F.2d 627—3 C.J. p 437 notes 13, 15.

(2) This was held to be so regardless of how desirable and important a decision on the merits of the case by such court might be.—Florian v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 114 F.2d 990, reversed on other grounds U. S. v. Florian, 61 S.Ct. 713, 312 U.S. 656, 85 L.Ed. 1105, rehearing denied 61 S.Ct. 738, 312 U.S. 715, 85 L.Ed. 1145.

(3) However, it was held that the circuit court of appeals would pass on question whether action by purchasers of securities to recover considerations paid was barred by limitation under Securities Act, notwithstanding orders involving ruling on limitation question were interlocutory and hence not appealable, where injunction granted had effect of paralyzing functioning of trusts and district court passed on question of limitation in issuing injunction.—Pennsylvania Co. for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities v. Deckert, C.C.A.Pa., 123 F.2d 979, reversing, D.C., Deckert v. Independence Shares Corporation, 39 F.Supp. 592.

Purpose of statute permitting appeals only from final decisions, except in certain cases, is to prevent repeated appeals in same litigation and promote expedition in adjudication of controversies.—Satterlee v. Harris, C.C.A.Okl., 60 F.2d 490.

The words "final decisions," in statute authorizing appeals from such decisions and rule establishing procedure therefor, mean same thing as "final judgments and decrees."—Karl Kiefer Mach. Co. v. U. S. Bottlers Machinery Co., C.C.A.Ill., 108 F.2d 469.

late jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals depends on the finality of the lower court's action, and not on the possible effect of the appellate court's decision on the merits of the case.[58]

Interlocutory decisions are otherwise reviewable, in the absence of a permissive statute, only on appeal from or to the final judgment or decree that is rendered in the cause,[59] or when disobedience of the order results in an order punishing the party for contempt.[60] However, a decree interlocutory in form which settles the principal matter in controversy is to be considered as a final decree for the purposes of appeal.[61]

What constitutes final decision generally. The supreme court of the United States, it has been said, has not given the words "final decree," respecting the right of appeal, a strict and technical sense, but has given them a liberal and reasonable construction,[62] and ordinarily a judgment, order, or decree which determines the merits of the controversy, or the rights of the parties, and leaves nothing for future determination, is final and appealable.[63] A final judgment is not necessarily the last one in an action. A judgment that is conclusive of any question in a case is final as to that question,[64] and a decision on the merits does not lose its character as a final decree because it may itself become the source of future litigation between the parties.[65] Also, a final determination of the particular suit is a final judgment for the purpose of appeal, although it may not necessarily be a final determination of the rights of the parties.[66] A "final" decree has been held to be, or defined as, one that finally disposes of the rights of the parties, either on the entire controversy or on some definite and separate branch thereof;[67] one that ends the litigation in the trial court;[68] one which disposes of the subject matter of the controversy or terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits[69] and leaves nothing to be judicially determined;[70] one which terminates the litigation between the parties on the merits of the case, and leaves nothing to be done but to enforce by execution what has been deter-

In suit by lessee to obtain reappraisement of leased property on which rent was computed on percentage of valuation, decree providing that new appraisal should be had within specified time and that, if such appraisal was not had, suit might proceed to trial and further disposition, was "interlocutory" and not "final decree," and hence not appealable to circuit court of appeals, since value of leased premises constituting principal matter in controversy was not determined by decree and further judicial proceedings were contemplated.—Bennell Realty Co. v. mined;[71] one which disposes of all matters in litigation between the parties as shown by the record.[72] Further, an order, judgment, or decree which terminates the litigation on the merits of the cause, so that, if there should be an affirmance, the lower court would have nothing to do but execute its decree already entered, is final,[73] and an order is final and appealable if it settles substantial rights and is operative at once and makes no reservation as to its effect.[74]

It has also been held that the question whether a judgment, order, or decree is final and appealable is not determined by the name which the court below gives it, but is to be decided by the appellate court on a consideration of the essence of what is done thereby.[75] Accordingly, as respects the right of appeal, the retention of jurisdiction to enforce contribution or prorate the proceeds of collateral does not prevent a decree from being final,[76] and, also, the mere reservation of jurisdiction to file an opinion later on, and to make any further orders in the case, is not inconsistent with the finality of the judgment as regards the right of appeal by a person against whom the judgment was entered.[77]

There is no final judgment or decree for the purpose of an appeal as long as the cause is still under the control of the trial court by reason of the pendency of a motion for a new trial, for rehearing, to set the judgment aside, or otherwise,[78] but a stay of execution, where no motion for new trial has been filed, does not prevent the judgment from becoming final.[79]

Determination of part of cause or issues. As a general rule, an appeal does not lie where a judgment, order, or decree is made or rendered on only part of the issues or causes in the case, leaving others undisposed of.[80] However, it has been held that a decree may be "final" in the sense that it may be appealed from, although not "final" in the strict technical sense of the term,[81] and, although there is some early authority to the contrary,[82] it has been held that a party may appeal from a portion of an order or judgment and is not required to appeal from the entire judgment,[83] but there must be an adjudication final in nature of matters distinct from the general subject of the litigation,[84] and a judgment is a final judgment for the purposes of appeal only where it terminates the action with respect to such claim.[85] Where more than one claim for relief is presented, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, indicate a definite policy to permit the entry of a separate judgment if the claims are entirely distinct and such judgment will frequently be a final judgment and appealable, although no disposition has been made of other claims in the action.[86]

86. U.S.—Reeves v. Beardall, supra

While a decree to account is regarded as interlocutory and not appealable,[87] a decree, which is final in the sense that it settles the substantial merits of the case, is appealable, although an issue of compensation remains to be determined or the decree contains a reference or orders an accounting between the parties.[88] In this connection, however, the proper distinction is that, if the decree disposes of all questions within the pleadings, and nothing remains but to adjust an account between the parties in the execution of the decree, or there is a reference as to a collateral matter only, it is final for the purpose of an appeal;[89] but, if a reference is made for a judicial purpose, as to state an account between the parties, on which a further decree is to be entered, the decree is merely interlocutory and an appeal will not lie until after the final decree.[90]

A judgment, order, or decree which adjudicates and settles all the equities and substantial merits of the controversy is final for the purpose of an appeal, notwithstanding some incidental or dependent matter may still remain for adjustment, or further proceedings may be contemplated and necessary in the execution of the judgment, order, or decree,[91] although a judgment, order, or decree is not final for the purpose of appeal when it does not settle or adjudicate all the principles or equities of the cause, but only a part of them, or where what is left to be done is something more than is necessary in the mere execution thereof.[92]

The pendency of an undetermined collateral or ancillary proceeding in the same or another court does not affect the finality of a judgment, order, or decree so as to render it unappealable,[93] and ordinarily an order or decree, final in its nature, which is made in a matter distinct from the general subject of litigation, and which affects only the parties to the particular controversy and those whom they represent, may be appealed from.[94]

Finality as to all parties. The general rule is that an appeal will not lie, unless there has been a final disposition of the case, not only as to all the issues, but also as to all of the parties to the suit.[95] This —Modin v. Matson Nav. Co., C.C.A. Cal., 128 F.2d 194—Jones v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., C.C. A.Tex., 108 F.2d 123—Collins v. Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 106 F.2d 83, reversing, D.C., 25 F.Supp. 781.

The differing occurrences or transactions form the basis of separate units of judicial action.—Reeves v. Beardall, 62 S.Ct. 1085, 316 U.S. 283, 86 L.Ed. 1478.

Claims held separate

(1) Where action was brought on a note, and for specific performance of contract not to change a will or in alternative for damages, and for an accounting from one who allegedly held assets of deceased to which plaintiff was entitled under the alleged contract, but where the claim on note and on the contract arose out of wholly separate transactions, judgment for deceased's executor on the count for specific performance of the contract was a "final judgment" from which appeal could be taken.—Reeves v. Beardall, supra.

(2) An order granting motion to dismiss first and second causes of action based on violation of rights of privacy was an "appealable order," notwithstanding third cause of action alleging malicious libel remained standing.—Sidis v. F-R Pub. Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 113 F.2d 806, affirming, D.C., 34 F.Supp. 19, certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 393, 311 U.S. 711, 85 L.Ed. 462.

One claim

Where complaint containing two counts set forth only one claim for relief, based in part on the common law and in part on the Securities Act of 1933, neither an order granting motion to dismiss one count nor judgment dismissing such count leaving the other pending would be an appealable "final decision" of the district court.—Wright v. Gibson, C. C.A.Cal., 128 F.2d 865, dismissing appeal, D.C., 39 F.Supp. 980.

Accounting

(2) A decree requiring the payment of moneys or property into court for preservation, or the setting aside of conveyances has been held interlocutory.—Pulliam v. Christian, Va., 6 How. 209, 12 L.Ed. 408.

Rescission of contract

A decree rescinding a contract of sale was final as to all matters pertaining to it, so as to require an appeal based on the time of its rendition for review of failure to give personal judgment, notwithstanding matters reserved for findings by the master and a decree thereon.—Mayer v. White, C.C.A.Kan., 12 F.2d 710.

rule does not apply, however, where a judgment or decree is final as to all who have been made parties and who have been served with process or appeared, although there has been no disposition as to strangers to the suit or persons who, although named as parties, have not appeared or been served.[96] There are some cases in which it has been held that a decree may be final for the purpose of appeal as to one or more of several parties in favor of or against whom it finally settles the controversy, although it is interlocutory as to others, as where it disposes of every ground of contention between the parties, except as to the ascertainment of an amount in a matter separable from the other subjects of controversy and relating only to some of defendants, although retained for the determination of such separable matter,[97] or where it extinguishes every interest which the parties appealing have in the controversy, although it leaves matters undetermined as to others,[98] and it has been held that a judgment or decree dismissing the action or bill as to less than all of several defendants, or a nonsuit as to one of several defendants, is not final so as to permit an appeal,[99] although, where there is but one issue in the case, and a dismissal as to one party will have the effect of finding the other liable, a dismissal as to such party may be considered a final decree for purposes of appeal.[1]

Void judgments, etc. Judgments, orders, or decrees which are absolutely void for want of jurisdiction have been held not appealable.[2]

Discretionary action and matters of practice. While, as a general rule, an appeal will not lie from or to the action of a court in the exercise of its purely discretionary power,[3] although a matter may be addressed to the discretion of the lower court, if that discretion is not absolute but is a legal discretion to be exercised in accordance with established rules of law or principles of equity, the decision of the court is appealable to the extent that it may be reviewed for the purpose of determining whether there has been an abuse of discretion affecting a substantial right of the party complaining.[4] An order fixing an allowance has been held appealable notwithstanding the amount lay within the discretion of the trial court.[5] Orders involving mere questions of practice or procedure are usually within the discretion of the trial court or judge, and are not appealable.[6]

(2) Decisions as to Particular Matters

The rules determining whether a judgment, order, or decree is final in the sense that it is appealable have been applied as to questions of widely variant character arising either before, during, or after trial.

Where decisions are either interlocutory or discretionary, appeals have been held not to lie to the circuit courts of appeals from orders or decisions as to dockets, calendars, etc.,[7] or from an order consolidating two or more actions,[8] but an appeal lies from such an order where the circumstances are such as to render it final.[9]

Conduct of trial, etc. As a general rule no appeal lies from orders and decisions of the court pendente lite as to the conduct of the trial,[10] and, ordinarily, an order granting or refusing to grant a motion for a continuance, postponement, adjournment, or stay of proceedings is not appealable, either because it is not final or because it is a discretionary order,[11] and the proper remedy of a party prejudiced by a stay of proceedings is by application for a mandamus to compel the court to proceed.[12] However, an order suspending proceedings and staying the action is appealable where it in effect amounts to a final disposition of the controversy,[13] or where it can be considered to be one granting an injunction and thus within the purview of Judicial Code § 129, 28 U.S.C.A. § 227, discussed infra § 291.

Parties and process. While it is the general rule that interlocutory orders overruling or sustaining objections as to parties, directing, permitting, or refusing an amendment as to parties, or a substitution or addition of parties, or an order denying a motion to vacate such an order, are not appealable,[14] an order directing that several plaintiffs be dismissed as parties has been held a final order as to those plaintiffs.[15]

Ordinarily an appeal will not lie from an interlocutory or discretionary order or decree overruling a motion to quash or set aside the writ or summons in an action or the service thereof,[16] but appeals have been sustained from orders quashing or setting aside the writ or summons, or the service or return thereof,[17] except where such orders did not constitute final decisions.[18]

Pleadings. Generally an appeal will not lie before final judgment for the review of interlocutory or discretionary orders or decisions with respect to pleadings,[19] such as rulings relating to amendments or supplemental pleadings,[20] demurrers and exceptions,[21] and motions to dismiss or strike a pleading,[22] but such order or decree is appealable if it also dismisses the suit or otherwise finally disposes of it as to the party complaining.[23]

Intervention and interpleader. The general rule is that an interlocutory or discretionary order or decree permitting or refusing to permit intervention in the cause is not appealable,[24] this being the rule

Dismissal or grant of motion

Where a complaint sets forth, in separate counts, separate claims for relief, a judgment dismissing one of the counts is a "final decision" and is appealable, but an order which merely grants a motion to that effect is not a final decision and is not appealable.—Wright v. Gibson, C.C.A. Cal., 128 F.2d 865, dismissing appeal, D.C., 39 F.Supp. 980.

Right to file supplemental pleading

(1) An order granting leave to file a supplemental bill is neither final nor appealable.—Continental Oil Co. v. Osage Oil & Refining Co., C.C.A. Okl., 57 F.2d 527, certiorari denied 53 S.Ct. 17, 287 U.S. 616, 77 L.Ed. 535.

(2) But an order denying such leave is final and appealable, at least where relief can be granted only by a supplemental bill.—Continental Oil Co. v. Osage Oil & Refining Co., supra.

Dismissing amended and supplemental bills; cross bills

(1) An order dismissing amended and supplemental bills of complaint in equity is final and appealable.—Johnson v. Horton, C.C.A.Nev., 63 F. 2d 950.

(2) However, it has been held that, where a cross bill or cross complaint is dismissed, the order or decree is not appealable before final determination on the original bill or complaint.—Emery v. Central Trust Co., Ohio, 201 F. 965, 123 C.C.A. 287.

even as against a petitioner denied the right to intervene where the petition is addressed to the sound discretion of the court.[25] Where, however, the right of petitioner or applicant to intervene is absolute, or the denial amounts to a final denial of relief, the decision is reviewable,[26] and a judgment or decree on an intervening complaint or petition is final and appealable if it substantially and completely determines the rights of the parties.[27]

Orders or decrees on interpleaders are appealable where they dismiss the same or otherwise finally determine the rights of the parties;[28] but it is otherwise where they are merely interlocutory.[29]

Denial of rights to party

An order of interpleader, which aligns the parties, prescribes the method of procedure, and finally denies to one of the parties the right to assert a contract obligation against another, is a final order within the statute, from which an appeal can be taken.—Bank of Talwan v. Claim against United States

Where the United States levied distraint on taxpayer's property, taxpayer's assignees recovered judgment, collector of internal revenue made demand on judgment debtor for amount of judgment on ground that assignment was an attempt to evade the levy, and judgment debtor

ment or ruling on a plea or answer in abatement is not final in the sense that it may be appealed from before the final determination of the cause,[30] if a bill of revivor is dismissed, an appeal will lie, since this practically determines the original cause by leaving it in a situation in which no further proceedings can be had in it.[31]

Evidence, discovery, etc. While it has been held that an unconditional order to appear and to produce records is appealable,[32] it has also been held that orders for the production or inspection of books and papers in an action pending in court,[33] or requiring submission to a physical examination,[34] or for an inspection and survey of the locus in quo,[35] are not final so as to be appealable before the final determination of the cause. However, an order quashing a prior order or subpœnas for the production of records for examination has been held to terminate the particular controversy and is appealable,[36] and, if an order commits a witness for contempt for refusal to testify, it is a final order for the purpose of an appeal by him.[37]

A decree relating to the answering of interrogatories, which finally disposes of the proceedings, has been held final and appealable,[38] as well as a decree granting the relief or some part thereof asked in a bill of discovery.[39]

Dismissal, discontinuance, or nonsuit. As a general rule an appeal may be taken from a judgment, order, or decree finally dismissing the action or proceeding without plaintiff's consent or granting a judgment or final order of compulsory nonsuit, as such judgment, order, or decree is a final determination of the cause,[40] this being so even if the dismissal or nonsuit is without prejudice.[41] Of course, if the judgment, order, or decree is merely conditional, or otherwise not final, but merely interlocutory, so that further action is necessary, an appeal will not lie until after entry of final judgment,[42] and an order which merely grants a motion to dismiss an action is not a final decision and is not appealable.[43] However, an appeal will not lie at plaintiff's instance, either at law or in equity, from a judgment, order, or decree of dismissal or discontinuance entered at his request or with his consent, or from a voluntary nonsuit, as he is estopped by his consent.[44] The rule against appeal from a volun-

paid money into court and filed bill of interpleader, order requiring the assignees to interplead was not appealable under statute authorizing appeals in cases adjudicating "claims against the United States," since suit was not one against the United States but in reality by the United States to establish and enforce a lien.—Credit Bureau of San Diego v. tary nonsuit, dismissal, or discontinuance applies only to an appeal by plaintiff; defendants may be entitled to appeal therefrom.[45]

While an order dismissing one of several causes of action set up in the pleadings has been held appealable where such cause of action was separate and distinct from the others,[46] as a rule, where an action is dismissed as to one only of two causes of action set up in the bill, declaration, or complaint, leaving the other to stand, an appeal will not lie, unless authorized by statute, while the latter cause of action remains undecided;[47] but a decree of dismissal is final and appealable notwithstanding it orders a reference to a master in a collateral matter.[48]

Since there is no final judgment and the case is still pending, an appeal will not lie from a refusal of the trial court to grant a judgment or decree of dismissal or nonsuit,[49] nor, as a rule, will it lie from a judgment, order, or decree overruling a motion to set aside a dismissal or nonsuit.[50]

Verdict. While an order denying a motion to set aside a verdict has been held not appealable,[51] it has been indicated that refusal of such a motion is appealable.[52]

New trial, rehearing, etc. Generally an appeal will not lie from orders granting or denying motions for a new trial for errors of fact, either because such a motion is addressed to the discretion of the trial court, or because such an order is not a final judgment or order,[53] but such orders are ap-

Nonsuit because of adverse ruling

pealable for errors of law.[54] An order denying a motion to set aside a verdict, to amend the minutes, and to move for a new trial nunc pro tunc prior to final judgment has been held not a final order so as to be appealable.[55]

It is generally held that an order granting or denying a motion or petition for a rehearing is not appealable, either because it is within the discretion of the court or because it is not a final judgment, order, or decree,[56] and an appeal does not lie from an order denying a motion for reargument.[57]

Order or judgment directing payment of money. A judgment, order, or decree finally directing the payment of money[58] from a fund in court[59] has been held appealable. To come within the rule, however, there must be a final adjudication or direction of payment, and not a mere allowance leaving payment thereof to be subsequently ordered or decreed.[60] An order merely directing the payment of money into court is generally held to be merely interlocutory and not appealable.[61]

Priority of claims and distribution. In a suit to determine priorities and for distribution of a fund, or for a sale of property and distribution of the proceeds, a decree or order definitely determining the priority of claims or liens and directing distribution is final for the purpose of an appeal;[62] but it is otherwise, as a rule, where the priorities are not finally fixed or where rights in the distribution of the fund remain to be settled.[63]

Motion in alternative

Where a party moves in the alternative for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial, if the trial judge enters judgment notwithstanding the verdict and in the alternative grants a new trial on any of the grounds assigned therefor, disposition of the motion for new trial would not ordinarily be reviewable and only the action in entering judgment would be ground of appeal.—Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Duncan, Ark., 61 S.Ct. 189, 311 U.S. 243, 85 L.Ed. 147, modifying, C.C.A., Duncan v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 108 F.2d 848, reversing, D.C., 27 F.Supp. 4, and certiorari granted Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Duncan, 60 S.Ct. 809, 309 U.S. 650, 84 L.Ed. 1001, motion denied 60 S.Ct. 1073, 310 U.S. 612, 84 L.Ed. 1389.

Conditional order

The action of the trial judge in ordering a remittitur as a condition to denying a motion for new trial is not reviewable on writ of error.—Bristol Gas & Electric Co. v. Boy, C.C.A. Tenn., 261 F. 297.

Mistaken appeal considered

That appellant mistakenly appealed from order overruling motion for new trial could be considered purely a technicality, and in interest of justice and to avoid prolonging litigation for no good purpose, without intending to create precedent, circuit court of appeals could disregard motion to dismiss appeal and decide case on merits.—Milton v. U. S., C.C.A.La., 120 F.2d 794.

Jurisdiction of trial court

Where the question is whether or not the court has jurisdiction to grant or refuse a new trial, such decision is appealable.—Manning v. German Ins. Co., Iowa, 107 F. 52, 46 C.C.A. 144, reversing C.C., German Ins. Co. v. Town of Manning, 100 F. 581.

References. It is generally held that an order or decree which merely directs or refuses a reference to state an account or for other purposes, or an order refusing to set aside such an order, is not appealable, either because it is discretionary, or because it is merely interlocutory and not within the statute allowing appeals from interlocutory orders or decrees in certain cases.[64] Also, no appeal will lie from a judgment, order, or decree entered on the report of a referee, etc., where it is merely interlocutory,[65] but, where the order or judgment finally entered on the report is the judgment of the court, it has been held appealable.[66]

Orders and proceedings after judgment, decree, or prior order. In the absence of a statute to the contrary, decisions made in a cause after a judgment or decree therein are not appealable unless they come within the definition of a final judgment, order, or decree, or are in the nature thereof, and the error complained of originates therein, or unless such subsequent decision was beyond the power of the court.[67] However, an appeal will generally lie to review a judgment or order amending or correcting a prior judgment, order, or decree, or the record thereof,[68] or to review an order denying a motion to amend or correct a prior judgment, order, or decree.[69]

As a general rule an appeal will not lie, in the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, from a judgment or order opening, vacating, or setting aside a judgment, order, or decree previously rendered in the cause,[70] or from an order refusing to open, vacate, modify, or set aside the same,[71] but except in so far as the action of the court was pendent on the amount of other claims on the fund, a decree establishing a claim is not final.—Montgomery v. Anderson, Mo., 21 How. 386, 16 L.Ed. 160.

Enlarging order of reference

An order denying a motion seeking enlargement of an order of reference to permit a showing that the action of defendant, not served, in defense of the suit was such as to constitute estoppel in any other suit involving the same parties and issues is not an appealable "final order" since it did not terminate the litigation on merits between all parties.—Cleveland Trust Co. v. Order for judgment

Where an action at law is by consent referred to a referee "to hear and determine" in accordance with the New York statute, it is the practice of the federal court to make an order for judgment on the referee's report, but such order is pro forma only, and the fact that the judgment is entered by the clerk without an order does not deprive the defeated party of the right to have it reviewed.—Steger v. Orth, N.Y., 258 F. 619, 170 C.C.A. 73, certiorari denied 40 S.Ct. 11, 250 U.S. 663, 63 L.Ed. 1196.

within its discretion,[72] an order vacating a judgment, decree, or previous order may be a final judgment or order for the purpose of an appeal,[73] or reviewable for want of jurisdiction to make it.[74] However, an appeal will lie from a final judgment, order, or decree on a bill in the nature of a bill of review or an independent suit or petition to impeach and set aside a judgment or decree for fraud, error, or irregularity.[75]

As a rule, an appeal will not lie from a decision on application for leave to appeal, or other decisions of the trial court after judgment and in proceedings for review,[76] but an order vacating an order allowing an appeal is a final decision within the statute, and hence appealable.[77]

Decisions in relation to executions, etc. While a judgment or decree directing or authorizing a sale of land or of personal property is usually final and appealable,[78] even though it may permit the subsequent assertion and litigation of claims on the proceeds of sale,[79] it may not be final in so far as it adjudicates rights as to the proceeds.[80] While it has been held that an appeal lies from an order confirming or refusing to confirm an execution or judicial sale,[81] it has also been held that an order vacating a sale[82] and directing a new sale[83] is not appealable.

An order discharging from imprisonment a defendant held under execution against his person on a judgment in a civil action has been held a final judgment and appealable.[84]

Costs. While, as a general rule, an appeal will not lie to review a judgment, order, or decree in so far as it merely awards or denies costs, either because it is not final or because it is a discretionary matter,[85] judgments or orders awarding or denying costs, where the matter of costs is not a matter of

An order denying motion to vacate default judgment entered in conversion action, to set aside entry of default, and to permit answers to be filed, on ground that judgment was obtained without valid service of process and by fraud, was a "final decision" and was appealable, since the motion instituted in effect an independent action or proceeding.—Jackson v. discretion but of positive law, or where, although there is a discretion, such discretion is reviewable, have been held appealable as final judgments or orders.[86] In such cases, however, the order or decree, to be appealable, must be a final one.[87] Also, it has been held that an appeal will lie from judgments, orders, or decrees relating to the taxation of costs,[88] except where the matter is within the discretion of the lower court.[89]

Proceedings after remand by appellate court. Ordinarily where a case is decided on appeal by the supreme court or the circuit court of appeals and a mandate issued directing the lower court to enter a specified final judgment or decree and the court, in obedience to the mandate, enters such judgment or decree, no appeal will lie therefrom,[90] nor will an appeal lie for the purpose of having determined points which were previously decided, or might have been decided, in the prior proceeding.[91] It is otherwise, however, if the trial court renders a judgment or decree different from, or not in substantial compliance with, that directed by the appellate court;[92] and, where there have been new proceedings in the case, a second appellate proceeding may be prosecuted with reference to alleged errors committed in the new proceedings,[93] provided the deci-

Construction of statute or enforcement of decree involved

A decree in equity relating to costs alone is not ordinarily reviewable, but may be reviewed by an appellate court where it involves the construction of a statute or questions arising in carrying out a decree and mandate of the appellate court.—Stallo v. Wagner, supra.

3 C.J. p 537 note 33.

Extraordinary allowances

The discretion which a court of equity has to award or deny costs, and which prevents an order or decree awarding or denying them from being appealable, generally relates only to those costs in a suit which are denominated "general" or properly "costs in the cause," and not such as may be said to be extraordinary, as where the court directs the costs to be paid out of a particular fund in court, where an extra allowance is made without authority, or where, under special circumstances and a particular state of facts, it may direct counsel fees to be paid by a party either generally or out of a particular fund.—Motion Picture Patents Co. v. Steiner, N.Y., 201 F. 63, 119 C.C.A. 401—3 C.J. p 538 note 35.

Allowance before final decree in cause

In a creditors' suit, an order finally adjudicating the right of complainant's counsel to allowance of fees and payment of disbursements is appealable, although the principal action may not have proceeded to final decree.—Central Trust Co. of New York v. United States Light & Heating Co., N.Y., 233 F. 420, 147 C.C.A. 356.

Items included

An appeal lies to the circuit court of appeals on the question as to what items may be included in costs allowed the successful party.—Williams v. Sawyer Bros., C.C.A.N.Y., 51 F.2d 1004, 81 A.L.R. 1527.

To retax costs

Appeal from an order denying a motion to retax costs is properly granted, where the issue presented involves the court's power to make challenged allowances to witnesses.—Vincennes Steel Corporation v. Miller, C.C.A.Miss., 94 F.2d 347, modifying, D.C., Miller v. Vincennes Steel Corporation, 20 F.Supp. 553.

Right to tax challenged

Appeal, in which the court's right to tax costs against United States, not merely an abuse of discretion in so doing, is challenged, is proper.—U. S. v. Knowles' Estate, C.C.A.Wash., 58 F.2d 718, followed in U. S. v. Ward, C.C.A.Wash., 58 F.2d 1086.

Misapprehension of appellate court

Where reviewing court, in reversing judgment for plaintiff, after verdict for defendant on three counts and for plaintiff on fourth count, erroneously supposed that judgment had been rendered for defendant on the first three counts, and hence limited new trial to fourth count only, and stated in opinion that plaintiff was concluded as respects right to verdict on the first three counts, plaintiff could nevertheless appeal from subsequent judgment rendered for defendant on the first three counts, as against contention that issues on the first three counts were "res judicata."—Cochran v. M. & M. Transp. Co., C.C.A.R.I., 110 F.2d 519.

Determining conformity to mandate

While questions arising on an accounting before a master under an interlocutory decree are not reviewable by appeal until the master's report has been disposed of by the trial court, the master has no authority to open questions adjudicated by the decree, and, where that was entered on a mandate from the appellate court, the question whether it is being correctly carried into execution may be raised in the appellate court, either by appeal from an order of the trial court or by petition for mandamus.—In re L. P. Larson, Jr., Co., C. C.A.Ill., 275 F. 535.

Remand for determination of amount

Where the circuit court of appeals has affirmed a decree except as to one item and remanded the case to the trial court for determination of the amount thereof, the trial court's order pursuant to the mandate making such allowance was held appealable.—Clarke v. Hot Springs Electric Light & Power Co., C.C.A.Wyo., 76

sion appealed from is a final order, judgment, or decree.[94]

Other matters. Dependent on whether or not the judgment, order, or decree has been considered final, or interlocutory within the terms of the statute, various judgments, orders, or decrees have been held to be appealable[95] and other judgments, orders, or decrees have been held not appealable.[96]

An order making a substitution of attorneys finally determines the rights of the attorney for whom the substitution is made, and is one from which he can appeal,[97] but an order vacating an assignment of counsel has been held not appealable, because interlocutory and not final.[98]

An appeal does not lie from an order denying a motion for a directed verdict,[99] and the denial of a motion for a summary judgment has been held not a final order.[1] Where a party moves in the alternative for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial, if the trial court grants judgment notwithstanding the verdict and denies the motion for new trial, the party who obtained the verdict may appeal from that judgment.[2]

(3) Decisions in Particular Actions or Proceedings

Judgments, orders, or decrees in various actions and proceedings have been considered as final or not final within the rule relating to appeals therefrom.

In accordance with the general rule, a judgment or order which is not final, although made in a special proceeding, is not appealable.[3] An appeal will generally lie from a final judgment or decree denying partition, or from a judgment or decree entered on the confirmation of the report of commissioners making a partition, and from other final judgments, orders, or decrees in partition suits or proceedings.[4] The right of appeal in probate proceedings is statutory, and no appeal or writ of error will lie unless it is authorized by statute.[5]

Naturalization

An order granting or denying a petition for naturalization has been held a final decision within the statute relating to appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals.—Tutun v. U. S., Mass., 46 S.Ct. 425, 270 U.S. 568, 70 L.Ed. 738—Neuberger v. U. S., N.Y., 46 S.Ct. 425, 270 U.S. 568, 70 L.Ed. 738, answering certified questions, C.C.A., 9 F.2d 1020, certifying questions, D.C., In re Neuberger, 6 F.2d 387, reversed on other grounds, C.C.A., Neuberger v. Determining compensation in condemnation proceedings

An order in condemnation proceeding by the United States directing that compensation be determined by the courts rather than by commissioners was "interlocutory," and appeal therefrom would be dismissed where no compensation had been determined when appeal was taken.—U. S. v. 243.22 Acres of Land in Town of Babylon, Suffolk County, C.C.A.N.Y., 129 F.2d 678, affirming, D.C., U. S. v. 243.22 Acres of Land Situate in Village of Farmingdale, Town of Babylon, Suffolk County, State of New York, 41 F.Supp. 469, affirming 41 F.Supp. 805, affirming 43 F.Supp. 561, dismissing appeal 43 F.Supp. 805.

Nunc pro tunc entry of judgment

Where the only appeal taken by defendant was from the district court's memorandum and findings of fact and law, instead of the final decree subsequently entered, and the district court, after the time for appeal had passed, entered a nunc pro tunc order directing that the final decree be entered as of the date the court's memorandum and findings of fact and law were entered, such order is not appealable.—Rardin v. Messick, C.C.A.Ill., 78 F.2d 643, dismissing appeal, D.C., Messick v. Rardin, 6 F. Supp. 200.

Partial summary judgment

The granting of a partial summary judgment is not appealable, especially where the party is given a right to amend.—Leonard v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., C.C.A.Wis., 130 F.2d 535, dismissing appeal, D.C., 42 F.Supp. 369.

Proceedings for punishment of party

An order dismissing proceedings for the punishment of a party and his attorney for contempt in violating an injunction, but reprimanding them for taking unfair advantage of a stay, is a "final order," which can be reviewed by the circuit court of appeals.—McCall Co. v. Bladworth, C.C.A.Conn., 290 F. 365.

Whether judgments or orders with relation to arrest and bail in civil actions are appealable depends on the finality of the decision,[6] and an order refusing to vacate an order of arrest is not appealable as a final order.[7]

An appeal will lie from a final order or decree in a suit for an injunction as from other final orders or decrees.[8]

Attachment and garnishment. As a rule judgments or orders in attachment proceedings are subject to appeal or writ of error if they are final,[9] but not if they are merely interlocutory,[10] or if they are discretionary.[11] It is generally held that an appeal will not lie from or to an order made before final judgment either dissolving, quashing, or abating an attachment, or vacating a levy thereof,[12] and orders on motions to quash an attachment have sometimes been held not appealable or reviewable because discretionary.[13] If the judgment or order is a final one and not discretionary, appeal will lie as in other cases of final judgment, and in a number of cases orders finally dissolving or discharging an attachment have been held appealable as final judgments in the attachment proceeding, although the main action is still pending.[14] A judgment in favor of intervening or interpleading claimants in an attachment suit is final and appealable.[15]

Receivers, etc. Except as provided by statute, see infra § 291, an appeal will not lie from mere interlocutory, discretionary, or administrative orders or decrees in receivership or trustee proceedings,[16] such as orders as to payments to or by the receiver, etc.[17] However, an appeal will lie from final orders or decrees affecting substantial rights, either of the parties to the proceedings, of the receiver or trustee, or of intervening third persons claiming rights in the property[18] such as an order refusing

Statutes construed

(2) Order authorizing a railroad receiver to issue certificates and providing that they shall be a lien on the property prior to preëxisting liens.—Bibber-White Co. v. White River Valley Electric R. Co., Vt., 115 F. 786, 53 C.C.A. 282.

(3) Decree in receivership proceeding, which adjudicated the specific amounts of mortgage debts due mortgagee bank, determined tax priorities asserted by the government of Puerto Rico, and provided that all matters not disposed of were reserved for further adjudication, that any party might apply to the court for further relief in respect of matters not specifically provided for, and that for the purpose of making any further order the term of court was continued, was a "final decree" and was appealable in respect of the tax priorities.—People of Puerto Rico v. Bank of Nova Scotia, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 116 F.2d 379, certiorari denied 62 S.Ct. 56, 314 U.S. 615, 86 L.Ed. 495.

(4) An order of the supreme court of Puerto Rico appointing a receiver for a dissolved corporation was a "final decision" from which an appeal could be taken to the circuit court of appeals under statute, where the supreme court held that all acts done after date of judgment dissolving corporation were legally void, denied asserted right of directors as statutory liquidating trustees to possess and administer corporate property, and authorized receiver without further order of court to borrow money and as security therefor to create liens which would take precedence over property interests of shareholders.—Rubert Hermanos, Inc. v. People of Puerto Rico, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 118 F.2d 752, certiorari granted People of Puerto Rico v. Rubert Hermanos, Inc., 62 S.Ct. 61, 314 U.S. 589, 86 L.Ed. 475, certiorari denied Rubert Hermanos, Inc., v. People of Puerto Rico. 62 S.Ct. 80, 314 U.S. 641, 86 L.Ed. 514.

(5) Decree, allowing claim, filed with corporation's receiver, in part, and denying preference thereof, was held "final decree," and hence appealable, although not terminating receivership proceeding.—Gripton v. Richardson, C.C.A.Cal., 82 F.2d 313.

Leave to apply at the foot of a decree in a receivership proceeding for further relief is very usual, and does not prevent the decree from being final.—American Engineering Co. v. Metropolitan By-Products Co., C.C.A. N.Y., 275 F. 40.

Ancillary interpleader suit

(1) An order denying a motion to vacate a temporary injunction order made after hearing is appealable only if based on new facts, not on what was essentially a rehearing of the former motion.—Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York v. Eybro Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 58 F.2d 165, dismissing appeal, D.C., Marine Midland Trust Co. v. Irving Trust Co., 56 F.2d 385.

(2) In an ancillary interpleader suit, an order denying a motion to vacate an injunction restraining prosecution of a replevin action pendente lite being essentially made on motion for rehearing, notwithstanding the fact, not given as ground for motion, that movent's codefendant, after injunction, made no claim to res, is not appealable.—Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York v. Eybro Corporation, supra.

Arbitration

(1) An order appointing arbitrators is final and appealable.—Krauss Bros. Lumber Co. v. Louis Bossert & Sons, C.C.A.N.Y., 62 F.2d 1004.

(2) Where arbitration agreement contained no provision whereby court under the act would be authorized to enter summary judgment on the arbitrators' award, district court's order directing that arbitration proceed within the district in accordance with agreement was a "final order," and was appealable.—Continental Grain Co. v. Dant & Russell, C.C.A.Or., 118 F.2d 967.

(3) An order setting aside an award made on a submission in pais is usually appealable.—Nolan v. Colorado Cent. Consol. Min. Co., Colo., 63 F. 930, 12 C.C.A. 585.

Partnership settlements

In an action for a partnership settlement, where it was doubtful whether the decree determining the main controversy was final for the purposes of appeal, an appeal from subsequent decree after sale of property, etc., would not be dismissed.—Halfpenny v. Miller, W.Va., 232 F. 113, 146 C.C.A. 305.

Release of property seized under search warrant

A judgment determining the validity of a seizure under a search warrant is final, and reviewable at once.—Atlanta Enterprises v. Crawford, D.C.Ga., 22 F.2d 834.

Grand jury proceeding

(1) While a proceeding before a grand jury should be safeguarded against undue interruption by intermediate appeals notwithstanding a grand jury proceeding has no defined litigants and that none may emerge from it, an order of the district court denying a motion to quash a subpœna duces tecum directing a witness to appear and produce documents before a United States grand jury is not appealable to the circuit

pendent proceeding and the order refusing the return of the property is final and appealable,[23] and a judgment or order refusing to quash a search warrant and to suppress evidence obtained thereunder, where no indictment was pending, has been held reviewable as against a contention that it was not final.[24]

(4) Decisions of Intermediate Appellate Courts

The general rule that only final judgments, orders, and decrees are appealable has been applied in appeals to the circuit court of appeals from decisions of intermediate appellate courts.

To authorize an appeal to the circuit court of appeals from the decision of an intermediate appellate court, the judgment, order, or decree of the latter court must be a final one.[25] The decision of an intermediate appellate court remanding the cause for further proceedings has been held not appealable,[26] especially where the intermediate appellate court passed on only one branch of the case,[27] although a judgment or decree remanding the cause with directions to dismiss the bill has been held appealable.[28]

§ 291. —— Interlocutory Orders or Decrees as to Injunctions and Receivers

Ordinarily an appeal may, under the statutes, be taken to the circuit court of appeals to review interlocutory orders or decrees of the district court granting, continuing, modifying, or refusing an injunction, or refusing an application to dissolve or modify an injunction, and to review an interlocutory order or decree appointing a receiver, or refusing an order to wind up a pending receivership.

Unless such interlocutory order or decree was entered solely in compliance with a mandate of an appellate court having jurisdiction to issue it,[29] or the order is made in a case in which a direct review by the supreme court may be had,[30] an appeal may be taken to the circuit court of appeals, under Judicial Code §§ 128, 129, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 225, 227, to review interlocutory orders of the district court granting, continuing, modifying, or refusing an injunction, or refusing an application to dissolve or modify an injunction,[31] and to review an interlocucourt of appeals as a "final decision."—Cobbledick v. U. S., 60 S.Ct. 540, 309 U.S. 323, 84 L.Ed. 783, affirming, C.C.A., Palmuth v. U. S., 107 F.2d 975, certiorari granted Cobbledick v. U. S., 60 S.Ct. 299, 308 U.S. 547, 84 L.Ed. 460, 461—International Agricultural Corporation v. Pearce, C.C.A.N.C., 113 F.2d 964—Goodman v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 108 F.2d 516, 127 A.L.R. 265.

(2) Rule that refusal of a court to quash subpœna duces tecum does not constitute a "final decision" from which appeal will lie cannot be avoided by recasting application for review of order denying motion to quash in form of a motion for preliminary injunction.—International Agricultural Corporation v. Pearce, C.C.A.N.C., 113 F.2d 964.

Judgment held final

The judgment of an appellate court, directing entry by the trial court of a judgment for a specific sum of money, with a proviso that, if certain judgments should be released by a party, the amount thereof should not be included in the judgment, was held a final judgment.—De Fries v. Scott, C.C.A.Hawaii, 268 F. 952, reversing Scott v. Pilipo, 23 Hawaii 739, and certiorari denied Scott v. De Fries, 41 S.Ct. 538, 256 U.S. 700, 65 L.Ed. 1178.

25 C.J. p 962 note 42 [d].

Directing amendment to render decree final

The circuit court of appeals has not the power to direct the supreme court of Hawaii to correct a judgment reversing a decree, so as to set forth what further action would be compatible to the decision, and to direct the lower judge to take such action, so as to render the decree final in form and appealable.—Rumsey v. New York L. Ins. Co., C.C.A. Hawaii, 267 F. 554, certiorari denied 41 S.Ct. 216, 254 U.S. 654, 65 L.Ed. 459.

30. Validity of state statute

(1) Where the unconstitutionality of a state statute is the basis of an application for an injunction, and such application is heard by three judges, an appeal goes direct to the supreme court and cannot be taken to the circuit court of appeals.—Jackson v. Cravens, Fla., 238 F. 117, 151 C.C.A. 193.

(2) No appeal lies from an order of a single district judge acting without jurisdiction in granting an interlocutory injunction where an application is made therefor in a cause involving the validity of state legislation.—Stratton v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co., Ill., 51 S.Ct. 8, 282 U.S. 10, 75 L.Ed. 135, reversing, C.C.A., St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Emerson, 30 F.2d 322, which reversed, D.C., 27 F.2d 1005—Smith v. Dudley, C.C.A.Ark., 89 F.2d 453.

tory order or decree appointing a receiver,[32] or refusing an order to wind up a pending receivership or to take the appropriate steps to accomplish the purposes thereof, such as directing a sale or other disposal of property held thereunder.[33] However, a party need not appeal from such interlocutory order or decree in order to protect his rights,[34] since the statute does not take away his right to appeal from a final decree, as shown supra § 289 b.

While the statute is remedial and should be liberally construed, the right to proceed thereunder should be clear,[35] and the statute has been held to Appeal to circuit court of appeals from interlocutory orders as to injunctions in patent infringement suits see the C.J.S. title Patents § 335, also 48 C.J. p 410 note 94.

Dismissal of counterclaim

(1) An order dismissing a counterclaim wherein an injunction was asked has been held appealable.—Meeker v. Baxter, C.C.A.N.Y., 83 F.2d 183.

(2) However, it has also been held that such an order was not so clearly a refusal of an interlocutory injunction as to authorize an appeal.—Allied Metal Stamping Co. v. Standard Electric Equipment Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 55 F.2d 221, dismissing appeal, D.C., 53 F.2d 646.

(3) An order dismissing a counterclaim set up in an answer in equity is not a final order, nor is it appealable, although the counterclaim asked, inter alia, for injunctive relief, where no injunction was formally asked for, and no question of the right to such relief raised.—Radio Corporation of America v. J. H. Bunnell & Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 298 F. 62.

Restraint imposed by statute

Motion made in district court to vacate subpœnas served on third parties believed to have property of judgment debtor, and indorsed with section of New York statute enjoining such parties from transferring such property, was motion to dissolve injunction, and appeal lay to circuit court of appeals from order denying motion, notwithstanding statute and not court imposed restraint, but appeal did not lie from order denying motion to vacate unindorsed witness subpœnas.—Capital Co. v. Fox, C.C.A.N.Y., 85 F.2d 97, 106 A.L.R. 376, affirming, D.C., 15 F. Supp. 677.

From district court of Puerto Rico

Circuit court of appeals for first circuit was empowered under statute to review only final judgments or decrees on appeal in equity cases from federal district court for Puerto Rico, interlocutory order, such as one granting or dissolving injunction, not being appealable.—Gorbea v. Soto Gras, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 82 F.2d 634—25 C.J. p 967 note 89 [a].

Appointment pendente lite within rule

U.S.—A. & R. Realty Co. v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A. Mo., 95 F.2d 703.

Refusal to discharge as appointment

Order refusing to discharge receiver appointed by state court before removal was held appealable as having effect of appointment by federal court.—McLeod v. Hayward, C.C.A. Fla., 17 F.2d 900.

Ancillary receiver; trustee-receiver

(1) Statute permitting appeal from interlocutory order "appointing a receiver" refers only to ordinary equity receiver or similar official of statutory authority, and order appointing "trustee-receiver" to enforce double liability of insolvent joint stock land bank's stockholders was held not appealable, being neither final order nor interlocutory order "appointing a receiver."—Martin v. Partridge, C.C.A.Mo., 64 F.2d 591.

(2) In suit by creditors to enforce statutory liability of resident shareholders of foreign joint stock land bank, decree appointing ancillary receiver was held appealable under statute allowing appeals from certain interlocutory decrees, since district court lacked power to appoint receiver, and receiver actually appointed had only chancery powers.—Holmberg v. Carr, C.C.A.N.Y., 86 F.2d 727.

33. U.S.—Lincoln Printing Co. v. Middle West Utilities Co., C.C.A. Ill., 74 F.2d 779, affirming, D.C., 6 F.Supp. 663, and certiorari denied Pollak v. McCulloch, 55 S.Ct. 659, 295 U.S. 746, 79 L.Ed. 1691.

25 C.J. p 967 note 88.

Hearing

(1) Circuit court of appeals was held to have jurisdiction of appeal from order denying ex parte application for rule nisi for an injunction pendente lite with stay meanwhile, as the court denied everything that could have been granted at a hearing.—Association for Legalizing American Lotteries v. Goldman, C.C.A.N.Y., 85 F.2d 67.

(2) Ex parte order granting, on emergency, temporary receivership, and providing for early hearing touching its permanency, is not appealable, but, if ex parte order appoints permanent receivers deliberately and finally with no provision apply only to injunctions issued in equity.[36] Although, where an injunction was inadvertently included in an interlocutory decree, it was held that an appeal might be taken therefrom,[37] an order or decree has been held not appealable where plaintiff did not seek an injunction, and no hearing on proceedings for injunction was had,[38] or where the injunction did not materially affect the party's interests,[39] or where it was wholly surplusage and without legal effect.[40] A fortiori, an order of decree is not appealable where it contains no provision restraining or enjoining anyone.[41]

Although a mere temporary stay imposed by the district court as part of its control over the cause pending before it has been held not appealable,[42] a judgment or order transferring a count to another docket has been held appealable as an interlocutory judgment granting an injunction restraining further proceedings at law;[43] and, when an order is made requiring or refusing to require that an equitable defense shall first be tried, the court in effect grants or refuses an injunction restraining proceedings at law precisely as if the court had acted on a bill of complaint in a separate suit for the same purpose, and such order, although interlocutory, is appealable.[44] Also, a decree vacating an order transfer-for hearing, there is refusal in advance to hear, which is sufficient to justify appeal.—Marion Mortg. Co. v. Edmunds, C.C.A.Fla., 64 F.2d 248.

(3) Ex parte order appointing receivers and subsequent order refusing to complete hearing on motion to vacate previous order and continuing case until return of another judge was held appealable as operating to reappoint receivers "upon a hearing" within statute.—Marion Mortg. Co. v. Edmunds, supra.

(4) However, the phrase has been held not used in a technical sense, and an appeal lies from an order appointing a receiver, although the hearing was ex parte and without notice to defendant, the purpose of the statute being to give the right of appeal to a defendant whose property is taken from his possession by such order.—Joseph Dry Goods Co. v. Hecht, Ga., 120 F. 760, 57 C.C.A. 64.

(5) Where a receiver was appointed ex parte and without notice or a hearing, an appeal lies from a subsequent order confirming such appointment, made on the hearing of an application by defendant for the discharge of the receiver, such order being the first adjudication of the question of the propriety of such appointment made "upon a hearing" and by a fair construction of the statute the one from which it is intended to give the right of appeal.—Pacific Northwest Packing Co. v. Allen, Wash., 109 F. 515, 48 C.C.A. 521.

Denial of motion to remand
On appeal from order enjoining complainant from proceeding further in state court after removal to federal court where trial court had also denied motion to remand, removability of cause is subject to review.—Cray, McFawn & Co. v. Hegarty, Conroy & Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 85 F.2d 516.

Refusal to remove attorneys
The statute does not authorize an appeal from an order refusing to remove attorneys appearing for a codefendant.—Croissant v. Adams, C.C.A. Ill., 27 F.2d 48.

Consent of one defendant
Where one defendant consented to interlocutory decree providing for injunction and for reference to master for accounting, order denying motion for enlargement of order of reference to permit showing that action of defendant, not served, in defense of suit was such as to constitute estoppel in any other suit involving same parties and issues was not appealable under statute regulating appeals in injunction proceeding.—Cleveland Trust Co. v. Simmons Mfg. Co., supra.

Denial of motion to stay ancillary interpleader suit was held not appealable because such a stay is not an injunction within the statute.—Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York v. Eybro Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 58 F.2d 165, dismissing appeal, D.C., Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York v. Irving Trust Co., 56 F.2d 385.

Radio Corporation of America, C.C.A.Mass., 76 F.2d 943, certiorari granted Radio Corporation of America v. Raytheon Mfg. Co., 56 S.Ct. 99, 296 U.S. 557, 80 L.Ed. 393, and affirmed 56 S.Ct. 297, 296 U.S. 459, 80 L.Ed. 327, followed in, C.C.A., Berning v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 92 F.2d 997.

Dismissal of counterclaim
Where defendant in action at law filed a counterclaim of equitable character, order dismissing counterclaim without hearing on merits was held equivalent to denial of application to stay lawsuit and hence appealable.—Kneberg v. H. L. Green Co., C.C.A.Ill., 89 F.2d 100.

Defense immaterial
Question whether terms of contract sued on prevented federal court from decreeing specific performance of arbitration agreement was held immaterial in determining whether circuit court of appeals had jurisdiction of appeal from stay order based on special defense setting up arbitration agreement.—Shanferoke Coal & Supply Corporation v. Westchester Service Corporation, N.Y., 55 S.Ct. 313, 293 U.S. 449, 79 L.Ed. 583, affirming, C.C.A., 70 F.2d 297, certiorari granted 55 S.Ct. 95, 293 U.S. 541, 79 L.Ed. 647.

Rule in earlier cases
(1) In some early cases, a contrary conclusion was reached.—Cox v. Graves, Knight & Graves, C.C.A.Va., 55 F.2d 217—U. S. v. Amalgamated ring a case from law to equity has been held appealable as an interlocutory order dissolving an injunction.[45] While an order merely transferring a cause from the equity docket to the law docket has been held not appealable,[46] where the equity suit is for an injunction, an order transferring it to the law side of the court, thereby in effect denying the injunction, has been held appealable.[47]

An appeal will not lie from a temporary restraining order granted without hearing, incident to an order to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be granted,[48] or from an order refusing to dissolve a temporary restraining order,[49] but an appeal will lie from an order on a hearing of both sides, in effect granting a preliminary injunction, although in terms continuing a temporary restraining order.[50]

An interlocutory order vacating an order appointing a receiver is not appealable,[51] nor is an order denying a motion to vacate a receivership appealable as one refusing to wind up a pending receivership,[52] and an order authorizing a receiver to lease property has been held not an order refusing to take appropriate steps to wind up a pending receivership.[53]

§ 292. Procedure in General

a. General principles
b. Presentation and reservation in lower court of grounds of review
c. Parties

a. General Principles

The procedure on appeal to the circuit courts of appeals is governed exclusively by the acts of congress and the rules and practice of the federal courts.

The circuit courts of appeals are, with respect to the review of judgments and decrees, controlled exclusively by the acts of congress and the rules and practice of the federal courts without regard to state statutes or practice.[54] Where the judgment or order from which the appeal is attempted is criminal in nature, appeal under the criminal appeals rules is proper and necessary.[55]

b. Presentation and Reservation in Lower Court of Grounds of Review

(1) Necessity and sufficency in general
(2) Objections and motions and rulings thereon
(3) Exceptions
(4) Motions for new trial

(1) Necessity and Sufficiency in General

As a general rule, questions not raised and properly preserved for review in the trial court will not be considered on review in the circuit court of appeals, and a party on review cannot assume an attitude inconsistent with, or different from, that taken by him at the trial.

Sugar Co., C.C.A.Utah, 48 F.2d 156—Childs v. Ultramares Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 40 F.2d 474—Weaver v. Atlas Oil Co., C.C.A.La., 39 F.2d 847—Emlenton Refining Co. v. Chambers, C.C.A.Pa., 14 F.2d 104, certiorari denied 47 S.Ct. 240, 273 U.S. 731, 71 L.Ed. 863.

(2) In one case it was held that whether appeal may be taken immediately from refusal to stay proceedings at law where defendant interposes statutory equitable plea is matter within rule-making power given by statute, and, no rule having been promulgated as to whether appeal may be taken immediately from refusal to stay proceedings at law on defendant's filing statutory equitable plea, matter of allowing and recognizing such appeal lies within exercise of court's discretion until rule is established.—American Cyanamid Co. v. Wilson & Toomer Fertilizer Co., C.C.A.Fla., 62 F.2d 1018, certiorari denied 53 S.Ct. 595, 289 U.S. 735, 77 L.Ed. 1483.

52. U.S.—Grand Beach Co. v. Gardner, C.C.A.Mich., 34 F.2d 836.

Where no opportunity to appeal from appointment

Order refusing motion to vacate federal court receivership was held appealable, where party was first brought into court after receiver's appointment.—Mitchell v. Lay, C.C.A. Cal., 48 F.2d 79, certiorari denied Lay v. Mitchell, 51 S.Ct. 656, 283 U.S. 864, 75 L.Ed. 1469.

55. U.S.—McCrone v. U. S., C.C.A. Mont., 100 F.2d 322, certiorari granted 59 S.Ct. 591, 306 U.S. 625, 83 L.Ed. 1029, affirmed 59 S.Ct. 685, 307 U.S. 61, 83 L.Ed. 1108.

Appeals from district court of Hawaii

The manner of taking an appeal to the circuit court of appeals from the United States district court for the territory of Hawaii is not controlled by the Criminal Appeals Rules governing appeals from the district courts of the United States, but is controlled by special statutory provision, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 225, 230.—Mookini v. U. S., Hawaii, 58 S.Ct. 543, 303 U.S. 204, 82 L.Ed. 748, reversing C.C.A., 92 F.2d 126, certiorari granted 58 S.Ct. 53, 302 U.S. 204, 82 L.Ed. 748, and conformed to, C.C.A., 95 F.2d 960.

Subject to some exceptions and limitations,[56] it is the general rule that questions, of whatever nature, not raised and properly preserved for review in the trial court will not be noticed on appeal,[57]

56. U.S.—Maryland Casualty Co. v. Reid, C.C.A.Tex., 76 F.2d 30.
3 C.J. p 742 note 99.

Particular exceptions or limitations

(1) As the rule that questions not raised below will not be considered on appeal is for the purpose of orderly administration and the attainment of justice, whether or not the court will follow it is ordinarily a question of administration.—American Legion Post No. 90 of Village of Mamaroneck v. First Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Mamaroneck, C.C.A.N.Y., 113 F.2d 868.

(2) The rule will be disregarded where it is necessary to do so in order to protect the fundamental rights of the parties or the error is of such a nature that justice requires that it be corrected.—Helvering v. Rubinstein, C.C.A., 124 F.2d 969—New York Life Ins. Co. v. Calhoun, C.C.A.Mo., 114 F.2d 526, certiorari denied 61 S. Ct. 141, 311 U.S. 701, 85 L.Ed. 455—Nichols v. Republic Iron & Steel Co., C.C.A.Ala., 89 F.2d 927—Sulzbacher v. Continental Casualty Co., C.C.A. Mo., 88 F.2d 122—Maryland Casualty Co. v. Reid, C.C.A.Tex., 76 F.2d 30—Trapp v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 70 F.2d 976, affirmed 72 F. 2d 374, certiorari denied Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Trapp, 55 S.Ct. 112, 293 U.S. 596, 79 L.Ed. 690—Freeman v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 4 F.2d 13.

(3) The right to disregard the rule that an appellate court will not ordinarily consider issues of law or fact not raised below is a right to prevent a clear miscarriage of justice apparent from the record and not a right to afford a defeated litigant another day in court because he thinks that if he were given opportunity to try his case again on a different theory he might prevail.—Helvering v. Rubinstein, C.C.A., 124 F.2d 969.

(4) Questions of a general public nature affecting the interest of the state at large may be determined by the circuit court without having been raised in the trial court.—Primeau v. Granfield, N.Y., 193 F. 911, 114 C.C.A. 549, certiorari denied 32 S.Ct. 839, 225 U.S. 708, 56 L.Ed. 1267.

(5) Since the reason for the rule is to give an opportunity to avoid the effect of an objection, the rule is not applicable where that could not have been done, even though the question had been seasonably raised in the court below.—McConnell v. Dennis, Kan., 153 F. 547, 82 C.C.A. 501.

(6) An objection relating to the jurisdiction of the court over the subject matter may be raised for the first time on appeal, as the parties cannot by consent or waiver vest a court with such jurisdiction.—Caesar v. Burgess, C.C.A.Okl., 103 F.2d 503—Atlantic Brewing Co. v. William J. Brennan Grocery Co., C.C.A.Mo., 79 F.2d 45—The Taigen Maru, C.C.A. Wash., 73 F.2d 922, certiorari granted Van Der Weyde v. Ocean Transport Co., 56 S.Ct. 177, 296 U.S. 567, 80 L. Ed. 401, reversed on other grounds 56 S.Ct. 392, 297 U.S. 114, 80 L.Ed. 515—Tower Hill Connellsville Coke Co. of West Virginia v. McClelland, C.C.A.Mo., 14 F.2d 406, rehearing denied 15 F.2d 187, and certiorari denied McClelland v. Highway Const. Co., 47 S.Ct. 570, 273 U.S. 765, 71 L.Ed. 881—25 C.J. p 785 note 63.

Alimony decree

In an action for alimony, the contention that the alimony decree was not properly authenticated cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.—De Jan v. De Jan, C.C.A.Canal Zone, 18 F.2d 690.

Notice to surety

Where, in an action on a contractor's bond, the point that notice of the contractor's acts was not given the surety was neither pleaded nor otherwise presented to the trial court, it could not be considered in the circuit court of appeals.—Bankers' Surety Co. v. Town of Holly, Colo., 219 F. 96, 134 C.C.A. 536.

Validity of contract

(1) As a rule an objection to the validity of a contract or instrument in suit must be made in the court below, and cannot be urged for the first time in the circuit court.—Falstaff Brewing Corporation v. Iowa Fruit & Produce Co., C.C.A.Neb., 112 F.2d 101—Hinshaw v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 104 F.2d 45, certiorari denied 60 S.Ct. 106, 308 U. S. 583, 84 L.Ed. 488—Simmons v. Stern, C.C.A.N.M., 9 F.2d 256—Walters v. Slimmer, C.C.A.Ill., 272 F. 435—Maynard v. A. 167—3 C.J. p 700 notes 77, 82, p 701 note 84, p 702 notes 91, 94.

(2) Rule applies to objection that contract is void and unenforceable under the statute of frauds.—Ford Motor Co. v. Chas. A. Myers Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 64 F.2d 942—General Motors Truck Co. v. Texas Supply Co., C.C.A.Md., 64 F.2d 527—3 C.J. p 701 note 87.

(3) Claim that a general release was not under seal is also within rule.—Raytheon Mfg. Co. v. Radio Corporation of America, C.C.A.Mass., 76 F.2d 943, certiorari granted Radio Corporation of America v. Raytheon Mfg. Co., 56 S.Ct. 99, 296 U.S. 557, 80 L.Ed. 393, affirmed 56 S.Ct. 297, 296 U.S. 459, 80 L.Ed. 327, followed in, C.C.A., Berning v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 92 F.2d 997.

(4) However, where it appears on the face of the pleadings, the face of the contract, or from the admitted facts that the contract is immoral or otherwise contrary to public policy the matter may be first raised on appeal.—Jones v. Pettingill, Puerto Rico, 245 F. 269, 157 C.C.A. 461, certiorari denied Pettingill v. Jones, 38 S.Ct. 61, 245 U.S. 663, 62 L.Ed. 536—3 C.J. p 701 note 83.

69. U.S.—Madden v. McKenzie, Alaska, 144 F. 64, 75 C.C.A. 222.

Particular theories

(1) Action in tort or in contract.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. DeClow, Iowa, 124 F. 142, 61 C.C.A. 34—U. S. v. Marshall, Utah, 122 F. 428, 58 C.C.A. 410.

(2) Action at law or suit in equity.—Cutler v. Cook, C.C.A.Or., 78 F.2d 863—Maryland Casualty Co. v. Portland Const. Co., C.C.A.Vt., 71 F.2d 658 —O'Connell v. Gentry County Bank, C.C.A.Mo., 55 F.2d 806—Curtiss Candy Co. v. Silberman, C.C.A.Tenn., 45 F.2d 451—Corbett v. Winston Elkhorn Coal Co., C.C.A.Ky., 296 F. 577—3 C.J. p 724 note 78.

(3) Whether the case be properly one at law or in equity, where the district court admittedly had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and the parties treated it as a suit in equity, the circuit court may dispose of the case on its merits.—Gelinas v. Buffum, C.C.A.Cal., 67 F.2d 380, modifying 52 F.2d 598, reversing, D.C., Buffum v. Peter Barceloux Co., 51 F.2d 80, reversed, C.C.A., Peter Barceloux Co. v. Gelinas, 54 S.Ct. 454, 291 U.S. 670, 78 L.Ed. 1060.

(4) Equitable treatment was held proper, in view of the pleadings and decree, notwithstanding the review proceedings were as though at law.—People's Nat. Bank of Plymouth, Ohio v. Foltz, C.C.A.Ohio, 25 F.2d 295.

Applicability of statutes

The circuit court will consider applicable statutes when the theory below presents the question of its applicability, irrespective of the fact that the statute may not have been called to the trial court's attention.—Thompson v. Hocking Valley Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 45 F.2d 155—Goodcell v. Graham, C.C.A.Cal., 35 F.2d 586, certiorari granted Graham v. Goodcell, 50 S.Ct. 240, 281 U.S. 708, 74 L.Ed. 1131, and affirmed 51 S.Ct. 186, 282 U.S. 409, 75 L.Ed. 415.

70. U.S.—Kavanaugh v. Fash, C.C.A. Okl., 74 F.2d 435—Continental Casualty Co. v. U. S., for Use of Ainsworth, C.C.A.Ill., 68 F.2d 577, certiorari denied 54 S.Ct. 774, 292 U.S. 641, 78 L.Ed. 1493, rehearing denied 54 S.Ct. 862, 292 U.S. 615, 78 L.Ed. 1474—Euclid Candy Co. v. Whitney-Central Trust & Savings Bank, C.C.A.Ohio, 48 F.2d 757—De John v. Alaska Matanuska Coal Co., C. C.A.Alaska, 41 F.2d 612—Houle v. Helena Gas & Electric Co., C.C.A. Mont., 31 F.2d 671—Weaver v. Pennsylvania-Ohio Power & Light Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 10 F.2d 759—W. H. Goff Co. v. Lamborn & Co., C.C.A. Ga., 281 F. 613, certiorari denied 43 S.Ct. 95, 260 U.S. 734, 67 L.Ed. 487 —Thomas v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ark., 277 F. 708, affirmed 43 S.Ct. 440, 261 U.S. 481, 67 L.Ed. 758—Sudbury v. Penn Worsted Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 263 F. 76—Bassett v. Erickson Const. Co., Wash., 213 F. 810, 130 C.C.A. 468.
3 C.J. p 725 note 84, p 729 notes 4, 5.

Issues raised by pleadings

(1) It is generally held that only such issues as were both raised and relied on in the lower court may be considered on appeal.—Fleishhacker v. Blum, C.C.A.Cal., 109 F.2d 543, modifying, D.C., Blum v. Fleishhacker, 21 F.Supp. 527, certiorari denied Fleishhacker v. Blum, 61 S.Ct. 23, 311 U.S. 665, 85 L.Ed. 427, rehearing denied 61 S.Ct. 130, 311 U.S. 726, 85 L.Ed. 473—Rohrback v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, C.C. A.Mo., 82 F.2d 291—3 C.J. p 727 note 98.

(2) However, where a case has been tried without objection as though the pleadings raised a certain issue, the objection that the issue was not raised by the pleadings, or that the issues were not complete, cannot be made for the first time in the circuit court.—Pennsylvania Co. v. Clark, C.C.A.Ohio, 266 F. 182—Lyons v. Empire Fuel Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 262 F. 465—Martin v. Imbrie, C.C.A. N.Y., 262 F. 44—Bjornquist v. Boston & A. R. Co., Mass., 250 F. 929, 163 C.C.A. 179, 5 A.L.R. 951, certiorari denied Boston & A. R. Co. v. Bjornquist, 39 S.Ct. 11, 248 U.S. 573, 63 L. Ed. 427—3 C.J. p 727 note 99.

71. U.S.—Hutchinson v. Fidelity Inv. Ass'n, C.C.A.W.Va., 106 F.2d 431, affirming, D.C., McCammon v. Fidelity Inv. Ass'n, 26 F.Supp. 117 evidentiary matters,[72] and the measure of damages or the amount of recovery.[73]

For a matter to have been presented before the trial court so as to warrant review on appeal, it is sufficient and necessary that it be properly raised in the trial court by the pleadings, evidence, motions, or appropriate requests for rulings.[74]

(2) Objections and Motions and Rulings Thereon

Except in the case of fundamental errors apparent on the record or clear injustice, the circuit court of appeals will not review matters as to which proper and timely objection was not raised in the trial court invoking the ruling of that court, and grounds of objection not urged below will not be considered on appeal.

In accordance with the rule heretofore stated that questions not presented in the trial court in some appropriate manner will not be considered on appeal or error, it is the general rule that objections must be made in the trial court in order to reserve questions for review.[75] However, this rule will not be applied where it would, under the circumstances of the case, result in injustice;[76] and an exception to the rule exists in the case of fundamental or determinative errors, which are apparent on the face of the record.[77] To be available the objection must 3 C.J. p 730 note 20, p 732 note 26, p 733 note 33, p 734 note 43.

72. Particular theories

(1) That the issues were triable by the court without the intervention of a jury.—Minneapolis Nat. Bank of Minneapolis, Kan., v. Liberty Nat. Bank of Kansas City, C.C.A. Kan., 72 F.2d 434.

(2) Where a fact is admitted, conceded, or assumed without objection in the trial court, it cannot be contested on appeal that there was no evidence on the question.—Maryland Casualty Co. v. Alford, C.C.A.Okl., 111 F.2d 388, affirming D.C., Alford v. McConnell, 27 F.Supp. 176, and certiorari denied Maryland Casualty Co. v. Alford, 61 S.Ct. 27, two cases, 311 U.S. 668, 85 L.Ed. 429—Palace Cafe v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.C.A.Ind., 97 F.2d 766, Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Palace Cafe, 59 S.Ct. 102, 305 U.S. 634, 83 L.Ed. 407—Palace Cafe v. National Security Fire Ins. Co., C.C.A. Ind., 97 F.2d 766, certiorari denied National Security Fire Ins. Co. v. Palace Cafe, 59 S.Ct. 102, 305 U.S. 634, 83 L.Ed. 407—Panama City v. Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, C. C.A.Fla., 97 F.2d 499—Wilson v. Byron Jackson Co., C.C.A.Cal., 93 F.2d 572—Wiget v. Becker, C.C.A.Mo., 84 F.2d 706—Andrews v. Drake, C.C.A. Mich., 83 F.2d 767, certiorari denied 57 S.Ct. 35, 299 U.S. 572, 81 L.Ed. 421—Shields v. Barton, C.C.A.Ill., 60 F.2d 351—U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation v. South Atlantic Dry Dock Co., C.C.A.Fla., 19 F.2d 486—U. S. v. One Reo Truck Automobile, C.C.A.N.Y., 9 F.2d 529—3 C.J. p 735 note 54, p 736 note 56.

(3) Where a party has assumed the burden of proving a fact, he will not be heard to say for the first time on appeal that the burden of proof is on the other party.—Kentucky Vermillion Mining & Concentrating Co. v. Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc., Wash., 146 F. 695, 77 C.C.A. 121.

73. U.S.—McSherry Mfg. Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co., Ohio, 163 F. 34, 89 C.C.A. 512, certiorari denied 29 S.Ct. 694, 214 U.S. 512, 53 L.Ed. 1062.

74. U.S.—Maloney v. Brandt, C.C.A. Ill., 123 F.2d 779—Smith v. S. S. Kresge Co., C.C.A.Mo., 79 F.2d 361—General Motors Truck Co. v. Texas Supply Co., C.C.A.Md., 64 F.2d 527—Routzahn v. Petroleum Iron Works Co. of Ohio, C.C.A.Ohio, 56 F.2d 938—Detroit Tile & Mosaic Co. v. Mason Contractors' Ass'n, C. C.A.Mich., 48 F.2d 729, reversing, D. C., 38 F.2d 284—Santaella & Co. v. Otto F. Lange Co., Iowa, 155 F. 719, 84 C.C.A. 145.

Particular action necessary

(1) Notwithstanding a matter or contention was set up in the pleadings, it must also be pressed in the trial court, and a failure to do so will be deemed, on appeal, a waiver or abandonment thereof.—L. P. Steuart & Bro. v. Capital View Realty Co., 112 F.2d 583, 72 App.D.C. 193.

(2) Ordinarily, a party seeking to raise an issue must have offered evidence thereon in the trial court.—Mutual Ben. Health & Accident Ass'n v. Warrell, C.C.A.Ark., 96 F.2d 447, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 71, 305 U.S. 612, 83 L.Ed. 390, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 142, 305 U.S. 671, 83 L.Ed. 435.

Unconstitutionality of statute

(1) Text rule applies to contention that statute is unconstitutional.—Gulf Refining Co. v. City of Philadelphia, C.C.A.Pa., 110 F.2d 661, affirming D.C., 31 F.Supp. 587.

(2) As a rule the objection must be definite.—Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. of California v. Barton, C.C.A.Fla., 50 F.2d 362, certiorari denied 52 S.Ct. 29, 284 U.S. 647, 76 L.Ed. 550.

(3) A mere general objection, as in the case of a general or formal objection to evidence, or to the allowance of attorney's fees, etc., is not sufficient.—Brothers v. Cunningham, Mo., 189 F. 884, 111 C.C.A. 146—3 C. J. p 712 note 86.

(4) Unconstitutionality of a statute must be pleaded before it can be raised on appeal.—Rorick v. Board of Com'rs of Everglades Drainage Dist., D.C.Fla., 57 F.2d 1048.

S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation v. Tabas, C.C.A. Pa., 22 F.2d 398, affirming, D.C., Tabas v. Emergency Fleet Corporation, 9 F.2d 648—Borderland Coal Sales Co. v. Imperial Coal Sales Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 7 F.2d 116—Texas Co. v. Brilliant Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 2 F.2d 1—U. S. v. National City Bank of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 281 F. 754, affirming, D.C., National City Bank of New York v. U. S., 275 F. 855, and error dismissed 44 S.Ct. 32, 263 U.S. 726, 68 L.Ed. 527—Great American Ins. Co. v. Glenwood Irr. Co., C.C.A.Colo., 265 F. 594—Louie Share Gan v. White, Cal., 258 F. 798, 170 C.C.A. 92.

Where exception jurisdictional

Statute of jeofails does not confer appellate jurisdiction on circuit court of appeals which is specifically denied by statute governing appeals in jury-waived cases.—U. S. v. Martin, C.C.A.Kan., 80 F.2d 460.

76. U.S.—Fricke v. General Accident, Fire & Life Assur. Corporation, C.C.A.Mo., 59 F.2d 563, certiorari denied 53 S.Ct. 221, 287 U.S. 662, 77 L.Ed. 571.

be a timely one,[78] made in the proper mode,[79] and it must usually be specific and point out the ground or grounds relied on in such a manner as to advise the court and opposing counsel thereof.[80] Only grounds of objection urged in the trial court will be considered on appeal; a party will not be permitted to change them or to add others.[81] As a general rule a mere objection without a direct ruling or decision thereon by the trial court presents no question for appellate review, for, unless there is a ruling by the court, there can be no predicate for an assignment of error.[82]

Co. v. Zenith-Detroit Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 73 F.2d 62, certiorari dismissed Zenith-Detroit Corporation v. Bendix Stromberg Carburetor Co., 55 S.Ct. 509, 294 U.S. 735, 79 L.Ed. 1263—Rucker v. Kokrda, C.C.A.Colo., 68 F.2d 73—Operators' Oil Co. v. Barbre, C.C.A.Okl., 65 F. 2d 857.

3 C.J. p 745 note 14.

When objection timely

(1) In order to be timely objection must ordinarily be made during the trial and in time to allow the alleged error to be avoided or corrected.—Scritchfield v. Kennedy, C.C.A.Okl., 103 F.2d 467—Arkansas Bridge Co. v. Kelly-Atkinson Const. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 282 F. 802—3 C.J. p 745 note 14.

(2) So the objection must be made at the time of the action or ruling to which it is directed or at the earliest opportunity thereafter.—Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Langreder, C. C.A.Ill., 87 F.2d 586—Layne-Bowler Chicago Co. v. City of Glenwood, Iowa, C.C.A.Iowa, 34 F.2d 889—3 C.J. p 745 note 14.

(3) Question cannot afterward be raised, for the purpose of appellate review, by an objection made on a motion or argument for a new trial or rehearing.—Shannon v. Shaffer Oil & Refining Co., C.C.A.Okl., 51 F.2d 878, 78 A.L.R. 851—Cloquet Lumber Co. v. Burns, Minn., 222 F. 857, 138 C.C.A. 283—3 C.J. p 746 note 15.

79. U.S.—Sun Pub. Co. v. Lake Erie Asphalt Block Co., Ohio, 157 F. 80, 84 C.C.A. 584.

Netherwood, 257 F. 284, 168 C.C.A. 368, affirming, D.C., Netherwood v. Raymer, 253 F. 515.

An objection of a general or indefinite character is not sufficient to preserve a question for appellate review.—U. S. v. Sessin, C.C.A.Kan., 84 F.2d 667—Lazelle v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 73 F.2d 459—3 C.J. p 746 note 16.

Repetition of objection

Objection need not be repeated at a subsequent stage of the trial where the ruling of the court on the first objection clearly covers and authorizes the subsequent proceedings, so that further objection would be a mere idle form.—Mine & Smelter Supply Co. v. Parke & Lacy Co., Colo., 107 F. 881, 47 C.C.A. 34.

National City Bank of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 281 F. 754, affirming, D.C., National City Bank of New York v. U. S., 275 F. 855, and error dismissed 44 S.Ct. 32, 263 U.S. 726, 68 L.Ed. 527.

3 C.J. p 888 note 15.

Ruling by implication may be sufficient.—Georgia Casualty Co. v. Boyd, C.C.A.Cal., 34 F.2d 116.

Rulings held necessary to review of

(1) Demurrer or exceptions to the pleadings.—Pinckney v. Wylie, C.C. A.Tex., 86 F.2d 541—Tampico Banking Co., S. A. v. Barber, C.C.A.Tex., 3 F.2d 136, certiorari denied 45 S.Ct. 636, 268 U.S. 699, 69 L.Ed. 1164.

(2) Plea in abatement.—Tampico Banking Co., S. A. v. Barber, supra.

(3) Objections with relation to the admission or exclusion of evidence.—Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co. v. Woods, C.C.A.Ky., 110 F.2d 94—Grove Laboratories v. Brewer & Co., C.C.A. Mass., 103 F.2d 175—Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, C.C.A. Neb., 85 F.2d 187—Lyle v. Phillips Petroleum Co., C.C.A.Ark., 72 F.2d 347—Wourdack v. L'Herisson, C.C.A.S.D., 33 F.2d 841—Ottumwa Box Car Loader Co. v. Christy Box Car Loader Co., Iowa, 215 F. 362, 131 C.C.A. 504—3 C.J. p 890 note 19.

(4) Objections with relation to the sufficiency of evidence.—Maryland Casualty Co. v. Jones, C.C.A.Cal., 35 F.2d 791—Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Omaha v. L'Herisson, supra—First Nat. Bank v. Litteer, C.C. A.Okl., 10 F.2d 447—Pauchet v. Bujac, C.C.A.N.M., 281 F. 962.

(5) Motions.—Anglo California Nat. Bank of San Francisco v. Lazard, C.C.A.Cal., 106 F.2d 693, certiorari denied 60 S.Ct. 379, 308 U.S. 624, 84 L.Ed. 521—Hall v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Ark., 85 F.2d 447—Fruth v. Benassi, Colo., 219 F. 549, 135 C.C.A. 317—Winter v. Bostwick, Wis., 212 F. 884, 129 C.C.A. 404.

(6) Objections to misconduct of opposing counsel, or to improper remarks made by the opposing counsel in his argument.—Odell Mfg. Co. v. Tibbetts, N.H., 212 F. 652, 129 C.C.A. 188—3 C.J. p 891 note 24.

(7) If evidence is received subject to objection, or a ruling on a motion to strike out is reserved, and a subsequent ruling is not sought by motion or otherwise, the reviewing court will not consider the admissibility of such evidence, because there is no definite or final decision as to its admissibility.—Ewert v. Thompson, C.C.A.Okl., 281 F. 449.

While proper objection in the trial court is necessary to entitle a party to raise an objection in the circuit court of appeals as to the propriety of the form of the action or the nature of the proceeding,[83] or to the consolidation of actions,[84] it is the general rule, subject to certain exceptions,[85] that the question of jurisdiction of the subject matter may be raised for the first time in the circuit court of appeals, or the court may, on its own motion, take notice of such want of jurisdiction,[86] at least where

Particular objections

(1) That remedy was not in contract but in tort.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. De Clow, Iowa, 124 F. 142, 61 C.C.A. 34.

(2) That garnishment proceedings should have been brought rather than a direct action.—Eagle Indemnity Co. v. Diehl, C.C.A.Or., 27 F.2d 76.

(3) Wrong type or form of pleading.—Garner v. Providence Second Nat. Bank, R.I., 67 F. 833, 16 C.C.A. 86—Moran v. Hagerman, Nev., 64 F. 499, 12 C.C.A. 239.

Legal or equitable remedy

(1) Objection that a cause is of equitable, and not of legal, cognizance cannot be made for the first time on appeal.—M. J. Carroll, Inc. v. Gilmore, C.C.A.S.C., 103 F.2d 560—U. S. v. Illinois Surety Co., Ill., 226 F. 653, 141 C.C.A. 409, affirmed Illinois Surety Co. v. John Davis Co., 37 S.Ct. 614, 244 U.S. 376, 61 L.Ed. 1206—3 C.J. p 756 note 15.

(2) Also, if the trial court has jurisdiction of the parties and subject matter in an action at law, an objection that the defense set up was purely equitable cannot be made for the first time on appeal.—Cleveland Nat. Bank v. Kent, C.C.A.Tenn., 100 F.2d 54, certiorari denied Kent v. Cleveland Nat. Bank, 59 S.Ct. 643, 306 U.S. 654, 83 L.Ed. 1053—Schoolfield v. Rhodes, Ark., 82 F. 153, 27 C.C.A. 95.

(3) Where an action is brought and tried without objection as an equitable one, neither party can object on appeal that a court of equity had no jurisdiction because there was an adequate remedy at law, or object that the cause of action was of legal cognizance only and should have been tried as a legal action and not as an equitable one.—Whealton v. Pine Grove Nevada Gold Mining Co., C.C.A.Nev., 104 F.2d 675—Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Nelson, C.C.A.Tenn., 96 F.2d 487—Brown Paper Mill Co. v. Frazier, C.C.A.La., 76 F.2d 65—Pearson v. (4) However, if the cause is one not properly cognizable by a court of equity under any circumstances, or it is not competent to grant the relief, the objection may be raised at any time, as want of jurisdiction of the subject matter is always fatal at any stage of the proceedings.—Church v. Hubbard, C.C.A.Mich., 91 F.2d 406—3 C.J. p 758 note 23.

Particular exceptions

(1) Where trial court has general jurisdiction of a class of cases, an objection that, because of irregularities or other special circumstances, it had no jurisdiction of a particular case belonging to that class, or that it had no jurisdiction to render the particular judgment, cannot be first made on appeal.—U. S. v. Ellison, supra—3 C.J. p 753 note 90.

(2) A party who does not, in the court below, challenge the jurisdiction of the court to entertain a cross bill cannot raise that question on appeal.—U. S. v. Duignan, C.C.A.N.Y., 4 F.2d 983, affirmed Duignan v. U. S., 47 S.Ct. 566, 274 U.S. 195, 71 L.Ed. 996—3 C.J. p 754 note 94.

the defect is apparent on the face of the record.[87] However, an objection to the jurisdiction of the person must usually be made in the trial court, and, if it is not, it will, on appeal, be held to have been waived;[88] and generally, where a judge assumes to act under lawful authority and a cause is tried before him without objection, his authority to try the cause cannot be assailed on appeal.[89]

Failure to make proper and timely objection in the trial court may also preclude a contention in the circuit court of error with respect to venue,[90] capacity or right to sue,[91] want of merely proper or formal parties, or other formal defects as to the parties,[92] or misjoinder of parties;[93] but if the de-

As dependent on amount involved

(1) As a rule the objection that the lower court was without jurisdiction, because the amount involved was below the jurisdictional amount, may be raised for the first time on appeal.—S. S. Kresge Co. v. Amsler, C.C.A.Mo., 99 F.2d 503, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 582, 306 U.S. 641, 83 L. Ed. 1041—Supreme Council of Royal Arcanum v. Hobart, Mass., 244 F. 385, 157 C.C.A. 11—Cochran v. Childs, Ill., 111 F. 433, 49 C.C.A. 421.

(2) However, such defect must clearly appear before the circuit court will take cognizance of an objection on that ground.—Mullins Lumber Co. v. Williamson & Brown Land & Lumber Co., S.C., 246 F. 232, 158 C.C.A. 392—People's Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. East Tennessee Telephone Co., Tenn., 103 F. 212, 43 C.C. A. 185.

Construction of averments

However, the averments as to jurisdiction will be construed with some degree of liberality, for the purpose of sustaining the jurisdiction, where objection is made for the first time on appeal.—Butchers' & Drovers' Stock-Yards Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co., Tenn., 67 F. 35, 14 C.C.A. 290—25 C.J. p 785 note 64.

3 C.J. p 755 note 11.

Waiver of lack of jurisdiction

Where the trial court has ruled for defendant on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of his person, if plaintiff wishes to preserve for consideration by the circuit court the point that defendant has entered a general appearance waiving the lack of jurisdiction he must present that point in the trial court.—Stewart v. Nebraska Tire & Rubber Co., C.C.A.Iowa, 39 F.2d 309, affirming, D.C., Stewart v. Heisler, 32 F.2d 519, and certiorari denied Stewart v. Nebraska Tire & Rubber Co., 51 S.Ct. 21, 282 U.S. 840, 75 L.Ed. 746.

Diversity of citizenship

It cannot be first contended on appeal that there was no diversity of citizenship entitling the trial court to assume jurisdiction.—Emmke v. De Silva, C.C.A.Mo., 293 F. 17.

89. U.S.—Antoncic v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., C.C.A.Pa., 47 F.2d 97.

Objection held raised

Where it appears that defendant did not know at the trial that averments of plaintiff's residence were untrue but moved to dismiss during the trial on learning thereof, the right to urge the matter on appeal was not lost by completing the trial on the merits.—Lehigh Valley Coal Co. v. Washko, N.Y., 231 F. 42, 145 C.C.A. 230.

3 C.J. p 761 notes 54, 58, p 762 note 70, p 763 notes 72, 73.

Limitation to rule

It has been held, however, that the text rule does not apply where it appears that plaintiff has no right at all to sue or is not entitled to any relief.—Sterrett v. Second Nat. Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, 246 F. 753, 159 C.C.A. 55, 3 A.L.R. 256, certiorari granted 38 S.Ct. 345, 246 U.S. 668, 62 L.Ed. 930, and affirmed 39 S.Ct. 27, 248 U.S. 73, 63 L.Ed. 135.

Want of interest in controversy

An objection to the title under which a plaintiff sues, or that he has no such interest in the controversy as entitles him to maintain the action, will not be considered when raised for the first time in the circuit court.—Davis v. Virginia Ry. & Power Co., Va., 229 F. 633, 144 C.C.A. 43, certiorari denied Virginia Ry. & Power Co. v. Davis, 36 S.Ct. 723, 241 U. S. 672, 60 L.Ed. 1231.

fect of parties amounts to the complete want of a party who is so necessary that a final judgment or decree cannot be rendered without affecting his or her interests the objection may be taken for the first time in the circuit court of appeals.[94] An objection may not be first urged on appeal as to want of notice or service of process,[95] rulings on motions,[96] and provisional remedies and proceedings relating thereto.[97]

Where proper objection is not raised in the trial court, a contention of error may not be presented in the circuit court of appeals as to matters of pleading,[98] as with respect to the form[99] or sufficiency[1] of pleadings, to amendments and supplemen-

Specificness

(1) Ordinarily, in reviewing the ruling on a motion, no other objections or grounds than those specified in the lower court will be considered. —Maryland Casualty Co. v. Talley, C.C.A.Tex., 115 F.2d 807—3 C.J. p 770 note 23.

(2) If no specific grounds are assigned in the court below, no question is raised for review.—Adams v. Shirk, Ill., 104 F. 54, 43 C.C.A. 407, rehearing denied 105 F. 659, 44 C.C.A. 653.

(3) However, the fact that a motion was general on the whole record will not preclude a review of the ruling thereon by the circuit court, where it is apparent that the propositions relied on were fully presented to the trial court.—O'Halloran v. McGuirk, Mass., 167 F. 493, 93 C.C.A. 129.

Motion for nonsuit or dismissal

(1) Such motion must usually specify the grounds on which it is based for no grounds than those specified will be considered on appeal.—American Concrete Steel Co. v. Hart, C.C. A.N.Y., 285 F. 322, affirming, D.C., Hart v. American Concrete Steel Co., 278 F. 541.

(2) However, if the error is clear, denial of motion may be reviewed even though it does not specify the supposed defect, particularly where the court expressly declined to hear argument thereon.—U. S. Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation v. Dietrich, C.C.A.N.Y., 27 F.2d 681.

97. U.S.—Stephens v. Hamilton, C.C. A.Ill., 81 F.2d 324.

Particular matters within rule

(1) That no undertaking was ordered or given when an injunction was granted.—Berdie v. Kurtz, C.C. A.Cal., 75 F.2d 898.

(2) Failure of court, on directing a resale at a higher upset price, to allow a successful bidder on the first judicial sale his expenses in connection with his bid.—Shipe v. Consumers' Service Co., C.C.A.Ind., 29 F.2d 321, certiorari denied Tudor v. Schindler, 49 S.Ct. 347, 279 U.S. 850, 73 L.Ed. 993.

(3) Excessive allowance of compensation to receiver.—Hill v. Douglass, C.C.A.Nev., 78 F.2d 851.

(4) However, where an appeal is from an interlocutory order appointing a receiver, the court must consider the question of the equity of the bill on which the order is based, whether or not it was raised in the court below.—Cabaniss v. Reco Min. Co., Ga., 116 F. 318, 54 C.C.A. 190.

Mode of objection

(1) No matter how made, the objection must point out the particular defects or grounds relied on, so as to bring them to the attention of the lower court and opposing counsel, and no others will be considered by the circuit court.—Johnson v. Igleheart Bros., C.C.A.Ind., 95 F.2d 4, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 1058, 304 U.S. 585, 82 L.Ed. 1546, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 59, 305 U.S. 670, 83 L. Ed. 434.

(2) Ordinarily, where objection is taken by way of demurrer or exception, the court will not consider any other grounds of objection than those specified and relied on in the lower court.—Correa v. Barbour, C.C.A. Puerto Rico, 71 F.2d 9.

(3) However, where the demurrer is on the ground that the complaint does not state a cause of action, points other than those specified in the lower court may be specified on appeal as showing no cause of action.—Mound Coal Co. v. Jeffrey Mfg. Co., W.Va., 233 F.2d 913, 147 C.C.A. 587, affirming, D.C., Jeffrey Mfg. Co. v. Mound Coal Co., 215 F. 222, rehearing granted, C.C.A., Mound Coal Co. v. Jeffrey Mfg. Co., 240 F. 129, and affirmed 240 F. 412.

(4) The amendment of a pleading to which a demurrer has been filed usually necessitates a refiling of the demurrer, and, if this is not done, the demurrer is regarded as waived so that no advantage can be taken of it. —City of Anniston v. Safe-Deposit & Trust Co., Ala., 85 F. 856, 29 C.C.A. 457.

Motions as to pleadings

(1) When objection to a pleading is taken by motion, the objection must state the grounds thereof and specifically point out the alleged defects, and as a rule, grounds not stated will not be considered on appeal. —Cooper v. Gilbert, C.C.A.Okl., 40 F. 2d 260.

(2) Judgment on legal sufficiency of evidence must be invoked by proper motion to authorize court to consider that question.—First Nat. Bank v. Philippine Refining Corporation of New York, C.C.A.Cal., 51 F.2d 218.

(3) Party interposing motion for judgment or declaration of law that he is entitled to judgment may, on appeal, raise question of law whether under evidence he was entitled to judgment.—Perry v. Wiggins, C.C.A. Mo., 57 F.2d 622, certiorari denied 53 S.Ct. 12, 287 U.S. 609, 77 L.Ed. 529.

Pleading bad on demurrer

It cannot be objected for the first time on appeal that the cause of action is defectively stated, even though the defect is such that the pleading would have been bad on the demurrer or motion in the lower court.—Robert Hind, Limited, v. 4. Objections precluded on appeal

(1) That certain evidence was inadmissible under the pleadings.—Martin v. Imbrie, C.C.A.N.Y., 262 F. 44—3 C.J. p 801 note 93.

(2) That the pleadings were insufficient to present a certain issue.—Jordan v. Roden, C.C.A.Mich., 292 F. 573, certiorari denied Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Roden, 44 S.Ct. 34, 263 U.S. 705, 68 L.Ed. 516—3 C.J. p 801 note 94.

However, variance may be sufficiently plain as to be fatal even though not objected to in the court below, and in such case the court should not ignore it.—Horvath v. McCord Radiator & Mfg. Co., C.C.A. Mich., 100 F.2d 326, certiorari denied Carrier Engineering Corporation v. Horvath, 60 S.Ct. 101, 308 U.S. 581, 84 L.Ed. 486, rehearing denied 60 S. Ct. 171, 308 U.S. 636, 84 L.Ed. 529.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) To be sufficient, the objection must be specific, not general, and must show in what the variance consists, so that, if necessary, an amendment may be made to avoid it, and no other objection than that specified will be considered on appeal.—Supreme Council Catholic Knights of America v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York, Tenn., 63 F. 48, 11 C.C. A. 96—Walsh v. Colclough, Wis., 56 F. 778, 6 C.C.A. 114.

(2) It may also be required that a party request a continuance or adjournment because of surprise or his unpreparedness to meet the evidence.—Arkansas Grand Prairie Oil & Gas Co. v. Davidson, Pa., 233 F. 64., 147 C.C.A. 449.

3 C.J. p 824 note 47.

Grounds

If the exclusion of the evidence is proper on any ground, the ruling of the trial court will be sustained, although the proper grounds for exclusion were not urged in the objection to the admission of the evidence.—U. S. v. Nickle, C.C.A.Mo., 70 F.2d 873.

Foundation for objection

(1) On objection thereto, a proper offer must be made at the time showing what evidence will be given if the witness is permitted to answer, the purpose and object of the testimony sought to be introduced, and all the facts necessary to establish its admissibility.—Powhatan Mining Co. v. Ickes, C.C.A., 118 F.2d 105—McVeigh v. McGurren, C.C.A.Ill., 117 F.2d 672, certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 960, 313 U.S. 573, 85 L.Ed. 1531—Roach v. An exception to the text rule, exists where, by reason of the particular circumstances, the party had no chance to present his objection in the lower court.—Meyer & Chapman State Bank v. First Nat. Bank of Cody, Wyo., 248 F. 679, 160 C.C.A. 579.

Existence of any evidence

It is sometimes held that even the legal question whether there is any evidence tending to support the verdict, findings, or judgment cannot first be raised in the circuit court.—Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Skeens, C.C.A.Ohio, 33 F.2d 508—Keeley v. Ophir Hill Consolidated Mining Co., Utah, 169 F. 598, 95 C.C.A. 96.

3 C.J. p 828 note 74, p 829 note 75.

Offer of proof

Ruling of incompetency will not be reviewed unless there is an offer or showing of what would have been proved by the witness.—Hass v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 31 F.2d 13—Romeo v. U. S., C.C.A.Wash., 24 F.2d 527, denying rehearing 23 F.2d 551.

3 C.J. p 816 note 19.

Time and mode of objection

(1) If the objectionable character of evidence is apparent when it is offered or introduced, the objection should be made then.—Klein v. Darnell, Tex., 239 F. 844, 152 C.C.A. 630.

ciency of evidence[18] must be timely and in proper | form.

(2) If the ground of objection was not earlier apparent, it may be proper and necessary that objection be made by a motion to strike or for an instruction that the evidence be disregarded by the jury.—Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Rossi, C.C.A.Ark., 52 F.2d 547—Sacramento Suburban Fruit Lands Co. v. Soderman, C.C.A. Cal., 36 F.2d 934—Grand Trunk Pac. Ry. Co. v. Tollard, C.C.A.Minn., 286 F. 676—Tate v. Baugh, C.C.A.Tenn., 264 F. 892—Central R. Co. of New Jersey v. Sharkey, N.Y., 259 F. 144, 170 C.C.A. 212—Frederick Mfg. Co. v. Devlin, N.J., 127 F. 71, 62 C.C.A. 53—3 C.J. p 817 note 20, p 831 note 85.

(3) Where an objection to evidence, was made after the question has been answered, it is not too late to preserve the question for review, if the objection was overruled on the ground that the evidence was incompetent, and not on the ground that the objection was too late.—Grand Trunk Pac. Ry. Co. v. Tollard, supra.

Specification of evidence

At least where any of the evidence is admissible for any purpose, objection should specify the particular evidence or, parts of the evidence which are regarded as objectionable, a general objection or motion directed to the whole evidence being insufficient. —U. S. v. Aspinwall, C.C.A.Or., 96 F. 2d 867—Washburn v. Douthit, C.C.A. Ark., 73 F.2d 23—U. S. v. Stamey, C. C.A.Wash., 48 F.2d 150, reversing, D.C., Stamey v. U. S., 42 F.2d 879—3 C.J. p 818 notes 23, 24.

Specification of grounds

(1) Objection must specifically state the grounds or reasons which render the evidence inadmissible.—Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Buckner, Ky., 110 F. 345, 49 C.C.A. 80—Sampsell v. Anches, C.C.A.Wash., 108 F.2d 945 —Collins v. Streitz, C.C.A.Ariz., 95 F. 2d 430, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 67, 305 U.S. 608, 83 L.Ed. 387—Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, C.C.A. Neb., 85 F.2d 187—Columbian Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Comfort, C.C.A.Mo., 84 F.2d 291, certiorari denied 57 S.Ct. 34, 299 U.S. 571, 81 L.Ed. 420—Lazelle v. Norfolk & W. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 73 F.2d 459—Niagara Fire Ins. Co. of New York, N. Y. v. Raleigh Hardware Co., C.C.A.W.Va., 62 F.2d 705—Wirthlin v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., C.C. A.Utah, 56 F.2d 137, 86 A.L.R. 138—Continental Ins. Co. of City of New York v. Fortner, C.C.A.Ky., 25 F.2d 398—Miller v. Estabrook, C.C.A.W. Va., 273 F. 143—Wayne v. Venable, Ark., 260 F. 64, 171 C.C.A. 100—Buckeye Cotton Oil Co. v. Sloan, Tenn., 250 F. 712, 163 C.C.A. 44—R. D. Cole Mfg. Co. v. Mendenhall, N.C., 240 F. 641, 153 C.C.A. 439—Arnold v. Horrigan, Mich., 238 F. 39, 151 C.C.A. 115 —Pennsylvania Co. v. Sheeley, Ohio, 221 F. 901, 137 C.C.A. 451—3 C.J. p 819 note 26.

(2) A mere general objection, such as one which only states that the party objects, or that the evidence is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, is ordinarily insufficient.—Trucking, Inc. v. Krotzer, C.C.A.Ohio, 106 F.2d 447—Virginia-Carolina Tie & Wood Co. v. Dunbar, C.C.A.N.C., 106 F.2d 383—American Glycerin Co. v. Eason Oil Co., C.C.A.Okl., 98 F.2d 479, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 107, 305 U. S. 640, 83 L.Ed. 413, rehearing denied 59 S.Ct. 153, 305 U.S. 672, 83 L.Ed. 435—Pacific Alaska Airways v. Mahan, C.C.A.Alaska, 89 F.2d 255, certiorari denied Pacific Alaska Airways v. Mahan, 58 S.Ct. 19, 302 U.S. 700, 82 L.Ed. 541—Cook Paint & Varnish Co. v. Hickling, C.C.A.Neb., 76 F.2d 718—Jeffreys v. O'Neal, C.C.A.N.C., 64 F.2d 284—Pennsylvania Co. v. Clark, C.C.A.Ohio, 266 F. 182—Examiner Printing Co. v. Aston, Cal., 238 F. 459, 151 C.C.A. 395—3 C.J. p 819 note 26.

(3) Failure to specify grounds will not preclude review where the objection could not have been obviated or the evidence is clearly incompetent in any aspect of the case.—Southern Pac. Co. v. McCready, C.C. A.Cal., 47 F.2d 673, certiorari denied 52 S.Ct. 10, 284 U.S. 624, 76 L.Ed. 532—Grandison v. Robertson, N.Y., 231 F. 785, 145 C.C.A. 605, modifying, D.C., 220 F. 985—3 C.J. p 818 note 25.

(4) Also failure to specify is immaterial where the objection is such that the trial court cannot fail to understand the ground on which it is based.—New England Newspaper Pub. Co. v. Bonner, C.C.A.Mass., 68 F.2d 880, certiorari denied 54 S.Ct. 630, 292 U.S. 625, 78 L.Ed. 1480, and Bonner v. New England Newspaper Pub. Co., 54 S.Ct. 631, 292 U.S. 625, 78 L.Ed. 1480.

(5) When a specific objection has been made, the court will consider no grounds or reasons other than those that have been specified or urged in the trial court.—Cuneo Press v. Claybourn Corporation, C.C.A.Ill., 90 F.2d 233—Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Faulkner, C.C.A.Utah, 68 F.2d 676 —U. S. v. Smith, C.C.A.Wash., 55 F. 2d 141, 81 A.L.R. 926—American Petroleum Co. v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ark., 25 F.2d 441—Page Steel & Wire Co. v. Blair Engineering Co., C.C.A.N.J., 22 F.2d 403, certiorari denied 48 S.Ct. 303, 276 U.S. 623, 72 L. Ed. 737—Thompson Caldwell Const. Co. v. Young, C.C.A.N.C., 294 F. 145 —International Cotton Mills v. Burnham, C.C.A.Ga., 284 F. 351—Canal-Commercial Trust & Savings Bank v. Bank of Plant City, C.C.A.La., 278 F. 178—Lederer v. Real Estate Title Insurance & Trust Co. of Philadelphia, C.C.A.Pa., 273 F. 933—Miller v. Estabrook, C.C.A.W.Va., 273 F. 143 —Grandison v. Robertson, N.Y., 231 F. 785, 145 C.C.A. 605, modifying, D. C., 220 F. 985—Hunt v. U. S., Mo., 61 F. 795, 10 C.C.A. 74, rehearing denied 63 F. 568, 11 C.C.A. 340, error dismissed 17 S.Ct. 609, 166 U.S. 424, 41 L.Ed. 1063—3 C.J. p 819 note 26, p 893 note 29.

(6) If an improper or wrong reason or ground is assigned in objecting to evidence, the circuit court of appeals will treat the evidence as though no objection had been taken. —U. S. v. Nickle, C.C.A.Mo., 70 F.2d 873.

Renewal of objection

(1) When, after objection has been interposed or sustained, an attempt is made to remove the ground of objection and the evidence is then reoffered, the objection must be renewed.—Paramount Productions v. Smith, C.C.A.Cal., 91 F.2d 863, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 266, 302 U.S. 749, 82 L.Ed. 579.

(2) Although a question has been excluded on objection, if the witness has nevertheless answered, it is necessary, in order to assert error in permitting the answer to stand, to move to strike or exclude the answer.—Southern Package Corporation v. Mitchell, C.C.A.Miss., 109 F.2d 609.

(3) If the court without a final ruling on its admissibility admits evidence tentatively or conditionally subject to future consideration or action a subsequent objection is necessary.—Paramount Productions v. Smith, supra—Clauson v. U. S., C.C. A.S.D., 60 F.2d 694—Geiger v. Tramp, C.C.A.Iowa, 291 F. 353—Curcuru v. Peninsular Electric Light Co., Mich., 258 F. 785, 170 C.C.A. 79.

Objections held sufficient

Bernhard's, C.C.A.Cal., 82 F.2d 706—White v. U. S., C.C.A. Okl., 48 F.2d 178—Liberty Oil Co. v. Condon Nat. Bank, Kan., 271 F. 928, petition dismissed 42 S.Ct. 53, 257 U.S. 651, 66 L.Ed. 417, rehearing granted 42 S.Ct. 92, 257 U.S.

Also, where no objection is raised in the trial | court, error may not be urged in the circuit court

628, 66 L.Ed. 405, and certiorari granted on rehearing 42 S.Ct. 93, 257 U.S. 630, 66 L.Ed. 406, and reversed on other grounds 43 S.Ct. 118, 260 U.S. 235, 67 L.Ed. 232.
3 C.J. p 839 note 40.

Motion or request for ruling

(1) Appellate court cannot review assignment of error with respect to sufficiency of evidence in absence of motion to test sufficiency thereof.—Rucker v. Kokrda, C.C.A.Colo., 68 F. 2d 73.

(2) It may be sufficient and necessary to raise such objection in a jury case by a motion for a directed verdict.—F. W. Woolworth Co. v. Seckinger, C.C.A.La., 125 F.2d 97—Nailling v. U. (4) Under Fed. Rules of Civ. Proc., rule 52(a), 28 U.S.C.A. foll. § 723c, requests for findings are not necessary for purposes of review in actions tried without a jury.—Hill v. Ohio Casualty Ins. Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 104 F.2d 695.

(5) A motion for a directed verdict which is not in proper form will be treated as effective in the circuit court where it has not been questioned or objected to in the trial court.—Miller v. Union Pac. R. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 63 F.2d 574, certiorari granted 54 S.Ct. 48, 290 U.S. 607, 78 L.Ed. 532, and reversed on other grounds 54 S.Ct. 172, 290 U.S. 227, 78 L.Ed. 285.

Time of objection

(1) Generally, objection must be raised in the lower court before the case or issue is submitted.—Harper v. U. S., C.C.A.Kan., 98 F.2d 885—Southern Surety Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, v. U. S., C.C.A.S.D., 23 F.2d 55, certiorari denied 49 S.Ct. 11, 278 U.S. 604, 73 L.Ed. 532.

(2) So the question may not be preserved by a motion for a new trial.—Luke v. U. S., C.C.A.Ga., 84 F. 2d 823.

Renewal of motion

(1) Where defendant has waived his motion for a dismissal or direction of a verdict, made at the close of plaintiff's evidence, by the subsequent introduction of evidence, he must, in order to obtain a review of the sufficiency of the evidence, renew his motion or demurrer at the close of all the evidence.—U. S. v. Salmon, C.C.A.Miss., 42 F.2d 353—J. B. McCrary Engineering Co. v. White Coal Power Co., C.C.A.N.C., 35 F.2d 142—Modoc County Bank v. Ringling, C.C. A.Cal., 7 F.2d 535—Bell v. Union Pac. R. Co., Colo., 194 F. 366, 114 C.C.A. 326.

(2) Renewal is not necessary if the first motion or demurrer is not regarded as waived by the subsequent introduction of evidence.—Lydia Cotton Mills v. Prairie Cotton Co., S.C., 156 F. 225, 84 C.C.A. 129.

Rulings on motions

Objections to rulings on motions for a nonsuit or direction of a verdict not raised in the trial court cannot ordinarily be raised on appeal.—Halges v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey, C.C.A.N.Y., 58 F.2d 169, certiorari denied Central R. Co. of New Jersey v. Halges, 53 S.Ct. 11, 287 U. S. 607, 77 L.Ed. 528—Vance v. Chapman, C.C.A.Okl., 23 F.2d 914—3 C.J. p 841 note 49.

Specificness of objection

(1) Usually an objection that the evidence is not sufficient, whether made by motion for direction of a verdict or otherwise, must, to be available on appeal, specify the grounds therefor and the particular point on which evidence is wanting; a general objection will not suffice.—Virginia-Carolina Tie & Wood Co. v. Dunbar, C.C.A.N.C., 106 F.2d 383—Adams v. Shirk, Ill., 104 F. 54, 43 C.C.A. 407, rehearing denied 105 F. 659, 44 C.C.A. 653—Grant Storage Battery Co. v. De Lay, C.C.A.Neb., 87 F.2d 726—City of Woodward v. Caldwell, C.C.A.Okl., 86 F.2d 567—Washburn v. Douthit, C.C.A.Ark., 73 F.2d 23—H. F. Wilcox Oil & Gas Co., v. Skidmore, C.C.A.Mo., 72 F.2d 748—U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Lee, C.C.A.Colo., 20 F.2d 531, denying rehearing 18 F.2d 11.

Contrary decisions prior to promulgation of Fed. Rules of Civ. Proc., Rule 50(a), 28 U.S.C.A. foll. § 723c.—Pitcairn v. Hunault, C.C.A.Ind., 86 F.2d 664—Lynch v. Darnell, C.C.A. Minn., 265 F. 913, certiorari denied 41 S.Ct. 12, 254 U.S. 638, 65 L.Ed. 451—3 C.J. p 842 note 56.

(2) However, this rule does not apply where the specification of grounds would have been futile or unnecessary to acquaint the parties with the point intended to be raised.—New York Life Ins. Co. v. Doerksen, C.C.A.Kan., 75 F.2d 96—Sacks v. Stecker, C.C.A.N.Y., 60 F.2d 73—O'Halloran v. McGuirk, Mass., 167 F. 493, 93 C.C.A. 129.

(3) When specific grounds have been stated no others will be considered.—People's Loan & Investment Co. v. Universal Credit Co., C.C.A. Ark., 75 F.2d 545—Adams v. Shirk, Ill., 104 F. 54, 43 C.C.A. 407, rehearing denied 105 F. 659, 44 C.C.A. 653.

Reid, C.C.A. Tex., 76 F.2d 30.

3 C.J. p 862 note 21.

However, objection may be first made in the circuit court of appeals if the argument or conduct is so prejudicial that it may improperly influence the jury, and is of such a nature that no action of the trial court could remove the harmful effects thereof.—Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation v. Penick & Ford, C.C.A.Iowa, 101 F.2d 493.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) Proper objection must have been made in the trial court, usually with a request to instruct the jury to disregard the argument or remarks, or a motion to declare a mistrial, and a ruling must have been had on such objection.—Chapman & Dewey Lumber Co. v. Hanks, C.C.A.Tenn., 106 F.2d 482—Continental Casualty Co. v. Pouquette, C.C.A.Ariz., 28 F.2d 958—Grand Trunk Ry. Co. of Canada v. Blay, C.C.A.Vt., 297 F. 605—Brooklyn Heights R. Co. v. Ploxin, C.C.A. (2) Objection must have been timely.—Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Banion, C.C.A.Wyo., 106 F.2d 561, certiorari dismissed 60 S.Ct. 468, 309 U.S. 691, 84 L.Ed. 1033—Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation v. 3 C.J. p 843 note 67.

Particular defects

(1) That the instructions given were not authorized by the pleadings.—Jones v. Zurich General Accident & Liability Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 121 F.2d 761—Issaquah Coal Co. v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Wash., 126 F. 89, 61 C.C.A. 145.

(2) That the instructions were not sufficiently full.—Armit v. Loveland, C.C.A.Pa., 115 F.2d 308—Hupp Motor Car Corporation v. Wadsworth, C.C.A.Mich., 113 F.2d 827—Clum v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 60 S.Ct. 592, 309 U.S. 666, 84 L.Ed. 1013—3 C.J. p 846 note 84.

(3) That the instructions misstated or imperfectly stated the pleadings or issues.—Greer v. Catlin & Co., Pa., 171 F. 838, 96 C.C.A. 586.

(4) That the instructions were conflicting or contradictory.—U. S. v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., C.C.A.Minn., 82 F.2d 131.

(5) That the instructions misstated the measure of damages.—Southern Fruit Distributors v. Fulmer, C.C.A.Va., 107 F.2d 456.

(6) That the instructions were not read to the jury before being handed to them.—Gladden v. Gabbert, Miss., 219 F. 855, 135 C.C.A. 525.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) A general objection may be sufficient where the instruction is fundamentally or inherently wrong or erroneous.—Casserly v. Wheeler, C.C.A.Cal., 282 F. 389.

(2) Usually, however, the objection must specifically and definitely point out the particular ground or grounds on which it is based.—Krug v. Mutual Ben. Health & Accident Ass'n, C.C.A.Mo., 120 F.2d 296—Husky Refining Co. v. Barnes, C.C.A.Idaho, 119 F.2d 715, 134 A.L.R. 1221—Ralston Purina Co. v. Novak, C.C.A.Neb., 111 F.2d 631—Compagnie Générale Transatlantique v. Tawes, C.C.A.Canal Zone, 111 F.2d 92, certiorari denied 61 S Ct. 46, 311 U.S. 678, 85 L.Ed. 437—Hazeltine v. Baker, C.C.A.Idaho, 73 F.2d 691—Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Van Altena, C.C.A.Wis., 67 F.2d 836—Order of United Commercial Travelers of America v. Greer, C.C.A.Okl., 43 F.2d 499—Alaska Treadwell Gold Mining Co. v. Mugford, C.C.A.Alaska, 270 F. 753—Al. G. Barnes Show Co. v. Eichelbarger, C.C.A.Wash., 269 F. 132—Buckeye Cotton Oil Co. v. Sloan, Tenn., 250 F. 712, 163 C.C.A. 44—Campbell v. Krauss, Pa., 249 F. 670, 161 C.C.A. 580—Southern Pac. Co. v. Stewart, Ariz., 233 F. 956, 147 C.C.A. 630, error dismissed 38 S.Ct. 130, 245 U.S. 359, 62 L.Ed. 345, rehearing granted 38 S.Ct. 203, 245 U.S. 562, 62 L.Ed. 472, and reversed on other grounds 39 S.Ct. 139, 248 U.S. 446, 63 L.Ed. 350—Atlas Portland Cement Co. v. Hagen, Mo., 233 F. 24, 147 C.C.A. 94, certiorari denied 37 S.Ct. 15, 242 U.S. 631, 61 L.Ed. 537—3 C.J. p 845 note 75.

(3) No ground or grounds other than those specified will be considered by the appellate court.—Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Levinson, Mo., 211 F. 122, 127 C.C.A. 520—Holmes v. Montauk Steamboat Co., N.Y., 93 F. 731, 35 C.C.A. 556.

(4) A motion for a directed verdict is not necessary or appropriate to obtain a review of the objection that a portion of the charge should not have been given as there was no evidence on which it could be based.—O. J. Moore Grocer Co. v. Pacific Rice Mills, C.C.A.Iowa, 296 F. 828.

(5) Objection must be timely.—Delaware & H. R. Corporation v. Cottrell, C.C.A.Pa., 69 F.2d 195, certiorari denied 54 S.Ct. 719, 292 U.S. 638, 78 L.Ed. 1490—3 C.J. p 846 note 79.

(6) A material misdirection in the charge will be reviewed on proper and timely objection alone, without any request having been made for a correct instruction.—Brabham v. State of Mississippi, for Use of Smith, C.C.A.Miss., 96 F.2d 210, rehearing denied 97 F.2d 251, certiorari denied State of Mississippi for Use of Smith v. Brabham, 59 S.Ct. 103, 305 U.S. 636, 83 L.Ed. 409.

23. U.S.—Sprinkle v. Davis, C.C.A.Va., 104 F.2d 487.

Necessity of request

(1) Usually failure to instruct the conduct and deliberations of the jury,[24] the form or sufficiency of the verdict,[25] trial, decision, and findings by the court without a jury,[26] the findings will not be reviewed unless a proper request has been made and refused.—Puget Sound Power & Light Co. v. Public Utility Dist. No. 1 of Whatcom County, C.C.A.Wash., 123 F.2d 286—State Automobile Mut. Ins. Co. of Columbus, Ohio v. York, C.C.A.N.C., 104 F.2d 730, certiorari denied 60 S.Ct. 120, 308 U.S. 591, 84 L.Ed. 495—Ohmer v. Allen, C.C.A.Ohio, 79 F.2d 942.

(2) So, if instructions given are correct as far as they go, it cannot be assigned as error that the court omitted to instruct on all points involved in the case if the attention of the court has not been directed thereto by special requests for instructions on those points.—Krug v. Mutual Ben. Health & Accident Ass'n, C.C.A.Mo., 120 F.2d 296—McVeigh v. McGurren, C.C.A.Ill., 117 F.2d 672, certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 960, 313 U.S. 573, 85 L.Ed. 1531—Travelers Indemnity Co. v. Particular defects not reviewable where party failed to request instruction remedying alleged error:

(1) That the instructions given are not sufficiently full or complete.—Boston & M. R. R. v. Baker, Mass., 236 F. 896, 150 C.C.A. 158—3 C.J. p 852 note 26.

(2) That the court fails to state or charge on all of the issues or defenses.—National Biscuit Co. v. Litzky, C.C.A.Mich., 22 F.2d 939, 56 A.L.R. 853—Cleveland & Western Coal Co. v. (3) That an instruction given needs qualification or modification.—U. S. Smelting Co. v. Parry, Utah, 166 F. 407, 92 C.C.A. 159.

(4) That instruction fails to define sufficiently words and terms used.—Order of United Commercial Travelers of America v. Greer, C.C.A.Okl., 43 F.2d 499—Nemaha County, Neb. v. Harmon, C.C.A.Neb., 289 F. 795—3 C.J. p 855 note 39.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) Requests must usually be in proper form.—Jasper County Lumber Co. v. McNeil, C.C.A.Tex., 76 F.2d 207—Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America v. Moses, C.C.A.Tex., 36 F.2d 219.

(2) Further, unless proper exception or objection has been taken below to failure to grant requests, or irregularities in giving them, such matters will not be considered in the court of appeals.—Glynn v. May, C.C.A.Wis., 271 F. 464.

(3) It is sufficient that request was made before case was submitted to jury, and that district court considered request and ruled on it, and that plaintiff saved exception when district court gave no instruction on the subject of the request.—Peterson v. Sheridan, C.C.A.Iowa, 115 F.2d 121.

Findings of fact and conclusions of law

(1) As a rule, only objections to the findings of fact or conclusions of law, or to the want thereof, which have properly been brought to the attention of the trial court will be considered on appeal.—Jackson County v. Alton R. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 105 F.2d 633, certiorari denied Alton R. Co. v. Jackson County, Mo., 60 S.Ct. 175, 308 U.S. 610, 84 L.Ed. 510—Hill v. Ohio Casualty Ins. (3) Exceptions

(a) In general

(b) Former practice

(a) In General

Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure formal exceptions to rulings or orders of the trial court are unnecessary to save for review alleged errors therein.

Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 46, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, formal exceptions to rulings or orders of the trial court are unnecessary to save for review alleged errors in such rulings or orders;[33] but for all purposes for which an

(2) Under Fed. Rules of Civ. Proc., rule 52, 28 U.S.C.A. foll. § 723c, requests for findings are not necessary for purposes of review.—U. S. v. Boston & M. R. R., C.C.A.Mass., 117 F.2d 424, reversing, D.C., 30 F.Supp. 780—Drybrough v. Ware, C.C.A.Ky., 111 F.2d 548—Peebles v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, C.C.A.Ohio, 110 F.2d 76—Jackson County v. Alton R. S., C.C.A.Mont., 99 F.2d 283.

(3) However, the substance of previous practice is retained since it is also required that a party make known to the court the action he desires taken or his objection to that taken by the court and his ground therefor.—Drybrough v. Ware, supra.

(4) Prior to the promulgation of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, no reviewable question was presented where a party failed to make a motion for judgment or request special findings of fact or conclusions of law.—Hill v. Ohio Casualty Ins. Co., supra.

(5) General exception taken to judgment rendered by trial court sitting without jury sufficed to raise question whether facts as found supported judgment, but appellate court was bound to accept facts as found. —Shapleigh v. Mier, C.C.A.Tex., 83 F.2d 673, certiorari granted 57 S.Ct. 17, 299 U.S. 524, 81 L.Ed. 386, affirmed 57 S.Ct. 261, 299 U.S. 468, 81 L.Ed. 355, 113 A.L.R. 253.

Interest

(1) Ordinarily it may not be first urged on appeal that there was error in allowing or not allowing interest, or in the calculation of the amount of interest allowed.—Eastern Commercial Travelers Accident Ass'n v. Sanders, C.C.A.Mass., 108 F.2d 643—Smith v. Boise City, C.C.A.Idaho, 104 F.2d 933—Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Armstrong, C.C.A.Neb., 85 F.2d 187—Inhabitants of City of Plainfield v. (2) However, the allowance of interest may be a fundamental error which may be considered even though not raised below.—National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. v. School Dist. No. 68, Sequoyah County, Okl., C.C.A.Okl., 115 F.2d 232.

Grounds of objection must be specific

Co., W.Va., 145 F. 458, 75 C.C.A. 266, 7 Ann.Cas. 426.

3 C.J. p 874 note 68.

Particular defects within rule

(1) That judgment is several instead of joint or vice versa.—Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. George A. Hormel & Co., Minn., 240 F. 386, 153 C.C.A. 312.

(2) Mere irregularity or informality in entry of judgment.—Thornton v. National City Bank of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 45 F.2d 127—Stone v. Howell, C.C.A.Alaska, 33 F.2d 701.

(3) It is held, however, that the objection that a judgment does not conform to, and is not supported by, the verdict or findings is a fundamental one, apparent of record, and may be made for the first time on appeal.—Coggins v. Gregorio, C.C.A.N. M., 97 F.2d 948—3 C.J. p 879 note 10.

Apparently contra National Biscuit Co. v. Litzky, C.C.A.Mich., 22 F.2d 939, 56 A.L.R. 853.

Sufficiency of objection

(1) Objection must usually be specific and point out the grounds thereof, and no grounds other than those specified in the lower court will be considered on appeal.—National Surety Co. v. Lincoln County, Mont., 238 F. 705, 151 C.C.A. 555, affirming, D.C., Lincoln County v. Coast Bridge Co., 231 F. 468.

(2) In order to question the correctness of a judgment rendered for defendant on an agreed statement of facts, it is not necessary that plaintiff shall have made a formal motion for judgment on the statement, and then saved an exception to its denial; it is sufficient that he excepted to the judgment when rendered.—Springfield Safe-Deposit & Trust Co. v. Attica, Kan., 85 F. 387, 29 C.C.A. 214, certiorari denied 19 S.Ct. 884, 171 U. S. 689, 43 L.Ed. 1179.

exception was formerly necessary it is sufficient that a party, at the time the ruling or order is made or sought, make known to the court the action which he desires the court to take or his objection to the action of the court and his grounds therefor,[34] and, if a party has no opportunity to object to a ruling or order at the time it is made, the absence of an objection does not thereafter prejudice him.[35]

(b) Former Practice

Formerly exceptions to alleged error were usually necessary in order that such error might be considered on appeal.

Prior to the adoption of the rule of court considered above dispensing with the necessity for formal exceptions, it was a general rule, subject to some qualifications,[36] that rulings or decisions made by the trial court on which error was predicated would not be revised on appeal unless an appropriate exception to the alleged error was reserved;[37] and, to be appropriate, the exception was required to be

Necessity of objections to court's instructions to jury see supra § 292 b (2).

35. Exceptions are not abolished by rule.—Great Lakes Transit Corp. v. Great Lakes Towing Co., D.C.N.Y., 42 F.Supp. 362.

36. Errors appearing in record proper

(1) Ordinarily, where the alleged error complained of appeared in the record proper, the circuit court of appeals could notice it and reverse the judgment of the court below, although no exception was taken.—Widetzky v. Pilgrim Trust Co., C.C. A.Mass., 108 F.2d 647—Montgomery v. Erie R. Co., C.C.A.N.J., 97 F.2d 289—U. S. v. Huie, C.C.A.Ga., 73 F.2d 305—Brown v. Carver, C.C.A.N.Y., 45 F.2d 673—Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Frye-Bruhn Co., Mo., 184 F. 15, 106 C.C.A. 217—3 C.J. p 898 note 62.

(2) Accordingly the objection that the verdict did not support the judgment, being a question of law appearing on the face of the record, could be assigned as a ground of reversal, although no exception was taken.—East St. Louis Cotton Oil Co. v. Skinner Bros. Mfg. Co., Mo., 249 F. 439, 162 C.C.A. 5.

3 C.J. p 895 note 52.

The office of an exception was to challenge the correctness of the rulings or decisions of the trial court promptly when made, to the end that such rulings or decisions might be corrected by the court itself, if deemed erroneous, and to lay the foundation for their review, if necessary, by the appellate tribunal.—Bucy v. Nevada Const. Co., C.C.A. Idaho, 125 F.2d 213—American Distilling Co. v. Wisconsin Liquor Co., C.C.A.Wis., 104 F.2d 582, 123 A.L.R. 739—Hazeltine v. Johnson, C.C.A. taken in proper time[38] and to be definite and specific.[39] Accordingly proper exceptions were usually required to preserve for consideration on appeal alleged errors in rulings or decisions of the lower court made before,[40] during,[41] or after[42] the trial with respect to pleadings,[43] the mode and conduct

3 C.J. p 895 note 50.

Rule not altered by statute
The statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861 a, abolishing writs of error and substituting appeals therefor, did not alter the text rule.—Central Supply Co. v. Carter Clothing Corporation, C.C.A.N.J., 35 F.2d 172.

In cases in which a jury trial was waived exceptions were required to be taken and reserved as though the trial had been to a jury.—Allen v. New York, P. & N. R. Co., C.C.A.Va., 15 F.2d 532, certiorari denied 47 S.Ct. 459, 273 U.S. 756, 71 L.Ed. 876.

An assignment of error was not equivalent to an exception.—Veneri v. Draper, C.C.A.W.Va., 22 F.2d 33, certiorari denied 48 S.Ct. 339, 276 U.S. 633, 634, 72 L.Ed. 742.

Exception to judgment
The suing out of a writ of error to review a judgment was a sufficient exception to the judgment.—Fellman v. Royal Ins. Co., 185 F. 689, 107 C.C.A. 637, denying rehearing 184 F. 577, 106 C.C.A. 557.

Exceptions taken could be waived by exceptant.—Marine City Stave Co. v. Herreshoff Mfg. Co., C.C.R.I., 32 F. 822—3 C.J. p 960 note 77.

United States court for China
Under Act June 30, 1906, creating the United States court for China, practice and procedure therein conformed to that of district and circuit courts, so that, under Rev.St. §§ 649, 700, for review in a case tried by it without a jury, its rulings must have been excepted to at the time and preserved by bill of exceptions.—China Press v. Webb, C.C.A. China, 7 F.2d 581.

38. U.S.—Arthur C. Harvey Co. v. Malley, Mass., 53 S.Ct. 426, 288 U.S. 415, 77 L.Ed. 866, affirming, C.C.A., 60 F.2d 97, which affirmed, D.C., 52 F.2d 885, certiorari granted 53 S.Ct. 314, 287 U.S. 596, 77 L.Ed. 519, and motion denied, C.C.A., 61 F.2d 365, motion denied 53 S.Ct. 656, 289 U.S. 704, 77 L.Ed. 1461—American Cast Iron Pipe Co. v. Cure of omission by bill of exceptions
Exceptions not taken at the proper time could not be incorporated nunc pro tunc in the bill of exceptions.—Fleischmann Const. Co. v. U. S., to Use of Forsberg, Va., 46 S.Ct. 284, 270 U.S. 349, 70 L.Ed. 624, affirming, C.C.A., 298 F. 330, which affirmed, D.C., U. S. v. Fleischmann Const. Co., 298 F. 320, and error allowed, C.C.A., 298 F. 1020—U. S. v. Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co., C.C.A.Mass., 95 F.2d 867, affirming, D.C., Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co. v. U. 3 C.J. p 900 note 96, p 940 note 20 [d].

An exception was sufficiently specific if it could be clearly seen therefrom that the particular ruling or decision complained of was intended to be excepted to.—Winfrey v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., Okl., 194 F. 808, 114 C.C.A. 218—3 C.J. p 902 note 99.

Exceptions in gross
A single or general exception to two or more rulings, or to a series of rulings, was of no avail if any one of the rulings was correct.—Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Hale, Okl., 176 F. 71, 99 C.C.A. 379.

Indefiniteness not cured by assignments of error
An exception which was insufficient in itself could not be aided by a more particular specification in the assignments of error.—McCutcheon v. Hall Capsule Co., Ohio, 101 F. 546, 41 C.C.A. 494.

The scope and extent of an exception was, for purposes of review on appeal, limited to such matters as were specifically excepted to below.—Queensboro Nat. Bank of City of New York v. Kelly, C.C.A.N.Y., 48 F.2d 574, certiorari denied Kelly v. Queensboro Nat. Bank of City of New York, 52 S.Ct. 9, 284 U.S. 620, 76 L.Ed. 529—Swayne & Hoyt v. Barsch, Or., 226 F. 581, 141 C.C.A. 337.

40. U.S.—Nelson v. Devney, C.C.A. Wis., 102 F.2d 487.

Where error arising before trial or hearing was apparent of record, such matter could be considered on appeal without exceptions noted below.—Rausch v. Commercial Travelers' Mut. Accident Ass'n of America, C.C.A.Mo., 38 F.2d 766, certiorari denied 50 S.Ct. 461, 281 U.S. 763, 74 L.Ed. 1171.

41. U.S.—Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn. v. Crady, C.C.A.Ohio, 82 F.2d 900, certiorari denied 56 S.Ct. 949, 298 U.S. 681, 80 L.Ed. 1401—Northwest Theatres Co. v. Hanson, C.C.A. Mont., 4 F.2d 471—U. S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation v. Drew, C.C.A.Pa., 288 F. 374
3 C.J. p 908 note 62.

42. U.S.—Bluegrass Canning Co. v. Steward, Ky., 175 F. 537, 99 C.C.A. 159.

43. Particular rulings held not reviewable in the absence of an exception thereto:
(1) Ruling on motion to strike out portion of answer.—Ghost v. U. S., Colo., 168 F. 841, 94 C.C.A. 253—Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Wagner, Colo., 167 F. 75, 92 C.C.A. 527.
(2) Rulings allowing or refusing to allow amendments.—Previn v. Tenacre, Inc., C.C.A.N.J., 70 F.2d 389, certiorari denied 54 S.Ct. 528, 291 U.S. 677, 78 L.Ed. 1065.

Errors apparent on record
(1) No exception was necessary to review a ruling with respect to pleadings where the question sought to be raised was a question of law apparent on the record.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. United States & Mexican Trust Co., Kan., 221 F. 545, 137 C.C.A. 113.
(2) Thus rulings on demurrers were reviewable, even though no ex-of the trial in general,[44] the admission and exclusion of evidence,[45] the reception of evidence or the examination of witnesses,[46] the submission of the case or particular issues therein to the jury,[47] the dismissal of the cause,[48] the giving of instructions,[49] and the granting or refusal of a motion for ception was taken.—Board of Com'rs of City and County of Denver v. Home Savings Bank, Colo., 35 S.Ct. 265, 236 U.S. 101, 59 L.Ed. 485, affirming 200 F. 28, 118 C.C.A. 256—Rocky Mountain Fuel Co. v. (3) But the contrary was held in an early case.—Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Jackson, Okl., 192 F. 792, 114 C.C.A. 12.

44. U.S.—Lohman v. Stockyards Loan Co., Okl., 243 F. 517, 156 C. C.A. 215, certiorari denied 38 S.Ct. 134, 245 U.S. 668, 62 L.Ed. 539.

Conduct or remarks of judge or counsel

(1) Of the presiding judge.—Manhattan Oil Co. v. Mosby, C.C.A.Mo., 72 F.2d 840, certiorari denied 55 S. Ct. 237, 293 U.S. 623, 79 L.Ed. 710—Wolf v. Edmunson, Or., 240 F. 53, 153 C.C.A. 89—Lane v. Necessity for exception to direction of verdict

Where defendants many times excepted to the trial court's ruling excluding evidence of a warranty and a breach thereof, they were not precluded from a review of such question because of a failure further to except to the court's ruling directing a verdict for plaintiff.—Harris v. Marsh, Mo., 217 F. 555, 133 C.C.A. 407.

46. U.S.—Schermann v. Yellow Cab Co., C.C.A.Ill., 101 F.2d 363, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 1045, 307 U.S. 647, 83 L.Ed. 1527.

Direction of verdict; necessity of exception

(1) To be considered on appeal, alleged error on the part of the trial court in taking the case from the jury, or in directing or refusing to direct a verdict, was required to be saved by proper exception.—Humphreys Gold Corp. v. Lewis, C.C.A. Mont., 90 F.2d 896—City of Thomson v. Louisville & N. R. Co., C.C.A.Ga., 86 F.2d 567—McConnell v. U. S., C. C.A.Pa., 81 F.2d 639—Johnson v. Titanium Pigment Co., C.C.A.Mo., 81 F. 2d 529—Jefferson Standard Life Ins. Co. v. Stevenson, C.C.A.La., 70 F.2d 72—McCuing v. Bovay, C.C.A.Ark., 60 F.2d 375—Ætna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Reliable Auto Tire Co., C.C.A. Mo., 58 F.2d 100—S. A. Lynch Enterprise Finance Corporation v. Dulion, C.C.A.Ga., 45 F.2d 6—Andresen v. Kaercher, C.C.A.Minn., 38 F.2d 462—Murray Hospital v. Rasmussen, C.C. A.Mont., 35 F.2d 864—Saunders System of Colorado Springs, Colo. v. Kelley, C.C.A.Colo., 30 F.2d 520—3 C.J. p 918 note 23.

(2) This rule was not altered by the act of Febr. 26, 1919, Comp.St. Suppl., Annot.1919 § 1246, amending Jud.Code § 269, requiring appellate courts to give judgment after examination of the entire record without regard to technical errors.—Landsberg v. San Francisco & P. S. S. Co., C.C.A.Or., 288 F. 560, petition dismissed 46 S.Ct. 11, 269 U.S. 591, 70 L.Ed. 428.

Time of taking exceptions

An exception to the denial of a motion for a directed verdict was required to be timely made.—Sacramento Suburban Fruit Lands Co. v. Tipper, C.C.A.Cal., 36 F.2d 941.

Sufficiency of exceptions to ruling on motion for directed verdict:

(1) Exceptions held sufficient.—Long v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., S.C., 238 F. 919, 151 C.C.A. 653—Penn Bridge Co. v. City of New Orleans, La., 222 F. 737, 138 C.C.A. 191, certiorari denied City of New Orleans v. Penn Bridge Co., 36 S.Ct. 160, 239 U.S. 639, 60 L.Ed. 481.

(2) Exceptions held insufficient.—U. S. v. Mobile & O. R. Co., C.C.A. Ala., 8 F.2d 613—Maxwell v. Abrast Realty Co., N.Y., 218 F. 457, 134 C.C. A. 255, dismissing error, D.C., Abrast Realty Co. v. Maxwell, 206 F. 333.

Estoppel

Where a verdict for defendant was directed without motion therefor, and while plaintiff and his counsel were absent by agreement between counsel, defendant was estopped to object that plaintiff did not except at the time the verdict was directed and in the presence of the jury.—Grace v. Louisville & N. R. Co., C. C.A.Miss., 255 F. 843, 167 C.C.A. 171.

48. Necessity of exception

(1) It was generally held that an exception was necessary to warrant a review on appeal of a ruling granting or refusing a motion for a nonsuit or dismissal.—Spencer, White & Prentis v. United Engineers & Constructors, C.C.A.N.J., 68 F.2d 565—Wynne v. Fries, C.C.A.Ohio, 50 F.2d 761—Brown v. Carver, C.C.A.N.Y., 45 F.2d 673.

(2) But in an early case it was held that no exception was necessary to give a right of appeal from an order of dismissal.—Willis v. Davis, Ky., 184 F. 889, 107 C.C.A. 211.

49. Error in giving instructions

(1) Exceptions were usually required to preserve for consideration on appeal error claimed to have been committed in giving instructions.—Meissner v. Papas, C.C.A.Wis., 124 F.2d 720—Widetzky v. Pilgrim Trust Co., C.C.A.Mass., 108 F.2d 647—Elzig v. Gudwangen, C.C.A.Minn., 91 F.2d 434—Western Express Co. v. Smeltzer, C.C.A.Ohio, 88 F.2d 94—Grant Storage Battery Co. v. De Lay, C.C.A.Neb., 87 F.2d 726—Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Kelly, C.C.A.Minn., 84 F.2d 569—Karlson v. U. S., C.C.A.Minn., 82 F.2d 330—McConnell v. U. S., C.C.A.Pa., 81 F.2d 629—Rackoff v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 78 F.2d 671—Century Indemnity Co. v. Shakespeare, C.C.A.Colo., 74 F.2d 392—Garrett Const. Co. v. Aldridge, C.C.A.Ark., 73 F.2d 814—Ralston Purina Co. v. Bansau, C.C.A.Ill., 73 F.2d 430—Washburn v. Douthit, C.C.A.Ark., 73 F.2d 23—H. F. Wilcox Oil & Gas Co. v. Skidmore, C.C.A.Mo., 72 F.2d 748—Taylor v. U. S., C.C.A.Ala., 71 F.2d 76—Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. v. Thomason, C.C.A.Ky., 70 F.2d 860—Lindback v. Milter, C.C.A.Pa., 70 F. 454—Meyer v. U. S., C.C.A.La., 65 F.2d 509—American Bureau of Shipping v. (3) Alleged error, however, could be considered without noting an appropriate exception where the interests of justice so required.—O'Connor v. Ludlam, C.C.A.N.Y., 92 F.2d 50.

Time of taking exceptions

(1) Usually exceptions to the giving or refusing of instructions were required to be taken before the jury retired.—Fairmount Glass Works v. Cub Fork Coal Co., Ind., 53 S.Ct. 252, 287 U.S. 474, 77 L.Ed. 439, reversing, C.C.A., Cub Fork Coal Co. v. Fairmount Glass Works, 59 F.2d 539, certiorari granted Fairmount Glass Works v. (2) But, where the jury, after retiring, returned for instructions which were given in the absence of counsel, it was sufficient if exceptions were taken as soon as opportunity was offered.—Merchants Exch. Bank v. McGraw, Wash., 76 F. 930, 22 C.C.A. 622.

Necessity of objections to court's instructions to jury under present practice see supra § 292 b (2).

50. U.S.—U. S. v. Blumenthal, C.C. A.Okl., 77 F.2d 219.

Time of taking exception

(1) An exception to the denial of a motion for judgment was required to be timely taken.—Lando v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., C.C.A. Cal., 84 F.2d 640, affirming, D.C., 11 F.Supp. 729.

(2) Procedure where case taken under advisement.—U. S. v. Martin, C.C.A.Kan., 80 F.2d 460.

Effect of exception

(1) Generally an exception to a denial of a motion for judgment in an action tried to the court without a jury presented reviewable questions.—U. S. v. Richards, C.C.A.Ohio, 79 F.2d 797, certiorari denied Richards v. U. S., 56 S.Ct. 595, 297 U.S. 718, 80 L.Ed. 1003—U. S. v. Wyoming Central Ass'n, C.C.A.Wyo., 70 F.2d 869, reversing, D.C., 2 F.Supp. 86—State Bank of New York v. Henderson County, C.C.A., 35 F.2d 859, certiorari denied Henderson County, State of Kentucky v. State Bank of New York, 50 S.Ct. 245, 281 U.S. 728, 74 L.Ed. 1144, 1145.

(2) But such an exception raised no question of law for the circuit court of appeals where there was no evidence before the trial court on which the requested judgment could be found or where the trial court's findings of fact were not findings of all the ultimate facts from which the judgment could be said to follow as a matter of law.—U. S. v. Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co., C.C. A.Mass., 95 F.2d 867, affirming, D.C., Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co. v. U. S., 14 F.Supp. 868, affirmed, C. C.A., U. S. v. Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co., 98 F.2d 132, certiorari granted U. S. v. Bartelsen & Petersen Engineering Co., 59 S.Ct. 229, 305 U.S. 590, 83 L.Ed. 373, affirmed U. S. v. Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co., 59 S.Ct. 541, 306 U.S. 276, 83 L.Ed. 647.

51. Particular errors held to require exceptions.—Garfield Aniline Works v. Zendle, C.C.A.N.J., 43 F.2d 537—Detroit United Ry. v. Weintrobe, Mich., 259 F. 68, 170 C.C.A. 136—Goelet v. Matt J. Ward Co., N.Y., 242 F. 65, 155 C.C.A. 9—3 C.J. p 932 note 77.

Errors appearing in record proper

Inasmuch as a verdict is a part of the record, no exception was necessary to support an assignment of error raising the question of its sufficiency.—Patterson v. Robinson, Pa., 180 F. 668, 103 C.C.A. 634.

sions of law,[52] the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, findings, or judgment,[53] and the

52. Findings of fact by court

(1) Proper exceptions were usually required to save for consideration on appeal errors relating to findings of fact by the trial court.—Klineline v. U. S., C.C.A.Ky., 85 F.2d 628—Roach v. Minshall, C.C.A.Ohio, 85 F. 2d 614—Kelley v. U. S., C.C.A.Ky., 85 F.2d 568—Aro Equipment Corporation v. Herring-Wissler Co., C.C.A. Iowa, 84 F.2d 619—Wright v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 75 F.2d 358—Rose v. Decisions or conclusions of law

(1) Proper exceptions were usually required to preserve for consideration on appeal errors relating to the lower court's conclusions of law or decision on the facts found.—Klineline v. U. S., C.C.A.Ky., 85 F.2d 628—Kelley v. U. S., C.C.A.Ky., 85 F.2d 568—Rose v. U. S., C.C.A.Ky., 69 F. 2d 966—Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Shirk, C.C.A.Kan., 50 F.2d 1046—Thornton v. General Motors Corporation, 42 F.2d 452, and certiorari denied General Motors Corporation v. Swan Carburetor Co., 51 S.Ct. 181, 282 U.S. 897, 75 L.Ed. 790—3 C.J. p 937 note 2.

(2) The exceptions were required to be specific.—Geo. A. Hormel & Co. v. Chicago M. & St. P. Ry. Co., C.C.A. Minn., 283 F. 915—Arkansas Bridge Co. v. Kelly-Atkinson Const. Co., C.C. A.Mo., 282 F. 802.

(3) Moreover, the exceptions were required to be timely taken.—First Nat. Bank v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 102 F. 2d 907, certiorari denied 59 S.Ct. 1038, 307 U.S. 641, 83 L.Ed. 1521, rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 69, 308 U.S. 633, 84 L.Ed. 527, motion denied 60 S.Ct. 1090, 310 U.S. 658, 84 L.Ed. 1421—Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Langreder, C.C.A.Ill., 87 F.2d 586—Huron College v. Union County Trust Co., C.C.A.S.D., 77 F.2d 609.

Refusal of court to make special findings in a jury waived case was not subject to exception.—Fred W. Mears Heel Co. v. Walley, C.C.A.Me., 71 F.2d 876, affirming, D.C., Walley v. Fred W. Mears Heel Co., 4 F.Supp. 277, certiorari denied Fred W. Mears Heel Co. v. Walley, 55 S.Ct. 122, 293 U.S. 605, 79 L.Ed. 696.

53. Necessity and sufficiency of exceptions

(1) Proper exceptions were usually required to preserve for consideration on appeal the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, findings, or judgment.—Maryland Casualty Co. v. Jones, Cal., 49 S.Ct. 484, 279 U.S. 792, 73 L.Ed. 960, reversing, C.C.A., 27 F.2d 521—Eastern Shore of Virginia Produce Exchange v. New York Cent. R. Co., C.C.A.Va., 97 F.2d 565—Union Bleachery v. U. A.W.Va., 30 F.2d 46, affirming, D.C., International Finance Corporation v. People's Bank of Keyser, 27 F.2d 523, and certiorari denied People's Bank of Keyser, W.Va. v. International Finance Corporation, 49 S.Ct. 352, 279 U.S. 858, 73 L.Ed. 999—Associated Industries Ins. Corporation v. New Amsterdam Casualty Co., C. C.A.Tex., 29 F.2d 278—McMillan v. National Wool Warehouse & Storage Co., C.C.A.Idaho, 28 F.2d 793, certiorari denied 49 S.Ct. 251, 279 U.S. 836, 73 L.Ed. 984—Gillespie v. Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corporation, C.C.A.China, 23 F.2d 670, certiorari denied 48 S.Ct. 420, 276 U.S. 635, 72 L.Ed. 743—Thompson-Starrett Co. v. La Belle Iron Works, C.C.A.N.Y., amount of recovery;[54] and a similar rule was applied with respect to errors in proceedings before referees, masters, and like officers.[55]

An exception to a judgment in a law action tried by the court without a jury, however, presented nothing for review.[56]

(4) Motions for New Trial

A motion for a new trial is not a condition precedent to the taking of an appeal.

While a contrary rule prevails in some jurisdictions under state practice, as appears in Appeal and Error §§ 352–388, a motion for a new trial is not a condition precedent to the taking of an appeal under the federal practice.[57]

c. Parties

(2) Appellants
(3) Appellees
(4) Intervention
(5) Transfer or devolution of interest
(6) Death of party
(7) Designation and description
(8) Defects, objections, and amendments

(1) In General

Generally all parties to the record who appear to have any rights or interests that may be directly affected by a judgment on appeal must be made parties to the appeal.

In the absence of contrary statute or rule of court, the general rule is that all parties to the record who appear to have any rights or interests that may be directly affected by a judgment on appeal must be made parties to the appeal, or must be given notice thereof, and an opportunity of being heard and defending their rights.[58]

(2) For purposes of review exceptions to a referee's report could be considered as equivalent to exceptions to rulings of a district court sitting without a jury "in the progress of the trial."—Thompson-Starrett Co. v. La Belle Iron Works, C.C.A.N.Y., 17 F.2d 536, certiorari denied 47 S.Ct. 763, 274 U.S. 748, 71 L.Ed. 1330.

Exceptions to rulings of court

(1) Exceptions to the rulings by the trial judge on exceptions to the report of the referee or master were essential to review of such rulings.—City of Cleveland v. Walsh Const. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 279 F. 57, affirming D.C., Walsh Const. Co. v. City of Cleveland, 271 F. 701—Rutan v. Johnson & Johnson, N.J., 231 F. 369, 145 C.C.A. 363—3 C.J. p 950 note 98.

Jurisdictional question

The circuit court of appeals has no power to hear and determine a case unless all the parties substantially affected by the judgment or decree are brought before it.—Babcock v. Norton, C.C.A.N.Y., 5 F.2d 153, certiorari denied Norton v. Babcock, 45 S.Ct. 509, 268 U.S. 689, 69 L.Ed. 1158.

Purpose of this rule has been stated as being that the successful party may be at liberty to enforce his judgment, decree, or order without

(2) Appellants

Under a rule of court so providing, parties interested in a judgment may join in an appeal therefrom, or, without summons and severance, any one or more of them may appeal separately.

Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 74, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, parties interested jointly, severally, or otherwise in a judgment may join in an appeal therefrom; or, without summons and severance, any one or more of them may appeal separately or any two or more of them may join in an appeal.[59]

Former practice. Prior to the adoption of this rule of court, and prior to the abolition of the writ of error by statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a, the general rule, subject to some qualifications, was that all parties against whom a joint judgment or decree had been rendered were required to join in a writ of error or appeal, unless there had been a severance of the parties in interest effected by summons and severance, or by an equivalent proceeding appearing in the record;[60] but, where a decree or judgment was several in form and substance and the in-delay against those parties who do not desire to have it reversed, and that the appellate court may not be required to decide the same question more than once on the same record.—Lewis v. Sittel, Ind.T., 165 F. 157, 91 C.C.A. 191—Dodson v. Fletcher, Ark., 78 F. 214, 24 C.C.A. 69, motion denied 79 F. 129, 24 C.C.A. 466—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Parties in default

The rule applied even where some of the parties had suffered a default to be entered against them.—Mittry Bros. Const. Co. v. U. S., for Use of Belmont, C.C.A.Idaho, 75 F.2d 79, affirming in part, D.C., U. S. for Use and Benefit of Belmont v. Mittry Bros. Const. Co., 4 F.Supp. 216.

What constituted summons and severance or its equivalent

(1) Anything in the record which showed that the party not appealing had notice of the appeal and chose to abide by the decree was a sufficient showing of severance.—Wire Tie Mach. Co. v. Pacific Box Corporation, C.C.A.Cal., 102 F.2d 543, affirmed 107 F.2d 54—Brock v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, C.C.A.Ala., 86 F.2d 345, certiorari denied Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Beach, Ga., 227 F. 36, 141 C.C.A. 584.

(2) A belated appearance and request to join as appellant, however, was not equivalent to "summons and severance."—American Baptist Home Mission Soc. v. Barnett, supra.

(3) The same was true of belated appearances and waivers by the omitted parties.—Pflueger v. Sherman, C.C.A.Hawaii, 75 F.2d 84, certiorari denied 56 S.Ct. 94, 296 U.S. 584, 80 L.Ed. 413, overruling Richards v. Filing of summons and severance

Summons and severance, or their equivalents, were required to be filed in the lower court.—Pflueger v. Sherman, C.C.A.Hawaii, 75 F.2d 84, certiorari denied 56 S.Ct. 94, 296 U.S. 584, 80 L.Ed. 413.

On refusal of coparties to join in or prosecute appeal

Where one or more of the coplaintiffs or codefendants refused to join in or prosecute an appeal or writ of error in which they should all unite, on notice or process regularly served, or, after having perfected the appeal, abandon it, the others could prosecute the proceedings alone.—Kelly v. Allen, C.C.A.Ariz., 49 F.2d 876, certiorari denied Allen v. Kelly, 52 S.Ct. 23, 284 U.S. 642, 76 L.Ed. 546—3 C.J. p 1007 note 69.

terest represented by each of the coparties, plaintiff or defendant, or by some of them, was separate and distinct from that of the others, any party who was aggrieved in his separate interest, or several parties who were aggrieved in their united interests, could appeal or sue out a writ of error separately or jointly, as the case might be, to protect his or their own interests without joining coparties adjudged against by the same judgment or decree, but not united in interest with him or them, and without a summons and severance or the equivalent thereof.[61] It was not necessary, however, to join as parties nominal and useless parties.[62] Thus one whose interest was in no way adjudged, although

Person jointly liable for costs

That a decree made a party jointly liable for the costs did not require him to join in an appeal or to be severed.—Higbee v. Chadwick, Tenn., 220 F. 873, 136 C.C.A. 317.

Whether a decree was joint, precluding appeal by one of several defendants only, was determined by the face of the decree.—City of Shidler v. H. C. Speer & Sons Co., C.C.A. Okl., 62 F.2d 544.

Decree several in fact, although joint in form

As a decree may be several in fact and in law, although it be apparently joint in form, the failure to unite as a party to an appeal one whose interest was clearly separate and distinct from that of the party appealing was not error.—State of Texas v. Anderson, Clayton & Co., C.C.A.Tex., 92 F.2d 104, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 265, 302 U.S. 747, 82 L.Ed. 578, rehearing denied 58 S.Ct. 366, 302 U.S. 780, 82 L.Ed. 602—Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Omaha v. L'Herisson, C.C.A.S.D., 33 F.2d 841.

Action against bank and stockholders

In a suit against a bank and stockholders to enforce a debt and stockholders' liability, defendants' liability being several and not joint, a decree against them could be appealed from by one or more without joining the others.—Hightower v. American Nat. Bank of Macon, C.C.A.Ga., 276 F. 371, affirmed 44 S.Ct. 123, 263 U.S. 351, 68 L.Ed. 334.

Trustees and tax collector where issues unrelated

Where, in a suit by a beneficiary of a trust against the trustees to enjoin them from paying an internal revenue tax, the collector was subsequently brought in and an injunction sought to restrain collection of the tax, the latter issue was so unrelated to the former that on an appeal by the collector a summons and severance, or notice to the trustees, was not necessary.—Reinecke v. Peacock, C.C.A.Ill., 3 F.2d 583, certiorari denied Peacock v. Reinecke, 45 S.Ct. 635, 268 U.S. 699, 69 L.Ed. 1164.

Parties in default

Where the judgment was essentially several in nature, it was not necessary to join as parties persons who had suffered a default.—New York Trust Co. v. Island Oil & Transport Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 33 F.2d 104, 79 A.L.R. 1007—3 C.J. p 1005 note 51 [a].

United States marshal

Where plaintiff sued to enjoin the assignees of a judgment, as well as the United States marshal, from further proceeding under an execution issued on the judgment, whereby it was sought by the assignees to exercise a claimed right of redemption of real property which once had belonged to the judgment debtor, an appeal by the assignees from an adverse judgment would not be dismissed, because the marshal did not join, since the assignees were the real parties in interest.—Benedict v. Setters, C.C.A.Colo., 261 F. 492.

Showing as to interest required

Where a joint judgment was entered against a public contractor and surety, and surety alone appealed without summons and severance, contention that nonjoinder of construction company was not fatal to jurisdiction of appellate court because company had only a nominal made a party to the suit below, was not required to be made a party.[63]

(3) Appellees

Generally all parties whose interests will be affected by a reversal or modification of the judgment below must be made appellees.

The general rule is that all parties in favor of whom a judgment or decree has been rendered below, or who are interested in having such judgment or decree sustained, or whose interests will necessarily be affected by a reversal or modification of such judgment or decree, must be made appellees.[64] This rule has been applied to lienors, where a judgment places all mechanics' liens on an equality, and one lienor appeals, seeking to obtain priority;[65] in some cases to parties who are in default or have confessed judgment in the court below;[66] to debtors, creditors, and claimants;[67] to parties in a representative or official capacity, such as receivers[68] or assignees in bankruptcy or insolvency;[69] and to purchasers at judicial sales.[70] Mere nominal parties, however, or parties who have no interests that can be affected by the judgment on appeal are not necessary parties.[71] The same is generally true of persons who were not parties below and who are not parties to the judgment, although interested in the judgment as rendered.[72] Consequently a mere stakeholder whose liability has been fixed by stipulation,[73] or one against whom no relief could be granted under the pleadings,[74] need not be made a party.

(4) Intervention

Intervention by persons who were not parties in the court below is generally denied.

It is not the practice of the circuit courts of appeals to allow intervention by persons who were not parties in the court below;[75] and hence intervention is generally denied,[76] particularly where the intervention raises new issues.[77]

(5) Transfer or Devolution of Interest

Where a party to an appeal has transferred or otherwise lost his interest in the appeal, the person acquiring such interest may usually be substituted in his place.

Where the interests of a party to an appeal devolve on another, either by operation of law or by interest was without merit, where there was nothing to show what the interest of either party affected by the judgment was.—Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. U. S., for Use and Benefit of Stringille, C.C.A.Mass., 103 F.2d 501.

Defendants in error
Prior to the abolition of the writ of error by statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861 a, the same general rule applied as to defendants in error.—Teel v. Chesapeake & O. Ry. Co. of Virginia, Ky., 204 F. 914, 123 C.C.A. 210.

act of the parties, a person acquiring such interests will usually be allowed to be substituted and to prosecute or defend the appeal in place of the original party.[78] Thus in a proper case and on proper procedure the court will usually permit the substitution of an assignee of the cause of action;[79] of the successor of a corporation which has been dissolved by expiration of its charter or otherwise;[80] or of the successor of a party in an official or representative capacity who has been removed or has resigned, etc., such as a receiver[81] or a public officer.[82]

(6) Death of Party

On the death of a party to the action pending appeal, his personal representative generally may be made a party to prosecute or defend the suit.

Ordinarily an appeal to the circuit court of appeals will not abate upon the death of a party after it has been taken. In such a case, the executor or administrator of decedent generally may be made a party to prosecute or defend the suit.[83]

(7) Designation and Description

Mere clerical or immaterial errors in describing parties to an appeal are not fatal.

Mere clerical or immaterial errors in naming or describing the parties to an appeal, which cannot mislead, are not sufficient cause for dismissal.[84]

(8) Defects, Objections, and Amendments

Material defects as to parties on appeal require a dismissal of the appeal unless they may be and are cured by amendment or waiver.

As a rule the joinder of a person not a party to the action below or not interested or necessary, as an appellant, will not invalidate an appeal as to the proper parties.[85]

Nonjoinder. As a rule, unless joinder is essential to the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals, the nonjoinder of parties, either as appellants or as appellees will generally have no further effect than to preclude any investigation or adjudication which will affect the rights and liabilities of the parties not joined, but will have this effect.[86] It is otherwise, however, if the defect is jurisdictional, in which case the appeal, as a rule, will be dismissed,[87]

Effect of denial in trial court
A circuit court of appeals has jurisdiction to entertain an original application for substitution of parties in a suit which has been brought into that court by appeal, regardless of the action of the district court in denying a similar application.—Sumpter Lumber Co. v. Substitution not required
Where original pleading, in suit against bank, named receiver as a defendant, appeal was addressed to both bank and receiver, appeal bond ran to them, copy of contents of record was served on their counsel, and there was no withdrawal of counsel for either of defendants, appeal would not be dismissed because of failure to make successor receiver a party to the appeal.—Myers v. Canton Nat. Bank of Canton, supra.

83. Plaintiff's widow was not entitled to substitution as appellee on suggestion of plaintiff's death pending defendant's appeal, where she had not applied for letters testamentary or of administration.—Madden v. La Cofske, C.C.A.Ariz., 72 F.2d 602.

Delay in substitution of administratrix of estate of plaintiff who died subsequent to rendition of judgment was not ground for dismissal of defendant's appeal where such delay was occasioned by failure of administratrix to inform defendant of her appointment.—U. S. v. Hibbard, C.C. A.Idaho, 83 F.2d 785.

Writ of error taken by trustee
Writ of error taken out by plaintiff, "D. R. Howard, trustee," was held not taken by him as sole trustee, so as to have been abated by his death, and hence it could be revived in the name of his personal administrator.—Howard v. Leete, Ky., 257 F. 918, 169 C.C.A. 68.

unless, as will appear, the defect may be and is cured by amendment or waiver.

Withdrawal. Where several persons have appealed, any one of them, unless he is a necessary party, may be stricken as a party to the appeal at his own request.[88]

Amendments. Such defects in appellate proceedings as those arising from the nonjoinder or misnomer of parties are usually amendable in the circuit courts of appeals,[89] unless the defect is jurisdictional and fatal,[90] or unless there are other circumstances rendering an amendment improper.[91] Accordingly an omitted appellee usually may be brought in by amendment after the statutory time for appeal has expired;[92] but the defect of nonjoinder of a necessary appellant is not one which can be cured by amendment after the expiration of the time to appeal,[93] since to allow such party to join

Nonjoinder of parties jointly liable

Appellees

Where a defect in parties on appeal to the circuit court of appeals is in those parties who should have been served with citation as appellees, and the petition for appeal is timely and otherwise properly allowed, citation may be issued and served subsequently to obtain jurisdiction of a necessary appellee, if timely application is made therefor.—Interstate Oil Co. v. Gormley, C.C.A.Cal., 105 F.2d 431, certiorari denied 60 S.Ct. 383, 308 U.S. 626, 84 L.Ed. 522, rehearing denied 60 S.Ct. 512, 309 U.S. 694, 84 L.Ed. 1035.

Discretion of court

The issuance of a citation to obtain jurisdiction of a necessary appellee not previously made a party to the appeal is within the discretion of the circuit court of appeals, and the citation will not be issued unless there is merit in appellant's contentions.—Interstate Oil Co. v. Gormley, supra.

Mode of amendment

Writ of error

The text rule applied in the case of a writ of error prior to the aboli-

as appellant is in effect to grant him an appeal after the statute has forbidden it.[94]

Waiver of objections. Defects and objections with respect to parties on appeal may be expressly or impliedly waived, unless they entirely defeat the jurisdiction of the appellate court.[95]

a. Requirements in General

The filing of a proper notice of appeal with the district court constitutes a valid appeal. Failure of appellant to take any of the further steps is not a jurisdictional defect, but such a failure subjects appellant to such action as the circuit court of appeals deems appropriate. The notice is to be liberally construed in determining its sufficiency.

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, governs the manner of appeal to a circuit court of appeals.[96] Under the express provisions of the Rule the filing of a proper notice of appeal with the district court constitutes a valid appeal sufficient to vest jurisdiction in the circuit court of appeals,[97] and failure of appellant to take any of the further steps to secure the review of the judgment is not a jurisdictional defect,[98] but further steps provided for by the Rules are expected to be followed and, unless reasons satisfactory to the circuit court of appeals are advanced as a basis for special relief from their provisions, the court will take such action as it deems appropriate.[99] The notice of appeal must specify the parties taking the appeal, the judgment or part thereof appealed from, and the name of the court to which the appeal is taken.[1] The purpose of the rule is to require that an effectual notice of appeal be given,[2] and that the opposite party be advised that an appeal has been taken from a specific judgment in a particular case.[3] The courts are liberal in determining the sufficiency of the notice of appeal[4] and it is not rendered ineftion of that writ by statute, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861 a.—American Surety Co. of New York v. People of State of Colorado, for Use of Little, C.C.A. Colo., 22 F.2d 624—Lewis v. Littel, 165 F. 157, 91 C.C.A. 191, affirming 7 Ind.T. 602, 104 S.W. 850.

Summons and severance
As respects whether appeal was dismissible because of nonjoinder of necessary parties, equivalent to summons and severance, even if it could be filed in appellate court, would not be considered where such equivalent was filed ten months after filing of decree appealed from.—Pflueger v. But it would we think be a harkening back to the formalistic rigorism of an earlier and outmoded time, as well as a travesty upon justice, to hold that the extremely simple procedure required by the Rule is itself a kind of Mumbo Jumbo, and that the failure to comply formalistically with it defeats substantial rights."—Crump v. fectual because of a slight or unsubstantial mistake which would not mislead the opposite party.[5] Where cases are consolidated for trial, a notice of appeal signed by attorneys for all complainants and naming all complainants as appealing parties is sufficient, but the better practice is to file a notice of appeal in each case.[6] The part of the judgment not designated in the notice of appeal as appealed from by appellant is not before the circuit court of appeals for review.[7]

Interlocutory order or decree. The manner of taking an appeal from an interlocutory order or decree permitted under 28 U.S.C.A. § 227 is by notice of appeal as provided for in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c.[8]

b. Time for Taking and Perfecting

(1) In general
(2) What constitutes taking and perfecting proceedings
(3) Commencement of period of limitation
(4) Extension of time by court or by parties
(5) Premature appeal

(1) In General

Requirements as to the time of appeal from a final judgment or from an interlocutory order or decree are mandatory and jurisdictional.

With respect to appeals from judgments in civil actions, the time for the filing of a notice of appeal referred to in Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 (a), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, is the period prescribed by 28 U.S.C.A. § 230.[9] The Act of March 3, 1891, c. 517 § 11, 26 U.S.St. at L. p 829, providing for a review within six months was repealed by the Act of February 13, 1925, c 229 § 8 (c), 28 U.S.C.A. § 230, providing for review within three months;[10] the latter statute was not repealed by the Act of January 31, 1928, or the amendment of April 26 of the same year, 28 U.S.C.A. §§ 861a, 861b, which deals solely with the procedure and method of taking an appeal, and makes no provision as to the time for taking an appeal.[11] Congress has power to adopt a law reducing the time for taking appeals[12] and to have it apply to pending cases;[13] and the Act of February 13, 1925, was held to apply to pending cases in which the judgment was entered after the effective date of the act.[14] The requirement as to the time of appeal is mandatory and jurisdictional,[15] and if it is not complied with the appeal will be disallowed or dismissed.[16] A timely appeal from a particular decree or judgment is not dis-

Interchange of designation of plaintiff and defendant

Fact that designations of plaintiff and of defendant in the judgment appealed from are interchanged in notice of appeal does not require dismissal of appeal, where notice contains sufficient information to acquaint appellee as to judgment appealed from and appellee is not prejudiced or misled.—Martin v. Clarke, supra.

Erroneous date of order

Where restraining order was dated Oct. 21, 1941, but was modified by order of October 24, appeal from order allegedly dated October 20 would not be dismissed because erroneous date of order was given in notice of appeal, but the court would treat the appeal as from the order as modified.—Shannon v. Retail Clerks, International Protective Ass'n, C.C.A.Ill., 128 F.2d 553.

Formal mistake in failure to reach default judgment

Under the provisions of 28 U.S.C.A. § 391, it has been held that the failure of appeal from an order and judgment denying motion to vacate or modify default judgment, to reach the default judgment because of the words used, was a formal mistake, which did not affect substantial rights, and could be disregarded, and the default judgment would be considered by the circuit court of appeals.—U. missible because no appeal was taken from a prior decree or judgment and the time for taking such appeal has expired.[17] A notice of appeal may be filed on the last day after the closing hours of the clerk's office by seeking out the clerk or deputy clerk and delivering the notice of appeal to him.[18]

Violation of rule of district court of Hawaii

Appeal from federal district court in Hawaii was dismissed in absence of showing that appeal was brought within time fixed by rule of such court.—Dang Nam v. Bryan, C.C.A.Hawaii, 78 F.2d 720, dismissing appeal 74 F.2d 379.

Absence of requirement under early statute

Under Jud.Code § 244, Act March 3, 1911, c 231, 36 U.S.St. at L. p 1157, and Act Jan. 28, 1915, c 22, 38 U.S.St. at L. p 803, attaching Puerto Rico to the first circuit, which made no provision in terms fixing the time for taking appeals or suing out writs of error for cases from the Puerto Rico supreme court which may be reviewed by the circuit court of appeals, the time for perfecting an appeal was left to be determined by the rule of the circuit court of appeals, and so a motion to dismiss an appeal for two years' delay, was refused where no rule requiring an earlier perfection was in force.—Graham v. O'Ferral, Puerto Rico, 236 F. 717, 150 C.C.A. 49.

Taxation of costs as affecting time for appeal

Judgment for defendants in actions to recover sums forfeited and double damages for presenting false claims against government was held not reviewable on appeal, filed over three months after entry of judgment, although costs were not taxed until two months after such entry.—U. S. v. Nordbye, C.C.A., 75 F.2d 744, certiorari denied Love v. Nordbye, 56 S.Ct. 103, 296 U.S. 572, 80 L.Ed. 404.

Surplusage

Where an appeal was prayed from an "order, judgment, and decree," and the time had expired in which the order might be appealed from but not so as to the decree the appeal was treated as from the decree and held brought in proper time, where the motion as to which the order was entered was not essential to the right of appeal from the decree, and so much of the petition as prayed an appeal from the judgment and order would be treated as surplusage.—Painter v. Injunction and accounting

(1) A decree granting an injunction and appointing a special master to take and state the account of profits in a suit for infringement of the common-law right of property in a song was an "interlocutory decree" within the statute limiting time for appeal.—George v. Victor Talking Mach. Co., N.J., 55 S.Ct. 229, 293 U.

vent the review of an interlocutory order on an appeal from the final judgment or decree.[23] The statute does not apply to interlocutory orders other than those concerning injunctions or receivers,[24] nor does it apply to orders or decrees concerning injunctions which are not interlocutory in nature.[25]

(2) What Constitutes Taking and Perfecting Proceedings

The only jurisdictional act required for perfecting an appeal within the period of limitation is the filing of the notice of appeal.

Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the only jurisdictional act required for perfecting an appeal within the period of limitation is the filing of the notice of appeal.[26] The filing of the appellee's waiver of notice, his acceptance of designation, and entry of appearance within the required time are substantial compliance with the rule,[27] and the fact that after an appeal is taken in this way appellant files a formal notice of appeal after the required time does not divest the circuit court of appeals of jurisdiction of the appeal.[28] The fact that within the period of limitation an order fixing the amount of the supersedeas bond is entered on motion of appellant, and appellant files a transcript of the stenographer's notes, the supersedeas bond, and the præcipe and designation of record, does not show a sufficient compliance with the rule.[29] Where a review is sought in the supreme court within the time required in order to obtain a review by the circuit court of appeals, and the case is transferred to the circuit court of appeals, although after the time for appeal to that court has expired, the circuit court of appeals has been held to have jurisdiction.[30] In cases in which an application for leave to appeal has been necessary, procedural conduct which does not constitute such an application has been held insufficient as respects whether the appeal is timely taken.[31]

S. 377, 79 L.Ed. 439, reversing, C.C.A., Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. George, 69 F.2d 871, certiorari granted George v. Victor Talking Mach. Co., 55 S.Ct. 82, 293 U.S. 544, 79 L.Ed. 649.

(2) Decree enjoining patent infringements and providing for accounting is interlocutory, and appeal cannot be taken more than thirty days after decree.—Larkin Packer Co. v. Hinderliter Tool Co., C.C.A.Okl., 60 F.2d 491—Western Silo Co. v. Morris, C.C.A.Iowa, 33 F.2d 285—Morey Linotyping Co. of Chicago, Ill. v. Chicago Lino-Tabler Co. of Chicago, Ill., 258 F. 888, 169 C.C.A. 608.

Appeal held timely

An appeal from an interlocutory decree entered Oct. 7, 1938, in proceeding for composition of indebtedness of an irrigation district, if an appeal from an interlocutory decree in equity, was valid and timely, where notice of appeal was filed on Nov. 7, 1938, within thirty days from entry of decree.—Jordan v. Palo Verde Irr. Dist., C.C.A.Cal., 105 F.2d 601.

Order restraining collection of state court judgment

An injunctional order of district court restraining proceedings to collect a judgment in state court was "final" and not "interlocutory," and hence appeal from order was not dismissible because notice of appeal was not filed within thirty days from entry of the order, where, if obeyed or enforced, order would have nullified state court judgment and, if set aside, state court judgment would be collected, where there was nothing in order indicating that it was temporary, where nothing in respect to jurisdiction of district court or its power to restrain remained to be litigated and where the facts with respect to state court proceeding were not in dispute.—Ammond v. Pennsylvania R. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 125 F.2d 747, certiorari denied 62 S.Ct. 1283, 316 U.S. 691, 86 L.Ed. 1762.

Dismissal by supreme court after pendency of proceedings

In computing the time within which an appeal must be taken to a circuit court of appeals, the time of the pendency of proceedings for review in the supreme court, which were dismissed for want of jurisdiction, cannot be excluded.—Darnell v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Tenn., 206 F. 445, 124 C.C.A. 327.

Notice of intention to appeal

(1) Time for appeal is not tolled by filing notice of intention to appeal

(3) Commencement of Period of Limitation
(a) In general
(b) Effect of motions after entry of judgment or decree

(a) In General

The date of the actual entry of the decree or judgment determines the commencement of the period for appeal. If a second judgment supersedes a prior one, the time is to be computed from that last entered. A judgment not affecting one party to the litigation does not commence the running of the period of limitation as against that party.

The date of the actual entry of the decree or judgment determines the commencement of the period for appeal,[32] and the period is not affected by nunc pro tunc orders in the judgment.[33] Where a second judgment or decree in a cause is entered and it supersedes the first, the time for appeal is to be computed from that last entered,[34] and where the court suspends the operation of a decree for the purpose of amendment, the decree does not become final for the purpose of appeal until the amendment is made or the original decree is confirmed.[35] The fact that the costs have not been taxed does not suspend the period of limitation after entry of a judgment which determines the action on the merits.[36]

What constitutes entry. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 58, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the notation of a judgment in the civil docket, as provided by rule 79 (a), constitutes the entry of the judgment; and the judgment is not effective before such entry.[37]

Final judgment or decree as to one party or branch of litigation. A judgment not affecting one party to the litigation does not commence the running of the period of limitation as against that party.[38] Where there is a final judgment or decree as to a distinct branch of litigation, so that nothing remains to be adjudged as to that branch, although no final disposition as to other branches of the litigation is involved, appeal from such judgment or decree must be taken within the prescribed time or the right of appeal will be lost.[39]

(b) Effect of Motions after Entry of Judgment or Decree

A motion or petition for rehearing, reargument, new trial, or to vacate or modify the judgment or decree, which is properly presented in due season and is entertained by the court, suspends the commence-within three months after judgment.—Northwestern Public Service Co. v. Pfeifer, C.C.A.S.D., 36 F.2d 5.

(2) A "petition for severance," giving notice of intention to apply for leave to appeal, was not equivalent to an "application for leave to appeal," as respects whether application was timely made.—Benitez v. Bank of Nova Scotia, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 109 F.2d 743, certiorari granted 61 S.Ct. 10, 311 U.S. 623, 85 L.Ed. 395.

Filing in office of clerk

The filing of application for appeal in office of clerk of court where judgment or decree is entered will not be regarded as application duly made under limitation statute, unless sole judge of court or all of its judges are out of the jurisdiction or incapacitated, so that application cannot be made to judge of court within three months' period.—Benitez v. Bank of Nova Scotia supra.

Intention

Where district court made order granting defendant's motion for summary judgment and subsequently entered another order granting same relief and referring to first order as a memorandum decision, the first order was not intended as a rendition of judgment in favor of defendant, and the second order was the "final decision" of the court and notice of appeal filed three months after second order was timely.—Monarch Brewing Co. v. (1) Entry is deemed to take place, for the purpose of fixing the time for appeal, when the order or judgment is filed by the clerk.—In re Hurley Mercantile Co., C.C.A.Tex., 56 F.2d 1023, certiorari denied Atascosa County State Bank of Jourdanton, Texas v. Coppard, 52 S.Ct. 580, 286 U.S. 555, 76 L.Ed. 1290.

(2) Entering judgment in "law journal" provided for by rules of United States court for southern district of Iowa is "entry" within terms of statute regulating length of time within which appeals may be applied for.—U. S. v. Rayburn, C.C.A.Iowa, 91 F.2d 162.

ment of the period limited for taking the appeal until the motion or petition is disposed of.

If a motion or petition for rehearing, reargument, new trial, or to vacate or modify the judgment or decree is made or presented properly and in due season, and is entertained by the court, the time limited for taking or perfecting an appeal does not begin to run until such motion or petition is disposed of.[40] The mere filing of such a motion or petition does not automatically enlarge the statutory period for appeal,[41] but to affect the time within which appeal will lie the motion or petition must be properly and timely made,[42] and it must be entertained by the court.[43] A motion merely to correct clerical or

Newly discovered evidence as ground for motion

The purpose of requirement of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 59(b) 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, that after expiration of ten days from entry of judgment motion for new trial, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, can only be made with leave of court obtained on notice and hearing and on a showing of due diligence, is to prevent dilatory use of the motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence to increase the time for filing an appeal.—Abruzzino v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., D.C.W.Va., 35 F.Supp. 925.

Motion made on last day of period

Postponement of motion for new trial and of appeal until the ends of the periods allowed therefor did not require dismissal of appeal for want of diligence, where defendant's first motion for new trial was made promptly but not acted on and the decree was entered without notice to defendants.—Moss v. Equitable Life Ins. Co. of Iowa, C.C.A.Mo., 71 F.2d 795.

Necessity to appeal although application for rehearing is pending

A defeated party, who applies for a rehearing and does not appeal with-other similar unsubstantial errors in the judgment or decree does not extend the time for appeal.[44] Unsubstantial defects in a motion or petition will not prevent extension of time for appeal,[45] and if a motion or petition is in substance one for a new trial or rehearing, although not technically so, it may extend the time for appeal.[46] The serving of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial, within ten days after the entry of the judgment, is sufficient to extend the time for appeal although the motion is not filed within the ten days.[47] The pendency of a petition under the bankruptcy act does not toll the limitations as to an appeal from a decree entered prior to the filing of the petition.[48] A motion to amend the judgment does not extend the time for appeal where it is made after the other party has filed notice of appeal.[49] An appeal from a decree as originally rendered cannot operate as an appeal from the decree as subsequently amended, even though the appeal is filed after the expiration of the time for an appeal from the original decree.[50]

(4) Extension of Time by Court or by Parties.

The time prescribed for taking the appeal cannot be extended either by the court or by the parties.

The time prescribed for taking an appeal cannot be extended, nor relief granted in case of a failure to proceed in time, either by the circuit court of appeals[51] or by the lower court,[52] nor can the time prescribed be extended by agreement or stipulation of the parties or by express or implied waiver.[53] It has been held that if delay in perfecting an ap-in time limited, takes risk that he may lose right of appeal, as application for rehearing, if court refuses to entertain it, does not extend the time for appeal.—Ortiz v. Public Service Commission of Puerto Rico, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 108 F.2d 815.

Practice of supreme court of Puerto Rico as indicating entertaining of application

A practice of the supreme court of Puerto Rico to stay mandate, if petition for rehearing is filed within ten days, until petition is disposed of, does not establish that the petition for rehearing will necessarily be entertained, so as to extend time for appeal.—Ortiz v. Public Service Commission of Puerto Rico, supra.

Recital as determinative of entertaining of application

A recital by the supreme court of Puerto Rico in order denying petition for appeal that motion for rehearing previously filed had been denied without hearing or opinion and was not "entertained" by the court was determinative that motion for rehearing had not been "entertained" and had not served to extend time for appeal.—Ortiz v. Public Service Commission of Puerto Rico, supra.

peal is caused by the act or omission of the court or some official thereof, the appeal may be perfected after the expiration of the prescribed time,[54] unless the act or concurrence of the court or officer is not necessary,[55] and so in cases where an allowance of an appeal has been required, an appeal prayed for or otherwise taken in due time is not dismissible because of a delay in its allowance.[56]

(5) Premature Appeal

As a general rule, except in the case of mere irregularity not resulting in prejudice, an appeal which is taken before the right to take an appeal has accrued is premature and will be dismissed.

As a general rule, except in the case of mere irregularity not resulting in prejudice, an appeal which is taken before the right to take an appeal has accrued is premature and will be dismissed,[57] but where an appeal is taken as from a final judgment before the judgment has been entered by the clerk, the court may disregard the technicality and consider the appeal.[58] An appeal from a judgment is not prematurely taken although the other party is entitled at the time to move to amend the judgment.[59]

c. Application for, and Allowance of, Appeal

No application for, or an allowance of, an appeal is necessary under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, an appeal from a district court of the United States to the circuit court of appeals is taken by merely filing a notice of appeal with the district court, and no application for, or an allowance of, the appeal is necessary.[60] Under the former federal practice, in accordance with the applicable statutes and rules of court in the particular circuit, an application for, and an allowance of, an appeal or a writ of error was necessary.[61] A petition for an appeal from the

Uurging objection on second appeal

Party who does not object to the tardiness of an appeal from a judgment, but participates in the hearing on appeal and in a second trial of the case, cannot urge that objection on an appeal from the judgment on the second trial.—Jarowski v. Hamburg-American Packet Co., N.Y., 186 F. 332, 108 C.C.A. 410, denying motion 182 F. 320, 104 C.C.A. 548.

Reliance on statements of appellee's counsel

Appeal was dismissible where taken over four months after entry of judgment, despite claim that delay was caused by reliance on statements of appellees' counsel that the pendency of a bankruptcy proceeding involving appellees acted as a restraint on all pending actions.—Muckelroy v. Baldwin, C.C.A.Ark., 70 F.2d 728.

Failure to object to tardy motion for new trial

Failure of appellees to object to filing motion for new trial after expiration of time for appeal did not prevent dismissal of appeal.—Northwestern Public Service Co. v. Pfeifer, C.C.A.S.D., 36 F.2d 5.

supreme court of Hawaii in a case in equity is properly allowed by an associate justice of that court, and an allowance by the chief justice is not necessary.[62]

Vacating order allowing appeal. The district court of Puerto Rico has power to vacate an order allowing an appeal which was improvidently entered on an application made after the expiration of the period of appeal.[63]

d. Payment of Costs and Fees

The clerk of the district court is entitled to the prescribed fee for filing the notice of appeal unless appellant has been permitted to appeal in forma pauperis. A person prosecuting an appeal in forma pauperis is not entitled to the reporter's transcript without paying the cost thereof. The circuit court of appeals may waive its rule prescribing the time for filing fees for printing the transcript.

The clerk of the district court is justified in refusing to file notice of appeal until his fee has been paid or until an order permitting appellant to proceed in forma pauperis is made,[64] and, if payment of the fee is to be avoided, application to proceed in forma pauperis on appeal should be filed with the clerk, and the court's order on the application procured prior to the filing of the notice.[65] A fee for filing an application to proceed in forma pauperis is not required.[66] The established rule is that a person prosecuting an appeal in forma pauperis is not entitled to the reporter's transcript of the testimony without paying the cost thereof,[67] and this rule has not been changed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 80, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c.[68] The circuit court of appeals may waive its rule prescribing the time for filing fees for printing the transcript and may, in its discretion, refuse to dismiss the appeal for laches in depositing the fees.[69]

(a) In general
(b) Proceedings in forma pauperis

(a) In General

As a general rule the filing of an appeal bond is necessary to the perfecting of an appeal, but it is not a jurisdictional prerequisite.

As a general rule, under 28 U.S.C.A. § 869, the filing of an appeal bond is necessary to the perfecting of an appeal,[70] but it is not essential to the validity of the appeal in such a sense as to prevent the appellate court from acquiring jurisdiction under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 a, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, which provide that failure of appellant to take any of the further steps subsequent to the notice of appeal does not affect the validity of the appeal; nor was it a jurisdictional prerequisite prior to the adoption of the Rules.[71] Under 28 U.S.C.A. § 870, no appeal bond is required of a corporation all the stock of which is beneficially owned by the United States.[72]

aa. In General

The right to appeal in forma pauperis and thereby be excused from filing an appeal bond is entirely statutory and has not been affected by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. For the privilege to be available, the appeal must have substantial merit.

One permitted to proceed on appeal as a pauper is not obliged to file a bond.[73] The right to appeal in forma pauperis is purely a privilege given indigent persons to prosecute an appeal, otherwise and independently allowable, without payment of fees and costs incident to such prosecution.[74] The right is entirely statutory,[75] based on the federal statute 28 U.S.C.A. § 832,[76] and it is not affected by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.[77] For the privilege of an appeal in forma pauperis to be available the appeal must have substantial merit,[78] and whether there is some merit in an appeal presents a question to be decided by the judge to whom the application is made.[79] Where appellant takes a timely appeal and gives a bond which is approved by the court, the fact that he makes a motion to proceed in forma pauperis after the time allowed for appeal does not require dismissal of the appeal, but the belated effort to proceed in forma pauperis may be treated as surplusage.[80]

Appeals in forma pauperis in admiralty are considered in Admiralty § 199.

bb. Persons Entitled

To be entitled to appeal in forma pauperis, appellant must actually be unable to prepay the costs or to give security therefor, and he must be a citizen of the United States.

To be entitled to appeal in forma pauperis, appellant must be within the class of persons to whom the privilege is granted.[81] Appellant must actually be unable to prepay the costs or to give security therefor,[82] and he must be a citizen of the United States.[83] A corporation is not a citizen within the purview of the statute so as to be entitled to appeal in forma pauperis.[84]

An administrator or legal representative may prosecute an appeal in forma pauperis.[85]

cc. Procedure

An application for leave to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis should be made in the first instance to the district court and, if the application is denied for any reason other than a lack of good faith, application can then be made to the circuit court of appeals. The petition and the affidavits must comply with the requirements of the statute.

An application for leave to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis should be made in the first instance to the district court to enable that court with its immediate knowledge of the facts to determine whether the appeal has been taken in good faith,[86] and if the application is denied for any reason other than a lack of good faith application can then be made to the circuit court of appeals.[87] The circuit court of appeals also has the power to entertain the application prior to the filing of the notice of appeal in the district court where the district court fails to act on the application made therein within a reasonable time.[88] If the appeal has been perfected by filing notice and paying costs in the district court without applying for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, the circuit court may entertain the application in the first instance, but applicant should show that the district court has been given an opportunity to certify as to the petitioner's good faith in taking the appeal.[89]

Petition and affidavits. The petition and the affidavits accompanying the petition must comply with the requirements of the statute.[90] Thus they must contain a statement that the petitioner, because of his poverty, is unable to pay costs or give security,[91] and that he believes he is entitled to the redress he seeks,[92] and they must set forth the cause of action or the grounds on which the appeal is based.[93] They must also show the petitioner to be a citizen of the United States.[94] Ordinarily appellant will be granted an opportunity to correct a defective petition or affidavit,[95] but not where the record shows that the appeal is plainly without merit.[96] One applying to the circuit court of appeals for leave to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis after his application to the district court has been denied should allege that he has applied to the district court, that the application was there denied, and that the district court has not certified that the appeal is not taken in good faith.[97]

Every person who joins in an appeal in forma pauperis must file his oath as required by the statute.[98] Where an appeal is prosecuted for the joint benefit of several persons, all persons directly inter-

A showing of hardship alone is not sufficient.—Volk v. B. F. Sturtevant Co., Mass., 99 F. 532, 39 C.C.A. 646, affirmed 104 F. 276, 43 C.C.A. 527.

Litigation for interest of other persons

The statute may not be used by persons not poor persons, in whose interest, although not parties to the suit, the litigation is being conducted, to prosecute an appeal without giving bond for costs.—Boggan v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn., C.C.A.Ala., 79 F.2d 721.

Declaration of intention to become citizen

The mere fact that appellant has filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen after long residence in Alaska, does not entitle him to prosecute appeal in forma pauperis.—Johnson v. Nickoloff, C.C.A., 52 F. 2d 1074.

Convict in state penitentiary

A convict in a state penitentiary who under state laws is not a fully qualified citizen is not entitled to appeal in forma pauperis in a civil action.—Austin v. U. S., D.C.Ill., 40 F. Supp. 777.

Necessity for timely application

One desiring to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis should promptly cause to be delivered to judge of court who heard matter or in his absence some other judge of the court, if there be such judge, the application for leave so to proceed, with accompanying affidavit, in order that any delay of the court in granting application may not prevent timely filing of notice of appeal.—Smith v. ested in the recovery must present affidavits stating facts which show their financial inability.[99] In an appeal by an administrator the affidavits must show that neither the estate nor the beneficiaries are able to prepay or secure the costs,[1] and an affidavit by the administrator alone that neither he personally nor as such administrator, nor any of the beneficiaries, are financially able to pay the cost of appeal or to give security therefor is insufficient.[2] That plaintiff's attorney has a contingent interest in the proceeds of the litigation by reason of his having contracted for a contingent fee has been held not to require him to file a pauper's oath in order that plaintiff may prosecute the appeal in forma pauperis,[3] but in other circuits it has been held that the attorney must do so.[4]

dd. Allowance

The trial court has a discretion in granting or refusing the allowance of an appeal in forma pauperis. Where it certifies that the grounds for appeal are frivolous or without merit or that in its opinion the appeal is not taken in good faith, the circuit court of appeals has no authority to allow the appeal in forma pauperis.

The trial court has a discretion in granting or refusing the allowance of an appeal in forma pauperis.[5] Where the trial court certifies that the grounds for appeal are frivolous or without merit or that in its opinion the appeal is not taken in good faith, the circuit court of appeals has no authority to allow the appeal in forma pauperis,[6] and it will deny the application therefor.[7] The allowance by the trial court of an appeal in forma pauperis is not the equivalent of a certificate of probable cause and it is entirely separate from the allowance of an appeal.[8]

(2) Requisites and Sufficiency

The bond on appeal must identify the judgment, order, or decree as the one from which the appeal is taken; it need not be signed by all appellants if good and sufficient security is given. The surety must be sufficient and the bond must be conditioned to secure the payment of costs if the appeal is dismissed or the judgment affirmed. The bond is to be filed at the time of filing the notice of appeal, but failure to do so at that time is not a jurisdictional defect. It must be in the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars unless the court fixes a different amount, and if in that sum no approval thereof by the court is necessary.

The bond on appeal must so correctly describe or refer to the judgment, order, or decree as to identify it as the one from which the appeal is taken; otherwise it will be insufficient.[9] The bond need not be signed by all of several appellants if good and sufficient security is taken and no disadvantage to the appellee is shown.[10] That an appeal bond signed by an administrator is not accompanied by any authority from the probate court does not require a dismissal of the appeal.[11]

Sufficiency of sureties and conditions. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 (c), 28 U.S. C.A. following § 723c, require that the bond on appeal shall have sufficient surety and shall be conditioned to secure the payment of costs if the appeal is dismissed or the judgment affirmed, or of such costs as the appellate court may award if the judgment is modified. Under former practice it was also required that the surety be responsible and reliable[12] and that the bond be conditioned to answer all costs if appellant fails to make his plea good.[13]

Time of filing. Under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the bond is to be filed with the notice of appeal,

However, it has also been held that where a reasonable doubt is raised as to the genuineness of the signature of two appellants on an appeal bond the justice to whom the bond is presented for approval has the right to refuse to approve it.—U. S. v. Cox, 14 App.D.C. 368.

but failure to do so at that time is not a jurisdictional defect. Under former practice it was held that the court could permit a bond to be filed subsequent to the taking of the appeal[14] at any time before it passed on the motion to dismiss,[15] although where the appeal was taken in open court and the bond was not presented within the prescribed time it was held that the appeal must be dismissed.[16]

Amount. In accordance with Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 (c), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the bond when required by law shall be in the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars unless the court fixes a different amount. Under former practice in some circuits the fixing of the amount of the appeal bond in each case was a matter within the discretion of the court,[17] although the court could not require a bond for an unreasonable amount.[18]

Approval. Under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 (c), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, if a bond on appeal in the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars is given, no approval thereof by the court is necessary.[19]

(3) Effect of Defects; Amendments and New or Additional Bonds

Defects in the form or substance of an appeal bond do not deprive the appellate court of jurisdiction. The district court has jurisdiction to entertain motions concerning the insufficiency of the bond before the action is docketed with the appellate court, and after the action is so docketed the appellate court has such jurisdiction.

Defects in the form or substance of an appeal bond do not deprive the appellate court of jurisdiction under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 (a), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, which provide that failure of the appellant to take any of the further steps subsequent to the notice of appeal does not affect the validity of the appeal. Under the former practice it was also held that such defects were not jurisdictional,[20] and the court could permit them to be cured by amendment or by filing a new bond.[21] Under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73 (e), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the district court has jurisdiction to entertain motions concerning the insufficiency of the bond before the action is docketed with the appellate court, and after the action is so docketed the appellate court has such jurisdiction. Prior to the adoption of the rules it was also held that after transfer of the cause jurisdiction to increase the amount of the bond[22] or to permit an amendment or the filing of a new bond[23] was vested in the circuit court of appeals and not in the district court.

73 (b), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, notification of the filing of the notice of appeal is to be given by the clerk by mailing copies thereof to all the parties to the judgment other than the party or parties taking the appeal, but his failure so to do does not affect the validity of the appeal.

Decisions prior to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. In decisions prior to the adoption of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure it was held that notice of appeal, citation, summons, or other process was required to be served in accordance with the applicable rules of court,[24] except where the appeal was allowed or taken in open court,[25] but service of the process or notice was not essential to the jurisdiction of the appellate court, and omission thereof or defects therein would not cause dismissal if the appellee had actual notice and was not prejudiced thereby.[26] The fact that citation was not issued or served within the time prescribed by rule of court or within the time limited for taking the appeal did not defeat the jurisdiction of the appellate court or necessarily constitute ground for dismissal,[27] and the court might allow a citation to issue or service to be made after such time on a showing of a sufficient excuse for the delay,[28] unless the appeal as taken was of no effect.[29] All parties to the judgment, order, or decree below, whose interests might be adversely affected by the result of the appeal or proceeding in error, or persons legally representing them, should have been served.[30] On the other hand, citation or notice need have been served only on those parties whose interests were affected by the judgment, order, or decree appealed from,[31] and if the parties interested were very numerous, notice to a few of each class, who appeared in good faith in defense of the interests of that class, would be deemed sufficient.[32] The citation or other process should, as a general rule, have been served on appellee or on his attorney,[33] and service made on the attorney was sufficient,[34] but it might also have been served on a trustee appointed by the court for nonresidents who had no attorney of record if such method of service was not shown to be ineffectual or prejudicial.[35] A party entitled to join in an appeal might do so by entering a voluntary appearance in the federal court after the appeal had been perfected therein without giving notice to the opposite party or to the lower court.[36]

(2) Writ of Error

The writ of error has been abolished in the federal courts.

The Act of January 31, 1928 c 14 § 1, 28 U.S.C.A. § 861a abolished the writ of error in the federal courts.[37]

g. Entry or Docketing

Failure of appellant to docket the appeal within forty days from the date of the notice of appeal is subject to such action as the circuit court of appeals may, in its discretion, take. The district court has authority to grant extensions of time but not after the expiration of the period of time as originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order.

Failure of appellant to docket the appeal within forty days from the date of notice of appeal as provided by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73(g), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, is subject to such action as the circuit court of appeals may, in its discretion, take.[38] Where the failure to docket the appeal within the prescribed time is due to inexcusable neglect, the appeal is properly dismissed,[39] and, if no satisfactory reason for failure to docket the appeal within the prescribed time is given, the circuit court of appeals may refuse to permit the appeal to be docketed.[40] The district court may grant extensions of time for docketing an appeal before the period prescribed for docketing has expired, but it has no authority to grant extensions after the expiration of the period as originally prescribed or as extended by a previous order,[41] and an application for extension after the expiration of the time is ineffectual.[42] It was also held under rules of court in force prior to the adoption of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure that a failure of appellant to enter or docket the appeal within the time prescribed by the court rules justified dismissal of the appeal,[43] but the court in its discretion could refuse to dismiss the appeal if the circum-

h. Appearance in Appellate Court

Where appellant neither files a brief nor appears for oral argument, the appeal will usually be dismissed for want of prosecution.

Where appellant neither files a brief nor appears for oral argument, the appeal will usually be dismissed for want of prosecution.[45] A general appearance by appellee cannot give the appellate court jurisdiction of the subject matter of the appeal,[46] but on the other hand, where the appellate court has jurisdiction of the subject matter of the appeal, a general appearance by appellee without objection will give jurisdiction of his person which it would not have but for such appearance, and will also operate as a waiver of all nonjurisdictional omissions and defects in taking or perfecting the appeal.[47]

§ 294. Supersedeas or Stay of Proceedings

a. Definition
b. Operation of appeal as supersedeas or stay
c. Right to, and allowance of, supersedeas or stay
d. Bond
e. Modification or vacation of supersedeas or stay
f. Operation and effect of supersedeas or stay
g. Proceedings in violation of supersedeas or stay
h. Effect of failure to obtain supersedeas or stay
i. Effect of transfer of cause or proceedings therefor

a. Definition

A supersedeas is a suspension of the power of the court below to issue an execution on the judgment or decree appealed from. A supersedeas bond is a bond to answer for the damages which the appellee may sustain by reason of the appeal if it is unsuccessful.

As defined by federal courts, a supersedeas is a suspension of the power of the court below to issue an execution on the judgment or decree appealed from, or, if an execution has been issued, it prohibits further proceedings under it.[48] A supersedeas bond is a bond to answer for damages, that is, to pay the damages which appellee may sustain by reason of the appeal if it is unsuccessful.[49]

b. Operation of Appeal as Supersedeas or Stay

An appeal from a final judgment or decree does not per se operate as a supersedeas or stay, and the pendency of an appeal in the absence of a supersedeas or stay does not suspend the force and effect of the judgment or decree appealed from.

An appeal from a final judgment or decree does not per se operate as a supersedeas or stay.[50] If no supersedeas or stay is granted by the court or obtained by giving a statutory bond or undertaking, a judgment or decree which is final and requires no further action in the court below may be enforced by execution or otherwise, notwithstanding the pendency of the appeal.[51] Under express provisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 62(a), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction or in a receivership action is not stayed during the pendency of an appeal unless otherwise ordered by the court. Prior to the adoption of the rules it was also held that, in the absence of an order of court, an appeal from an order granting or dissolving an injunction does not stay proceedings in the main case,[52] and it does not disturb the operative force

c. Right to, and Allowance of, Supersedeas or Stay

(1) In general
(2) Appeal from order granting or refusing injunction

(1) In General

Either the district court or the circuit court of appeals may grant a supersedeas or stay during the period of time in which it has jurisdiction of the case. To be entitled to a supersedeas or stay appellant must comply with the conditions precedent thereto.

Either the district court[54] or the circuit court of appeals,[55] during the period of time in which it has jurisdiction of the case, may grant a supersedeas or stay pending the outcome of the appeal. It is generally held that a supersedeas or stay is a matter within the discretion of the court,[56] and the court or judge may, in allowing the same, impose such terms or conditions, as to security or otherwise, as in its judgment are necessary for the protection of the parties.[57] However, on the other hand it has been held that after compliance with the conditions imposed by congress appellant is entitled to the supersedeas and the court has no lawful power to refuse it.[58] To be entitled to a supersedeas or stay appellant must comply with the conditions precedent thereto.[59]

As a rule a supersedeas or stay will be granted by the court whenever it appears that without it the objects of the appeal may be defeated,[60] or that it is reasonably necessary to protect appellant from irreparable or serious injury in case of a reversal, and it does not appear that appellee will sustain irreparable or disproportionate injury in case of affirmance.[61] On the other hand, as a rule, a supersedeas or stay will not be granted if no necessity therefor appears.[62]

(2) Appeal from Order Granting or Refusing Injunction

Either the district court or the circuit court of appeals, in the exercise of a sound discretion, may grant a stay in the operation of an order or decree granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction pending the appeal therefrom.

Where an order or decree granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction has been rendered in the district court, either the district court[63] or the circuit court of appeals,[64] during the period of time during which it has jurisdiction of the cause, may grant a stay of the operation of the decree pending the outcome of the appeal. This power is held to be inherent in a court of equity.[65] Appellant is not en-

Power as affected by Alaska statute
The power of the circuit court of appeals to stay or supersede proceedings on appeal from an order appointing a receiver was not interfered with by the provision of Alaska Code § 507, to the effect that on appeal to the circuit court of appeals from interlocutory orders granting or refusing an injunction, or an order to dissolve an injunction, "the proceedings in other respects in the District Court . . . shall not be stayed during the pendency of such appeal, unless otherwise ordered by the district court."—In re McKenzie, 21 S.Ct. 468, 180 U.S. 536, 548, 45 L. Ed. 657.

Issuance directed by judge rather than by court
A writ of supersedeas issued by the clerk of a circuit court of appeals is not void because its issue was directed by a judge of the court and not by the court as a court.—In re McKenzie, supra—Tornanses v. Melsing, Alaska, 106 F. 775, 45 C.C.A. 615.

titled to the stay as a matter of right but the matter rests in the sound discretion of the court.[66] In general a circuit court of appeals will not suspend an injunction after the trial judge has refused to grant a supersedeas.[67] After dismissal of a bill for an injunction the district court has no power to issue an injunction pending appeal from the order of dismissal.[68]

Grounds for allowance or refusal. It is improper for the court to grant an injunction pending appeal from a decree denying the injunction in the absence of peculiar circumstances which so warrant,[69] and as a rule it will not grant the restraining order where there is no reasonable ground to apprehend irreparable injury to appellant.[70] A supersedeas or injunction pending appeal from an order vacating or denying an injunction has been granted where otherwise the appeal would be ineffective,[71] or where appellant would suffer serious injury.[72] The court will refuse to stay an injunction granted by the decree where by reason of the stay the other party will sustain an irreparable loss.[73]

d. Bond

As a general rule a supersedeas bond is required to stay the execution of a judgment. The bond must be approved by the court and it must be in substantial compliance with the governing statute. An application for additional security may be made to the circuit court of appeals.

As a general rule a supersedeas bond is required to stay the execution of a judgment, and an appeal or cost bond is insufficient,[74] unless it is conditioned to pay all damages and costs, in which case it operates as a supersedeas.[75] It is improper for the court to release the levy of execution if no supersedeas bond is filed.[76] No supersedeas bond is required to stay execution where the appeal is taken under the direction of any department of the United States government.[77] The bond must be approved by the court[78] and it must comply with the governing statute,[79] but a substantial compliance therewith is sufficient.[80] The fact that all appellants do not join in executing the supersedeas bond,[81] or that the bond is executed, although not delivered, before the judgment is finally rendered,[82] does not render it insufficient. The conditions and amount of the bond are provided for under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73(d), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c.[83]

Amendments and new or additional security. An application for additional security may be made to the circuit court of appeals under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75(j), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c.[84] After the jurisdiction of the appellate court over an appeal has attached, power to permit or require new or additional security to be filed exists only in the appellate court.[85] Where appellee does not ask for a bond for damages at the time a stay of injunction pending appeal is granted by the lower court, a bond will not be ordered on his motion in the circuit court of appeals where there has been no substantial change in circumstances.[86]

e. Modification or Vacation of Supersedeas or Stay

An order granting a supersedeas or stay may be modified or vacated and set aside by the court which has jurisdiction of the cause

An order granting a supersedeas or stay of proceedings may, on a proper showing, be modified or vacated and set aside by the court which has jurisdiction of the cause.[87] If the jurisdiction of the appellate court over the appeal has attached, an application for the discharge or vacation of a supersedeas should be addressed to it.[88]

f. Operation and Effect of Supersedeas or Stay

A supersedeas or stay suspends further proceedings on the judgment, order, or decree appealed from and preserves the status quo pending the appeal, but it does not annul the judgment or decree or change its final quality.

The effect of a supersedeas or stay is to suspend further proceedings on the judgment, order, or decree appealed from, or as to any matter embraced therein, and to preserve the status quo pending the determination of the appeal,[89] and it renders further proceedings in violation thereof void,[90] but it does not annul the judgment or decree or change its final quality.[91] The supersedeas or stay is confined to proceedings in the suit in which the judgment, order, or decree is rendered or made, and to such as are based on, or touch the enforcement or carrying into effect of, that judgment, order, or decree appealed from.[92] A supersedeas or stay obtained on appeal to the circuit court of appeals has been held to be operative pending a further appeal to, or other proceeding for review in, the supreme court.[93]

g. Proceedings in Violation of Supersedeas or Stay

Any action or proceeding in disregard of a supersedeas or stay is a contempt of the authority and jurisdiction of the court.

Any action or proceeding in disregard and defiance of the force and effect of a supersedeas or stay is also a contempt of the authority and jurisdiction of the court,[94] and it is generally no answer to a proceeding, as for a contempt for the breach of a supersedeas order, that the breach was committed under the advice of counsel.[95]

h. Effect of Failure to Obtain Supersedeas or Stay

A failure to obtain a supersedeas or stay does not affect the right of appellant to a review of the judgment.

A failure to supersede a judgment, or to stay process on it, does not affect the right of appellant to a review of the proceedings which resulted in such judgment.[96]

i. Effect of Transfer of Cause or Proceedings Therefor

After the appeal has been taken jurisdiction of the case is vested in the circuit court of appeals, and the authority of the district court with reference thereto is suspended except as to perfecting the record or other such things as may be necessary for the presentation of the case in the appellate court, or to protect the res pending review.

After the appeal has been taken, jurisdiction of the case is vested in the circuit court of appeals,[97] and thereafter it has power to control the further steps in perfecting and hearing the appeal.[98] The authority of the district court with reference thereto is suspended so that it cannot proceed with the case until the appellate proceeding is heard and determined and the remittitur or mandate is regularly returned and entered on the records,[99] except as to perfecting the record or other such things as may be necessary for the presentation of the case in the appellate court,[1] or to protect the res pending the stay pending application for certiorari from the supreme court to the circuit court of appeals, and where district court granted a stay for a period of three months or until final determination of any appeals taken, the stay would be operative pending receipt by district court of mandate of circuit court of appeals, which mandate would be stayed in accordance with court rules and on such terms as might be just to permit application for certiorari.—Powell v. Maryland Trust Co., C.C.A.Va., 125 F.2d 260, certiorari denied 62 S.Ct. 1041, 316 U.S. 671, 86 L.Ed. 1746, and 62 S.Ct. 1046, 316 U.S. 671, 86 L.Ed. 1746.

Jurisdiction of ancillary questions

A circuit court of appeals, before which a final decree was pending for determination, has exclusive jurisdiction, not only of the questions presented on the record transmitted by the trial court, but also of all ancillary questions, presented by independent evidence and hearing on the correctness and justice of the mandate to be entered.—Toledo Scale Co. v. Computing Scale Co., C.C.A.Ill., 281 F. 488, certiorari granted 42 S. Ct. 585, 259 U.S. 579, 66 L.Ed. 1072, 1073, and Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Intervention of new parties

After an appeal has been taken, the district court has no jurisdiction to permit the intervention of new parties, even though the case is an interpleader suit.—Roberts v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Ill., 94 F.2d 277, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 1039, 304 U.S. 570, 82 L.Ed. 1535.

Authority to dismiss appeal

The district court has no authority to dismiss an appeal which has been taken from its judgment.—Miller v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 114 F.2d 267, adopted 117 F.2d 256, reversing, D. C., 24 F.Supp. 958.

Applicability of local court rule after appeal

A local district court rule of federal district court for the southern district of New York, providing that an action shall abate where a defendant has neither been served nor appeared generally within three months after issuance of summons, even if valid, was not applicable to proceedings suspended by appeal.—Hackner v. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 117 F.2d 95, certiorari denied 61 S.Ct. 835, 313 U.S. 559, 85 L.Ed. 1520.

Amending notice of appeal

An order amending the notice of appeal in libel proceedings to include review.[2] The pendency of an appellate proceeding does not deprive the trial court of power to hear and determine matters which are independent of, or collateral to, the subject matter before the appellate court,[3] and an appellate proceeding for the review of an incidental or interlocutory matter does not transfer jurisdiction as to the entire cause, but the trial court or parties may still proceed in matters not involved in the appeal which are entirely collateral to the part of the case taken up.[4] Ineffectual attempts to appeal do not confer jurisdiction on the appellate court or deprive the lower court of further jurisdiction.[5] Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 73(a), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the filing of the notice of appeal is sufficient to perfect the appeal so as to transfer jurisdiction to the circuit court of appeals.[6]

The effect of the pendency of the appeal as to the force and effect of the judgment or decree appealed from is considered infra § 294 b.

New trial or rehearing. After the cause has been removed by appeal the trial court has no jurisdiction to entertain and no power to grant a motion for new trial or rehearing.[7]

Opening or vacating judgment or order. After an appeal has been taken, the district court cannot vacate or open its judgment or order.[8] If the review is pending and appellant wishes to reopen the decree, the proper procedure is for appellant to apply to the lower court to reopen the decree and for that court to request the appellate court to remit the record.[9]

Modification or amendment of judgment or proceedings. The district court cannot modify or amend its judgment, order, or decree, or change the record on which the order or decree is based, after an appellate proceeding for the review thereof has been perfected,[10] except to correct mistakes due to

Judgment contrary to controlling state court's decision

After taking of appeal from federal district court's judgment, such court has no jurisdiction to vacate its judgment rendered contrary to a controlling state court's decision, not previously called to federal court's attention, although it would have rendered a contrary judgment if the state court's decision had been brought to its attention, and although state supreme court, in interpreting rule as to time for perfecting appeal thereto, held that filing of claim for appeal does not oust lower court of jurisdiction to grant rehearing within longer time allowed therefor by another rule.—Schram v. a. Matters to Be Shown by Record

The record, on appeal to the circuit court of appeals, must show all matters necessary to the jurisdiction of the appellate and of the lower court. It must also show that the action was properly constituted and prosecuted in the court below, that orders or papers, a part of the record, were properly filed there, and that the grounds for review were properly presented and reserved in such court.

The record, on appeal to the circuit court of appeals, must show affirmatively the proper taking of all the steps and the existence of all the facts necessary to confer jurisdiction on the appellate court.[12] Usually this means that the record must show that an appealable judgment, decree, or order, presenting a final adjudication, was rendered and entered in the lower court,[13] that the person seeking to maintain the appeal is interested in, or aggrieved by, the judgment or decree,[14] and that the appeal was taken within the time fixed by law.[15]

Jurisdiction of lower court. The record also must affirmatively show facts essential to the jurisdiction of the trial court,[16] such as the issuance and service of appropriate process,[17] or an appearance by defendant;[18] and, if such jurisdiction is not challenged by the pleading, but the question is raised for the first time in the appellate court, it is sufficient if the jurisdiction appears in any part of the record, including the proofs.[19]

Proceedings sustaining judgment, order, or decree. Although matters which have no bearing on the issues involved need not be included in the record,[20] it must show that the action was properly constituted and prosecuted in the court below.[21]

In case of a trial without a jury, the record on appeal must disclose the trial judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law,[22] and the grounds and

Pleadings

After the case is pending in the appellate tribunal, a pleading cannot be amended in matter of substance.—Western Wheel-Scraper Co. v. Drinnen, C.C.Ill., 79 F. 820—Marsteller v. McClean, D.C., 16 F.Cas.No. 9,140, 2 Cranch C.C. 8.

Procedure to obtain modification after appeal

Where plaintiff's motion to amend district court's conclusions of law and judgment in plaintiff's favor was filed after judgment defendants had taken their appeal, motion did not retain case in jurisdiction of district court. After judgment defendants had appealed, plaintiff had the right to take a cross appeal or file his motion, within time, in district court and within time limited by statute for appeal from judgment apply to circuit court of appeals to remand case for consideration of plaintiff's motion to modify.—Fiske v. reasons for his decision;[23] and a defect in the record in this respect is not cured by the fact that the record contains the opinion of the court.[24] Where the right to trial by jury must be expressly waived, the written stipulation of the parties waiving the jury must affirmatively appear on the record;[25] otherwise the judgment can be reviewed only for error appearing on the face of the pleadings or of the judgment itself.[26]

Filing papers or orders as part of record. The record must show that an order or paper set out in the record, which was required by law to be filed in the lower court, was properly made and filed.[27]

the findings and opinion of the trial court, containing the rulings on which the judgment was based,[51] should show whether the intermediate court affirmed the findings of the trial court or modified them and, if so, what the modifications consisted of,[52] and should also show the opinion of the intermediate court, showing wherein it agreed or disagreed with the rulings of the trial court.[53]

b. Scope and Contents of Record

Ordinarily the record proper on appeal consists of the process, return, pleadings, orders, verdict or decision, and judgment; and other matters or proceedings become a part of the record in the appellate court only when they are brought into the record in the manner prescribed by statute or rules of court.

The record proper consists of the process, with the return thereon, the pleadings, orders, and the verdict, if tried by a jury, or the decision, if tried by the court, and the judgment.[54] Other matters or proceedings become a part of the record on appeal only when they are brought therein by an order of court,[55] or where they are made a part of the record in accordance with Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c.[56] A mere recital of such matters in the record or transcript does not make them a part of the record.[57] Under the express provisions of rule 75 (e), matter not essential to a decision of the questions presented by the appeal should not be contained in the record,[58] and even before this rule went into effect it was regarded as improper to include such matter in the record,[59] such as colloquies between the court and counsel.[60]

Opinion of lower court. Under the provisions of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (g), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, a copy of the opinion of the lower court must be transmitted to the appellate court as a part of the record on appeal.[61]

Mitchell Coal & Coke Co., Pa., 150 F. 32, 81 C.C.A. 80, 10 L.R.A.,N.S., 99.

A verdict, general or special, is a part of the record proper.—Daube v. Philadelphia & R. Coal & Iron Co., Ill., 77 F. 713, 23 C.C.A. 420.

55. U.S.—Eldorado Coal & Mining Co. v. Mariotti, Ill., 215 F. 51, 131 C.C.A. 359.

56. Prior to this procedural rule, matters not a part of the record proper ordinarily could be made a part of the record in the appellate court only by bill of exceptions.—Eldorado Coal & Mining Co. v. Mariotti, supra.

Necessity of bill of exceptions generally see infra subdivision c of this section.

Matters not constituting part of the record proper, and not being a part of the record on appeal unless brought up by bill of exceptions, under former practice.

(1) Bill of particulars.—Central Commercial Co. v. Jones-Dusenbury Co., Ill., 251 F. 13, 163 C.C.A. 263.

(2) Entries in dockets, journals, or order books, or minutes or memoranda of what took place in court.—In re Syracuse Stutz Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 55 F.2d 914—Reilly v. Beekman, C.C. A.N.Y., 24 F.2d 791.

(3) Instrument sued on.—Griffin v. Allen, Mo., 207 F. 61, 124 C.C.A. 621.

(4) Instructions.—H. M. Byllesby & Co. v. Welch, C.C.A.Mo., 82 F.2d 539—Sternenberg v. Mailhos, Tex., 99 F. 43, 39 C.C.A. 408—Case v. Hall, 94 F. 300, 36 C.C.A. 259, affirming 2 Ind.T. 8, 46 S.W. 180—4 C.J. p 151 note 98.

(5) Order extending term for settling bill of exceptions.—U. S. v. Payne, C.C.A.Wash., 72 F.2d 593.

A bill of exceptions, under the former practice, did not become part of the record on appeal unless it was properly and timely filed, and presented to and signed, allowed, or settled by the trial court.—Glick v. U. S., C.C.A.Ill., 93 F.2d 953—Rieke Metal Products Co. v. Finney, C.C.A. Ind., 70 F.2d 509—St. Joseph Loan & Trust Co. v. Davis, C.C.A.Neb., 291 F. 370—Proctor Coal Co. v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co., Ga., 236 F. 910, 150 C. C.A. 172.

57. U.S.—Felder v. Reeth, C.C.A. Alaska, 62 F.2d 730.

That papers not in the judgment roll are in the transcript and certified by the clerk does not make them any part of the record on appeal where they are not brought into the record in some other way recognized by law.—Duncan v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co., Cal., 72 F. 808, 19 C.C.A. 202.

Instructions do not become a part of the record merely by being spread on the minutes of the court and copied into the record or transcript.—H. M. Byllesby & Co. v. Welch, C.C.A.Mo., 82 F.2d 539—Sternenberg v. Mailhos, Tex., 99 F. 43, 39 C.C.A. 408.

58. U.S.—Royal Petroleum Corporation v. Smith, C.C.A.N.Y., 127 F.2d 841.

59. U.S.—In re Syracuse Stutz Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 55 F.2d 914.

Supp. 225—In re National Public Service Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 68 F.2d 859—In re Syracuse Stutz Co., Inc., C.C.A.N.Y., 55 F.2d 914.

Stenographic reproduction of all argument in court would not be regarded as constituting any part of record on appeal which reviewing court must consider.—In re Adolf Gobel, Inc., C.C.A.N.Y., 80 F.2d 849, reversing, D.C., 12 F.Supp. 225.

61. Prior to this rule

(1) The opinion of the trial court ordinarily was no part of the record in the circuit court of appeals.—American Ins. Co. v. Scheufler, C.C.A. Mo., 129 F.2d 143, affirming, D.C., American Ins. Co. v. Lucas, 38 F. Supp. 896, motion denied 38 F.Supp. 926, appeals dismissed 62 S.Ct. 107, 314 U.S. 575, 86 L.Ed. 466—U. S. v. John II Estate, C.C.A.Hawaii, 91 F.

The opinion may also be included as a part of the record by rule of court,[62] or by the trial judge's adopting of it as his findings of fact and conclusions of law.[63] Under Act of March 3, 1887, c 359 § 7, 28 U.S.C.A. § 764, making it the duty of the court, in a suit against the United States, to cause a written opinion to be filed, setting forth the court's findings and conclusions of law and to render judgment thereon, the opinion is not regarded as the usual opinion of the trial judge, but must be accepted as a part of the record.[64] The opinion, findings, and decision of the lower court, in a prior action, on which a motion for a summary judgment is based, and which are filed with the motion papers, become a part of the record on appeal and should be included in such record.[65]

Stipulations and agreed facts. As a general rule parties cannot, by stipulation, make or add to the record of the court,[66] but may, by stipulation made a part of the record, limit the scope of the review,[67] and under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (f), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, the parties may by stipulation filed with the clerk of the district court designate the parts of the record, proceedings, and evidence to be included in the record on appeal.[68]

Under rule 76, if the questions involved can be determined without an examination of all the pleadings, evidence, and proceedings in the court below, the parties may prepare and sign a statement of the case, which may be approved by the lower court and certified as the record on appeal.[69]

Pleadings. As a general rule, the pleadings in a case constitute a part of the record proper,[70] and this rule applies to an amended pleading which is filed in the court below by leave of such court,[71] and if the pleading is so amended as to change the theory with respect to the cause of the suit the original pleading no longer constitutes a part of the record.[72] Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (g), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, expressly provides that the record shall include the pleadings.

Motions, however, do not constitute a part of the record proper, and, under the practice existing prior to rule 75 a motion and the ruling thereon, unless brought up by bill of exceptions, did not constitute a part of the record in the appellate court.[73]

2d 93, certiorari denied John II Estate v. U. S., 58 S.Ct. 264, 302 U.S. 746, 82 L.Ed. 577—Kelly v. U. S., C.C.A.Wash., 84 F.2d 541, denying rehearing 83 F.2d 783, affirming, D. C., In re Carlisle Packing Co., 12 F. Supp. 11, certiorari granted Kelly v. U. S., 57 S.Ct. 42, 299 U.S. 528, 81 L.Ed. 389, and reversed on other grounds 57 S.Ct. 335, 300 U.S. 50, 81 L.Ed. 507, remanding cause, C.C.A., 90 F.2d 73, certiorari denied 58 S.Ct. 54, 302 U.S. 730, 82 L.Ed. 564—Parker v. St. Sure, C.C.A.Cal., 53 F.2d 706—Hayden v. Ogden Sav. Bank, Utah, 158 F. 90, 85 C.C.A. 558—Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n v. Du Bois, Idaho, 85 F. 586, 29 C.C.A. 354, certiorari denied 19 S.Ct. 886, 171 U.S. 688, 43 L.Ed. 1178—4 C.J. p 102 note 41.

(2) A memorandum opinion was not a part of the record.—North American Loan & Trust Co. v. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co., S.D., 83 F. 796, 28 C.C.A. 88, modifying, C.C., 76 F. 623—4 C.J. p 105 note 58.

(3) The opinion could be made a part of the record by bill of exceptions.—English v. Hetherington & Berner, C.C.A.Ill., 71 F.2d 613—Garth v. Arnold, Mo., 115 F. 468, 53 C.C.A. 200.

A so-called "decision" wherein, following syllabus, trial court indicated nature of proceeding, stated issues, reviewed evidence, discussed and decided questions involved, cited authorities, and stated that judgment would be signed in conformity therewith, was merely "opinion" which was no part of record, and on which error could not be predicated.—U. S. v. Shingle, C.C.A.Hawaii, 91 F.2d 85, certiorari denied Shingle v. U. S., 58 S.Ct. 264, 302 U.S. 746, 82 L.Ed. 577.

67. U.S.—Lydiard-Peterson Co. v. Woodman, Minn., 205 F. 900, 126 C.C.A. 434.

68. A stipulation which was not submitted to the trial court and on which no ruling was made was not a proper part of the record.—The Rethalulew, Official No. 227,860, C.C. A.Cal., 51 F.2d 646—4 C.J. p 119 note 16.

69. Prior to this rule, other matters could be made a part of the record by agreement of the parties.—Eldorado Coal & Mining Co. v. Mariotti, Ill., 215 F. 51, 131 C.C.A. 359.

70. U.S.—Eldorado Coal & Mining Co. v. Mariotti, supra.

An exhibit which is the foundation of the action and which is filed as part of the pleading is a part of the record.—U. S. v. Bell, Pa., 135 F. 336, 68 C.C.A. 144.

Particular motions, not part of record except by bill of exceptions:

Evidence. Evidence introduced at the trial, including documentary evidence,[74] as a general rule is no part of the record unless it is brought therein by some authorized mode,[75] and under the provisions of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 75 (a) – (c), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, this may be done by filing a designation of the portions of the evidence to be contained in the record, see infra subdivision h of this section. Prior to this rule, the evidence did not become a part of the record unless it was made so by bill of exceptions or some substitute therefor,[76] or by stipulation of the parties.[77]

Proceedings on reference. Where the case was referred to a master, the record should contain the report and findings of the master, the exceptions thereto, and the master's certificate of the evidence before him,[78] and under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (g), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, in an action tried without a jury, the master's report, if any, is always to be included in the record transmitted to the appellate court.[79]

Findings of court. Findings of fact and conclusions of law, in a jury waived case, which are signed by the judge become a part of the record proper, and under the former practice, need not have been embodied in a bill of exceptions,[80] and the question of their sufficiency to support the judgment arises without a contemporaneous objection or exception.[81] However, under the provisions of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 52 (a) and 75 (e), only the findings of fact and conclusions of law found by the trial court will be included as part of the record on appeal,[82] and the inclusion of proposed findings and objections thereto in the record is improper.[83]

(1) Motion for dismissal.—Eldorado Coal & Mining Co. v. Mariotti, Ill., 215 F. 51, 131 C.C.A. 359.

(2) Motion for nonsuit.—Copper River & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Reeder, Alaska, 211 F. 280, 127 C.C.A. 648.

(3) Motion for new trial.—Champlin Refining Co. v. Thomas, C.C.A. Okl., 93 F.2d 133—D. K. Jeffris Lumber Co. v. Howard Shipyards & Dock Co., C.C.A.Ind., 295 F. 513.

(4) Motion to make pleading more definite and certain.—Momand v. Paramount Publix Corporation, C.C.A. Okl., 88 F.2d 578—Dietz v. Lymer, C. C.A.Neb., 61 F. 792.

(5) Motion for judgment.—Davis v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 67 F.2d 737.

c. Necessity of Bill of Exceptions

Since the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 46, 75, went into effect, a bill of exceptions is not necessary to bring up a question for review.

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 46, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, which provides that formal exceptions to rulings or orders of the court are unnecessary, and rule 75, which regulates the contents and the manner in which the record, on appeal to a circuit court of appeals, shall be made up, filed, and transmitted, have the effect of abolishing bills of exceptions,[84] and such a bill is therefore no longer necessary to bring up for review, a matter which, under the old practice, otherwise would not have been considered a part of the record.

Former practice. Judicial decisions are listed in the appended notes as to the law, under the former practice in the circuit court of appeals, with respect to a bill of exceptions being unnecessary where the error sought to be remedied was apparent on the record;[85] as to such a bill being necessary where the error, in connection with a ruling or decision of the court was not apparent on, and could not be determined from, the record proper;[86] as to a sub-

Under former practice, before the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure went into effect, a request or motion for findings of fact and conclusions of law was no part of the record, and the purported findings and conclusions could be brought up only by bill of exceptions.—Coggins v. Gregorio, C.C.A.N.M., 97 F.2d 948—Baker Ice Mach. Co. v. Hebert, C.C.A.Neb., 76 F.2d 73—Kolton v. U. S., C.C.A. Colo., 67 F.2d 741—McLeod v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 67 F.2d 740—Greenway v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 67 F.2d 738—Davis v. U. S., C.C.A.Colo., 67 F.2d 737.

84. U.S.—Middleton v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., C.C.A.Tex., 119 F.2d 721.

In equity, Equity Rules, rule 75, 28 U.S.C.A. § 723, which is substantially followed in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75, did not require a bill of exceptions on an appeal in equity, but the appeal came up on the whole record, prepared as provided in Equity Rules, rule 75.—Century Building & Loan Ass'n v. or decree appealed from, or a dismissal of the appeal,[90] unless errors were apparent on the face of the record proper,[91] or the applicable practice required only a duly authenticated record.[92] The rule requiring a bill of exceptions was held not to apply to errors committed by an intermediate appellate court, since if it had erred in its judgment, such error would appear on the record of that court.[93]

d. Contents, Making, and Settlement of Bill of Exceptions

Bills of exceptions, in a circuit court of appeals were, when required, governed by general rules except as such rules had been modified by statutes or rules of court.

Prior to the adoption of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 46 and 75, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, which superseded bills of exceptions, on appeal to a circuit court of appeals, a bill of exceptions in such court, except in so far as controlled by statute or rule of court, was governed by the rules relating to bills of exceptions on appeals in general, as discussed in Appeal and Error §§ 802–909. In the appended notes are decisions which construed and applied the law to bills of exceptions under the former practice,[94] with respect to the origin[95] and office or purpose[96] of a bill of exceptions; and as to its form and completeness;[97] number required;[98] contents in general;[99] incorporation of evidence therein[1] either in condensed and narrative

e. Contents, Making, and Settlement of Statement of Case

Where the questions presented can be determined without an examination of the evidence and proceedings, the parties may prepare and sign an agreed statement of the case to be approved by the court; and, generally, a statement of the evidence, necessary to the decision of the particular errors relied on, should be prepared and settled.

Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 76, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, which has adopted Equity Rules, rule 77, with appropriate modifications,[38] if the questions presented can be determined without an examination of all the pleadings, evidence, and proceedings in the court below, the parties may prepare and sign a statement of the case showing how the questions arose and setting forth as many of the facts as are essential to a decision of the questions by the appellate court.[39] The agreed statement must include a concise statement of the points to be relied on by appellant,[40] and, if it conforms to the truth, it, together with such additions as the court may consider necessary fully to present the questions raised by the appeal, must be approved by the district court,[41] but the filing and approval of the statement must take place while the court below retains jurisdiction of the case.[42]

Statement of evidence. In designating the evidence to be included in the transcript of the record, as explained infra subdivision f of this section, the testimony of witnesses may be designated, under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (c), either in narrative form, or in question and answer form;[43] and a party may prepare and file with his designation a condensed statement in narrative form of all or part of the testimony;[44] if in narrative form, any other party to the appeal, if dissatisfied with the narrative statement, may require the testimony in question and answer form to be substituted for all or a part thereof.[45] If any part of the evi-

45. U.S.—Sonken-Galamba v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., D.C.Mo., 36 F.Supp. 909.

Duty on appellant

Appellant has the duty to comply with designation of appellee, since a thing cannot be "substituted" for something else unless that for which the substitution is made is taken out and that which is substituted is inserted in its place.—Sonken-Galamba v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., supra.

dence has been omitted in the designation by appellant, it is the duty of appellee to prepare and file the omitted parts.[46]

Under Equity Rules, rule 75, 28 U.S.C.A. § 723, which has been substantially embraced in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, § 75, 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, a statement of the evidence to be included in the record, as essential to the matters to be decided on the appeal,[47] was required to be stated in simple and condensed form,[48] and the testimony of witnesses stated in narrative form except that, if either party desired it, and the court or judge so directed, any part of the testimony could be reproduced in the exact words of the witness.[49] The statement was not confined to the testimony of witnesses,[50] and was required to be lodged in the clerk's office for examination by the other parties who should be notified thereof,[51] and presented to the court or judge for allowance, approval, and certification.[52] In approving the statement of evidence, the court or judge was not limited to the term in which the judgment was entered or to an extension thereof,[53] but, where the appellate court enlarged the time for perfecting the appeal by the filing of a return, the district court retained jurisdiction to approve the statement only until the ex-

Manner of incorporating additional parts
The substituted parts of the evidence must be incorporated in the record at the point at which the substitution is to be made, and an additional part of testimony of a given witness, where a part has been narrated, should follow immediately the narration, and additional parts, where there has been no narration, should follow the record as designated by appellant.—Sonken-Galamba v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., supra.

Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., D.C.N.Y., 14 F.Supp. 346, case remanded, C.C.A., 85 F.2d 61.

Consolidation of statements
Where appellee's proposed statement of evidence was not indispensable to decision on appeal, appellee's motions to consolidate statements of appellee and appellant and to vacate trial court's order requiring appellee to defray expense of printing its proposed statement must be denied, although appellee's proposed statement may have materially aided appellate court in consideration of the case.—Phillips v. Governor & Co. of Adventurers of England Trading into Hudson's Bay, C.C.A.Nev., 79 F.2d 971.

Circuit court of appeals could decline to consider evidence when not condensed as required by equity rule.—Trust Co. of Florida v. Gault, C.C.A.Fla., 69 F.2d 133—Sommer v. Rotary Lift Co., C.C.A.Cal., 66 F.2d 809—Moss v. Gilchrist-Fordney Co., C.C.A.Miss., 24 F.2d 931.

Rules as law

This excepting clause was intended to have only a limited operation, and to be applied in the course of the required condensation and narration, as special occasion therefor arose. Its purpose was to provide for the exact reproduction of such parts of the testimony as need to be examined in that form to be rightly appreciated.—Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Standard Asphalt & Rubber Co., Ill., 48 S.Ct. 183, 275 U.S. 372, 72 L.Ed. 318, reversing, C.C.A., 16 F.2d 751, certiorari granted 47 S.Ct. 576, 274 U.S. 728, 71 L.Ed. 1316.

f. Making, Form, and Requisites of Transcript

It is primarily the duty of the appellant to require a transcript of the record, in the court below, to be prepared for the appellate court, which transcript shall contain as much of the matter and proceedings as may be necessary to a review of the alleged errors.

The primary responsibility for preparation of a proper transcript rests on appellant, it being his duty to see that a proper and correct transcript of the record, sufficient to present the questions sought to be reviewed, is brought to the appellate court;[55] and a reasonable degree of care and efficiency should be employed in transcribing the record.[56] By the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (a), 28 U.S.C.A. following § 723c, appellant is required to serve on the appellee and file with the district court a designation of the portions of the record, proceedings, and evidence to be contained in the record on appeal,[57] the designation to be served and filed promptly after the appeal is taken.[58] Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (b), if the trial has been stenographically reported, appellant must file two copies of the reporter's transcript of the evidence or proceedings included in his designation,[59] unless such a transcript is unavailable, as where appellant sues in forma pauperis,[60] in which case a record of the evidence and proceedings may be created by the assent of the parties, or by the order of the judge in settling disputes.[61] If appellant's designation includes only certain portions of the record, proceedings, and evidence, appellee, within ten days thereafter, may properly designate additional portions thereof to be included,[62] and, if the evidence or proceedings have been stenographically reported, appellant must file two copies of such additional parts of the reporter's transcript as appellee may need to enable him to designate and file the parts he desires to have added to the record,[63] and, when so filed, they become a part of the records of the district court.[64] If there is a reporter's transcript, it may be re-

The general rule that appellant must furnish and use a reporter's transcript is subject to a special statutory exception, in 28 U.S.C.A. § 832, of a poor person who cannot obtain such a transcript.—Middleton v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., supra.

The purpose of Fed.Rules of Civ. Proc., rule 75, relating to the record on appeal, "is to insure that enough of the proceedings in the trial court be designated for inclusion, from the standpoint of appellant and appellee, to adequately present on appeal the points of error relied on by appellant."—Keeley v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, C.C.A.Ill., 113 F.2d 633.

Purposes of two copies

One of the copies so filed is for the use of other parties and for use in the appellate court in printing the record. The second of the two copies becomes a permanent "record" in the district court.—Sonken-Galamba v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., supra.

quired to be used by either party, in whole or in part, subject to correction by the judge,[65] but this does not mean that always the entire transcript is or can be required to be used, but only the parts essential to the questions to be decided.[66]

Substantially the same practice obtained under Equity Rules, rule 75, 28 U.S.C.A. § 723, which required appellant to file with the clerk of the court from which the appeal was taken a præcipe indicating the portions of the record to be incorporated in the transcript on appeal,[67] and it was the duty of the clerk to follow the præcipe as to the portions of the papers and proceedings to be returned.[68] If a præcipe was not filed, it was the clerk's duty to make out and certify a complete transcript of everything necessary to the hearing in the appellate court,[69] and, if he was in doubt as to what papers were required, he could properly demand a præcipe from appellant.[70]

Statement of points relied on. Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 75 (d), if appellant does not designate the complete record and all the proceedings and evidence in the case, he must serve with his designation a concise statement of the points on which he intends to rely on the appeal;[71] otherwise no question is raised for review.[72]
